FLED FOR THEIR LIVES.

The Employes of the Elizabeth Cordage Works Escape from the Burning Building.

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 19.—The Elizabeth Cordage Works, the second largest industry in Elizabeth, were destroyed by fire during the afternoon.

Six hundred people were employed in the works, 250 of whom were females. When the alarm of fire was given there was a mad rush for the doors. The men and the girls tumbled down stairs in confusion, some being trampled under foot. So far as known, they all got out safely, with the exception of a few scratches and bruises.

The plant was established here in 1840. There were two large and half a dozen small buildings, all brick. The plant was worth $600,000. The works belonged to the National Cordage Company, and were the largest ropemaking works in the United States.

There were wild rumors of loss of life, but Superintendent Williams says that all the operatives had plenty of time to escape. The works were insured.

Burned to Death in a Tenement Fire.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Fire swept through the five-story brick tenement, No. 37 Allen street, at 3 a. m. A father and two daughters were burned to death. Their names were: Bernard Jasper, 50 years old; Sarah and Betsy Jasper, aged 19 and 13. Their bodies were burned almost beyond recognition and were taken to the morgue. Several persons were injured. Minnie Jasper, 56 years old, was terribly burned. Abraham S. Goldstein a baby, was thrown from a third-story window to the sidewalk and received internal injuries. Henry Jasper, 19 years old, was slightly burned on the hands. There were many thrilling rescues. The people had no time to save any of their effects, and rushed to the fire-escapes in their night clothes.

—"Dunellen"—remarks the New York Continent—"is in a State of unusual events. That is, it is in New Jersey. The latest freak of the spirit of mischief in Dunellen is the introduction of a pistol cartridge into the pipe of William Webber. When William smoked the pipe the cartridge exploded, and now he is looking for three teeth, a clay pipe, and a lock of his baby's hair."

PARTICULAR MENTION.

John Wilson Young is still unconscious at the Muhlenberg Hospital, and is growing weaker.

Trustee Thomas has been re-elected in the Dunellen School District. The sum of $2,500 was appropriated for school purposes.

No Abbett-McPherson Feud.

George M. Smith contributes a long article to the last number of The Epoch about Senator McPherson. It is largely complimentary in its nature, but here is a section of it intended possibly for the edification of Jerseymen: "Many persons have been led to believe that an undying feud exists between Mr. McPherson and Leon Abbett, the brilliant Governor of New Jersey. This is a mistake. It is true that in the Democracy of the State there are two factions, one of which is perfectly organized with competent leaders in the especial interest of Senator McPherson, while the other recognizes the Governor as its head. To say that these facts are inimical, or that their chiefs are other than fellow-Democrats, is an unwarrantable statement. Indeed, it may be declared with authority that when the term of Rufus Blodgett expires Mr. Abbett will be allowed to attain his ambition of going to the United States Senate, and Mr. McPherson will not put so much as a straw in his way."

Joseph Snyder's Suicide.

Further particulars of the terrible suicide of Joseph Snyder, which was reported exclusively in THE PRESS of yesterday, state that Snyder committed the awful deed while his wife was away at Somerville. He was so frightfully mangled by the exploding gun that recognition was almost impossible. The frozen body was found on the ground between the house and barn by Thomas VanMiddlebush of Bound Brook. The concussion of the discharge had driven the gun into the ground. Snyder was a huckster by occupation. A son, Lewis, formerly of Somerville, is a grocer on West Fourth street this city. The funeral took place Monday afternoon, and interment was made in the Mountain View Cemetery. Deceased was 48 years of age, and leaves a wife and five children.

STOPPED BY HIGHER POWER.

CORPORATION COUNSEL MARSH EQUAL TO THE EMERGENCY.

The Supreme Court Says That the Plainfield Water Supply Company Can Lay a Short Line of Pipe to the Brook, But No More.

When the Plainfield Water Supply Company went on digging up the streets in defiance of the city, its authorities and ordinances, some people thought Corporation Counsel Marsh would not be equal to the emergency.

But he got the city what he went after at Trenton, yesterday. The writ obtained by the Water Company a few days ago tied up the city so that it could not arrest the Water Company's employes should the latter attempt the further digging up of the streets.

At Corporation Counsel Marsh's request Judge VanSickel has granted an order that the writ previously granted "shall not operate as a supersedeas to the ordinance certified, until the further order of the Supreme Court, except so far as it prohibits the laying of pipes from the pumping station of the Water Company to the brook near Netherwood station". The meaning of this is that the Water Company can run a line of pipe along an unfrequented street from its pumping station to Cedar brook, and then it must stop until further order of the Court or be liable to prosecution under the city ordinances.

The idea of the court in permitting the pipes to Cedar brook was to enable the Company to test the capacity of its works. The Court was of the opinion that no inconvenience would be suffered by the city from the laying of that short line of pipe in a street so little used.

Leave was granted also to argue the case at the present term of the Supreme Court with a view of obtaining a decision as early as possible.

As far as THE PRESS has been able to learn, no one objects to the Water Company supplying Cedar brook with water, and that is all that they can do now until the Supreme Court makes some different order from that obtained by the city yesterday.

America's Most Valuable Herd for Sale.

Somerset county may soon lose the magnificent herd of Holstein-Friesian cattle now on the stock farm of Senator John R. McPherson at Belle Meade. The animals, which belong jointly to the Senator and his farmer ex-Assemblyman, Jacob Klotz, have been advertised for sale. The Belle Meade farm will also be sold. Among the Holsteins is the celebrated herd of thirty-four cows which was selected by the Board of Directors of the Friesian Herd Association, of Holland, for exhibition at the English Royal Agricultural Society's show at Windsor in June, 1889, in competition with the English dairy breeds. After the exhibition Senator McPherson bought the herd and imported it. It is considered the most valuable herd in America.

Mr. Reed's Heirs Lose Their Suit.

A case that is of interest to the holders of accident insurance policies was decided yesterday in the Court of Common Pleas, before Judge Bookstaver. John Herbert Reed, who was a partner of Martin I Cooley, of North Plainfield, was insured for $5,000 in the Traders' and Travelers' Accident Insurance Company. He was thrown from his carriage and fell on his head, on October 31, 1888. A few days later, as he was walking down Broadway, he dropped dead.

His heirs claimed that his death was the result of injuries received in the accident. The company contended that death was due to a complication of diseases, and the jury gave a verdict in favor of the company.

Taking Water on the Fly.

The fast trains of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad between Philadelphia and New York are now enabled to make the run without stopping for water or to change engines at Bound Brook, either of which was heretofore necessary.

Tanks or troughs 1,500 feet in length have been completed near Plainfield, and also on the bridge crossing the Delaware River at Yardley, which enables the locomotives to scoop up a fresh supply of water while running at full speed. Steam pipes are laid on each side of the troughs to prevent the water from freezing in cold weather. The change will effect a saving of about five minutes in the running time between the two cities.

Principal Oley Doubles His Salary.

Charles W. Oley has resigned as principal of the Dunellen public school, to accept a position in another city, where his present salary of $800 will be doubled. His place at Dunellen will be filled by Mr. Roberts of South Plainfield, who will assume charge of the school about April 1. Miss Lizzie Laing, of the Dunellen primary department, has also resigned, and will leave the first of April.

Donations to the Children's Home.

At the March meeting of the board of officers of the Children's Home, the treasurer reported donations of $100 from the Pyramus and Thisbe Club, $47.54 from Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, and $52.87 from a "child's fair" held by Miss Helen Brainerd, of East Front street, and nine of her friends.

THE MULE IS N'T IN IT.

Even the Doubting "Patriarch" Has Been Fully Converted to the Trolley System that Plainfield is to Have, and is Rapturous Over It Where Once He Was Scornful.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Of course I was utterly annihilated by the caustic remarks of "Pro Bono Publico" anent my small contribution to another paper in relation to the trolley system. There is no argument more convincing than to call your adversary a mule. It warms the cockles of his heart toward you, and opens the way for his conversion to your side of the case.

However, I forgive him. His only crime, doubtless, and one which, let us hope, he will outgrow, is his youth.

But a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver. Mr. Goddard's fair and able letter in Tuesday's PRESS carried the weight which the arguments of an expert always will when presented in such a rational manner. If citizens of his calibre, who know whereof they speak, would always come forward when the people are agitated over some momentous question, their testimony would be "pro bono publico."

Even he, however, does not defend the unsightliness of the trolley system; and isn't he rather severe on the newspaper reporters? Doubtless he mentally excepted those of THE PRESS.

All of which is introductory to saying that, acting upon your advice, Mr. Editor, addressed rather irreverently to "old man," to go and inspect the Newark Rapid Transit Road, I have done so.

I had the honor of accompanying the Mayor, several members of the Common Council, and other distinguished citizens. We inspected the road and all the paraphernalia of the "power house," thanks to the courtesy of the Messrs. Nevins; and as you prophesied and as I intimated might be the case, I have deserted my friend, the patient and pathetic mule!

Let him go hang!

He is not in it!

The Newark road makes a circuit of five miles at the average rate of ten miles per hour. The rate is lower through the crowded parts of the city, and higher in the outskirts. The cost of construction in Newark was $80,000 per mile of double track. In Plainfield it will be about $40,000. These figures, of course, include the cost of the power house, containing, in the Newark plant, two 250 horse power Corliss engines, with the necessary boilers, dynamos, etc.

The lower cost of construction in Plainfield will be due to the fact that only a part of the road will be double-track, and, also, to the fact that to run cars on our level streets will require less power.

The cars, which are made by the Pullman Company, are very handsome, and seat twenty-four persons comfortably. They cost $5,000 each, $3,000 of which represents the cost of the electrical equipment.

The other members of the party being "public" men will, at the proper time, render their own verdict. I am not authorized to speak for them, but I think I will not be accused of "giving anything away" when I say that the general impression made was a favorable one.

Like a somewhat greater man, long since defunct, "I cannot tell a lie": hence, I cannot say that the unsightliness of the structure is entirely obliterated, but it is certainly reduced to a minimum.

As for the noise:—by means of cogs covered with raw-hide, the fearful racket of the trolley of "yesterday" is reduced in the trolley of "to-day" to a low, sweet song of somnolent effect! Doubtless Plainfield mothers with cantankerous infants, (if Plainfield infants ever are cantankerous), will crowd the cars if only to have their cherubs lulled to sleep by the dulcet whir-r-r of the raw-hide cog!

Just as I close this letter, THE PRESS arrives, with a communication from Lemuel William Serrell in which he says that the trolley of to-morrow, or rather, "three months hence, will be absolutely noiseless."

We can wait three months, but the trolley of "to-day" is quiet enough for me.

I observe, also, that Mr. Serrell makes some remarks in regard to anonymous communications. Now, Lemuel William has not all the modesty in the world! He has much, I know; but there are others who have even more of that sweet-scented flower! Hence their desire to hide blushingly behind a nom-de-plume. Moreover, this self-same modesty causes them to doubt whether an argument will be a better argument, or a truth a greater truth, because appearing over their individual and personal names. However, lest he should follow the precedent he quotes and bring an action for "anonymous communication", I will in this instance, and with your permission, subscribe myself,

Yours truly,
THOS. S. BURR,
"The Patriarch".

Go, Get Your Hair Weighed.

While it is no uncommon occurrence to see articles weighed, it is very unusual to have the opportunity of seeing so light a substance weighed as the hair of a person's head or a lead pencil mark.

Franklin S. Smith will give a very practical explanation of the system of weights and weighing, at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night, and will bring with him a very valuable pair of chemist's scales. The admission will be free.

Hires' Root Beer is essentially a temperance drink, and, as such, ought to find a place in every larder in the land. It is so cheap too. A 25 cent package makes five gallons.

THE MAJORITY FAVOR IT.

People All Along the Line Are Clamoring for the Electric Railroad Which Other Cities Like So Well, Which Has Brought Prosperity Wherever It Has Been Introduced, and Which Faithfully Promises So Much for Plainfield.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Another paper, in making "some revelations about the signatures" for the street railway, has either been misinformed or wilfully misrepresents the facts. It seeks to create the impression that deception was used, and that the names given for one system of road were to be used in a petition for another. This is untrue.

But this is not the only misstatement which has been industriously circulated. We have heard considerable about the "deadly trolley", when it is a well-known fact that the trolley system, now in use all over the country, from Maine to Texas, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, is not fraught with danger at all, but has less accidents than occur when horse cars are used. If the people living and owning property along the route of this proposed road believe this foolishness about a "deadly trolley", and signed the petition under a misapprehension of the facts, why do not these malcontents get a protest signed? It would be the easiest and most effectual way of giving the enterprise its quietus. People who so loudly proclaim their purpose to "fight in court" ought to have some stock in trade besides idle vaporing and misrepresentation. It cannot be expected that the people will be greatly charmed by the threats of two or three gentlemen who regard themselves as a little world in themselves, while the rest of mankind are only small planets revolving around them.

The people were never before called on to decide for or against the trolley system. At the time Mr. Daft proposed to introduce an electrical road, it was supposed that the storage-battery system had been successfully applied to railway locomotion. It is now well known that it is not only not a success, but that there is no very definite prospect of its becoming one. It has, at least, a far-away look, and may be relegated to some sequestered spot where under the umbrageous foliage of moss-covered trees the "hay-seeds" may be lulled to sleep by the refrain which is wafted to us from the foothills of the Blue Ridge—"Go Slow!"

"But it makes so much noise," we are told. And to prove it these very fair-minded gentlemen will go to a city of hills and very steep grades, where, as a consequence, more energy and more voltage are required, and hence more friction and noise result. It is a well-known fact that the trolley system has been greatly improved since the Albany, Richmond, Asbury Park, and other roads, were built, and with the later improvements there is no more noise than with an ordinary horse car—if, indeed, as much. In a level city like Plainfield there will be no trouble of this kind.

Thus far all the various attacks on this much-needed improvement for the public good seem to be rockets let off from one of the club cars, and, singularly enough, they emanate from the same car. This will explain the kindly interest manifested from Scotch Plains to Grant avenue, by people who have no property interest at stake, but who are persuaded to give a coterie of sore-heads a lift in their effort to defeat the will of the great majority of people who live along the preposed route of its road and who need its convenience and can not afford to ride in a club car.

The gentlemen most active in the opposition to this great and much-needed improvement have informed us repeatedly that we should have no road at all. We should not have horse cars. We should not have the storage-battery. We shall not have the trolley. They are anxious to have us investigate for some months to convince ourselves that we have the best system in vogue. They want a commission appointed, consisting of one in favor of the road and two opposed to it. And, last of all, finding that the people of Plainfield are not of the kind that try to catch birds by sprinkling salt on their tails, they make the earth tremble as they announce their terrible purpose to fight the city in the Courts.

I am sure, Mr. Editor, that I do not exaggerate when I say that fully seventy-five per cent. of the people along this route are in favor of the proposed road. They are people of intelligence, thoroughly comprehending the various systems of surface railway locomotion; they fully understand the purpose of the petitions presented to them for their signatures, and they are in no mood now to be befogged or befooled with propositions that they know to be based on deception and tomfoolery.

Progression follows in the wake of every electrical road; property values increase; population multiplies; store-keepers prosper, and laborers become thrifty; and the comfort and convenience of the people are subserved. There are other numerous advantages which might be mentioned—all of them far too important to be overlooked or set aside in order that a few very respectable gentlemen may not be obliged to witness their fellow-citizens riding along the same thoroughfares in their less pretentious equipages, the street cars.

TWEEDLEDUM AND TWEEDLEDEE.

If the Selfish Clique is Sincere in Wanting Plainfield to Do Without Rapid Transit, Why Not Abolish Street Lights, Butcher's Carts, Railway Trains, Street Traffic and Modern Improvements of Every Kind, and Return Altogether to Barbaric Methods?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—John Freeman, an eighteen-year-old clerk, met his death Thursday evening, March 12, by coming in contact with the electric dynamo used to plate silver spoons in the offices of Meilville, Strong & Co., manufacturers of silverware at No. East Thirteenth street, New York.

According to this, it seems that the most harmless of utensils may be responsible for the most shocking results; and not only in the case of spoons, but silver thimbles, napkin rings and even the ubiquitous Waterbury watch may be dangerous to trifle with. Let us, then, banish from our presence all these follies, which may be attended with deadly conclusions. But we should not be satisfied with simply lopping off the branches of this deadly upas tree, but should strike boldly at the root. If the dynamo for the spoon and thimble is dangerous, it is equally so when supplying light for our stores, houses, streets, Casino and Music Hall. Let us touch not, taste not, handle not, any of these silver-tipped follies. In order to be rid of another danger, a petition demanding that the Central Railroad should stop its trains, ought not only to be drawn up but unanimously signed, because hundreds of horses are frightened annually, and in one case at least, it resulted fatally. 'Tis true it was only a farmer—yet he belonged to the class that keep horses. He was innocently loading lumber, when his horses, startled by a passing train, flung him nearly through a drug store window; and, notwithstanding this considerate action on the part of the horse, the man died.

Then our tradesmen should abandon horses and wagons and deliver their goods in push carts; and the "leading citizens" (from Morrisania) should walk to and from the station, on account of the danger to pedestrians from the flying hacks and the rushing cart; although the butchers say it is not "meet" to blame them, because people want their goods delivered in a hurry. This certainly seems indicative of a desire to rush some things.

But, (like Artemus Ward in "Babes in the Wood", whom he hardly mentions,) let us return to the electric railroad. If the objections raised against it are valid, all of the foregoing sources of danger should be banished from Plainfield; that is, if said objections are honest. "Pro bono publico" said in his Glorious Epistle, "the obstructionists were equally noisy and sly in opposing any kind of a street railway at any time." The people have fully as much right to complain of the obstructionists riding in horse carriages, because some ignorant insolent Jehus block up the crosswalk in front of stores and the post office, and then grin when pedestrians (who are fools enough) have to walk in the mud. For you can find mud even in our beautiful streets.

We go into raptures over Stepniak, and discuss profoundly and indignantly the sufferings of the Siberian exiles, but display either ignorance of the causes of nihilism, or hypocrisy in sympathizing with the sufferers from Russian tyranny. What caused the Reign of Terror and Nihilism and Communism? Nothing but the indifference and injustice of the few, concerning the welfare of many. If the words of Stepniak cause eyes to moisten, and hearts beat quicker when the people are listening to his tale of woe, how can we justify ourselves when rolling along in our carriages, we calmly contemplate the Plainfield exile painfully plodding through the mud. Perhaps we think to even it up by thanking God that we are not as other men, when making our contribution on Hospital Sunday, for the benefit of some suffering lineman, shocked by the wire which furnished our brilliant light for a party or masquerade! The "trolley" is a shocking thing—deadly, "diabolically atrocious:" the electric light—bless you!—innocent and harmless as the babe unborn; every family should have one. The first is the poor man's necessity; the second the rich man's luxury. In actual fact, the difference is the same as between "tweedledum and tweedledee"; but from the obstructionists' observatory, "wide as the poles apart"—(not telegraph poles).

I am no sympathizer with Nihilism or Communism; neither can flourish here; but if you will refresh your mind with the conduct of the ruling classes in France for two hundred years prior to the reign of Louis the Sixteenth, you will find the leaven that produced the Reign of Terror. Study the methods of government in Russia, present and past, and you will not wonder that Nihilism stalks abroad. If this country is to be free from similar evils it will be due to the fact that our free institutions and free speech enable the agitators to blow off their opinions publicly and frequently, and not because of the thoughtful consideration or tender mercies of trusts, monopolies and exclusive rings.

FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

A TRIP TO BUNLAND.

Little Nell'd been "helping mamma." She had swept the porch and hall,
And had got so tired and hungry that she sat down by the wall,
Just to rest herself a moment, with her broom across her knee;
When a strange thing happened to her, as she tells the tale to me:

She just shut her eyes a moment, so her little story runs,
When she went away to somewhere, where the children gather buns;
They were growing on the bushes, and were hanging from the trees,
Sweet enough to tempt the palate of the honey-loving bees.

"O, they was the very goodest buns that ever was," says she,
And she smacks her lips, remembering, as she tells the tale to me,
How she ate in that strange country that's hot down on any map,
Bun-fruit from the roadside bushes, when they thought she took a nap.

There were lots and lots of children in this very pleasant place,
And it seemed that all were hungry, and, as happened in her case,
They had come there without knowing how they came, but all agreed
'Twas a most delightful country—quite like fairy-land, indeed.

Such a jolly, jolly country, where they played the nicest games,
And the children knew each other, though they couldn't tell their names;
"Best the bestest place that ever I was in," says little Nell;
"And the buns—O, my!" Words fail her when their sweetness she would tell.

"How did you get back from Bun-land?" Grandma asks, with laughing eye,
As she listens to the story; "Did you walk, or ride, or fly?"
"I don't knowy," is Nellie's answer, with a puzzled face and air;
"I turn back all in a minnit, but I know that I was there."

"Pshaw, you dreamed it," says her brother, "for I saw you fast asleep
On the steps." But "No," says Nellie, with a faith she means to keep
In that pleasant, pleasant country where the buns on bushes grow;
"I'm sure that I went somewhere, an' I didn't dream, I know."

GLOSSY'S PRISON CELL.

Story of the Twins, Their Pretty Little Dog and a Cruel Boy.

Ebenezer and Hepsabina were twins. Backs towards you, or faces down, they did not look much alike, but that was because one was a boy and the other a girl.

The fact is they were alike in their likes and dislikes, and were together almost as constantly as the Siamese twins. They always held everything in common, just as they did their papa. Mamma went away when they came, and the poor papa was almost heart-broken.

The neighbors all knew he was too poor to hire a nurse for the babies, so the mothers of the neighborhood planned to look after the twins daytimes, leaving them for the hard-worked but faithful father to care for nights.

So they grew till they could run around, and knew enough to do pretty well without anyone to stay with them through the day.

So it was that when a doll was given to them it was given to both, a rattle was rattled by both, a whistle was whistled by both, and a stick of candy was divided between them.

One very happy day was that on which the father brought home for his "babies" a precious little present.

A kind lady for whom he worked, asking after his family, was much interested when she learned that he had two little motherless ones. As he was about to start for home after his day's work was done, Mrs. Tenderheart handed him a big basket and asked him to take it with him, then she gave him a little basket, and asked him to give that to the babies, "with her love."

The big basket had many nice things in it—nice enough to have made these little folks wild with delight, if it had not been for the little basket and what was in it.

This took their attention from everything else so completely that they could hardly stop to eat a pretty little bowl full of ice cream, which you know would not keep.

What was in the little basket? Why, the prettiest, silkiest, sweetest, cunningest little puppy that anybody ever saw.

It could play, and make little bits of barks, and hear every word you said, though I suppose it could not understand it all.

How could they leave it and stop to eat when it had not even been named yet? Mrs. Tenderheart had not sent the name with the dog.

How they loved this little fellow! And he seemed to love them almost as much.

He ate with them, slept with them, played with them and grew up with them.

I do not know why there should be any bad boys, do you? yet there are some, here and there.

Ebenezer and Hepsabina had a neighbor, a boy a little older and much larger than they. This boy, Sam—that was his name—came along one day and stopped to look at Glossy, the little dog. Then he began to tease.

First he threatened to shear the dog, then to cut his ears off, and finally ran with him a little way, then forced him through the grate in the sidewalk, where he fell upon a pile of coal, a little hurt, much frightened, and lay there begging as best he could for his master and mistress to help him out.

They understood his plea, but all little Ebenezer could do was to thrust his hand down as far as his short arm could reach and try to comfort the prisoner.

"Poor little fellow!" they said, "He hasn't done any thing to be put in prison for," and then they both joined Glossy in a good cry, all this did not help the case in the least.

But these twins were true and faithful to their little friend. It was some time in the forenoon when Sam put him through the grate, and never did they leave the spot till their father came home again after his day's work and found them there.

Even then they could not bear to go since until their father found the owner of the cellar and got the key to the prison; then all went home very happy—much happier, I think, than Sam.—Pansy.

AN AWFUL PUNISHMENT.

Grandma's Story of What Too Much Molasses Did for a Little Boy.

"Do not eat very much sirup, Kitty; it is not good for you," said Kitty's mamma one day at luncheon.

"I knew a little boy once," said Grandma, "whose love for sweet things led him into trouble."

"Papa?" asked Kitty, looking up quickly.

"Yes, papa," said Grandma.

"Tell me," said Kitty, laying down her fork.

"Very well; go on with your luncheon, and I will tell you the story," said Grandma.

"Your papa was very fond of molasses, Kitty, and one day he made up his naughty little mind to have, for once, all he wanted. We missed him suddenly, but were quite sure he had not gone out of the house, so we began to search the rooms.

"I do not know how long we hunted, but finally I went into the spare room, and as I opened the door the first thing I saw was a stream of molasses creeping from under the bed. The beds were not at all like the beds of these days, Kitty, but very high, so high that sometimes we were obliged to have steps to climb into them; and around the bed, down to the floor, hung a full curtain which was called a valance.

"I ran quickly, and throwing up the valance I discovered Henry, sitting on the floor, with a whole loaf of bread in his lap, while in his hand he held a large jug of molasses, and he was pouring the molasses over the bread, never noticing that it ran off as quickly as he poured it on.

"He seemed to be enjoying himself very much, and looked up when he heard me, with a sweet, sickly smile, though he must have known that he was doing wrong, or he would not have gone away under the bed.

"But I think he soon felt certain that it did not pay," continued Grandma, looking at mamma with a queer little twinkle in her eyes, "for he did not have a drop of molasses or a grain of sugar, or anything sweet, for a whole week; and that was a very terrible punishment—at least Kitty's papa thought so."

Kitty turned her eyes away from the sirup jug with a little sigh.

"Yes," she said, "that was an awful punishment."

"But it taught him so well, Kitty, that he never took molasses or anything else without first asking me, and you know that is a very important lesson for a little child to learn."

Kitty nodded rather solemnly, and then, looking up into Grandma's face, she said: "I guess, Grandma, that was a little preachment for me."

"Well, perhaps it was," said Grandma, smiling.

And do you know, I think Kitty learned a lesson from the molasses story, for after that she was much more careful about asking for things she wanted.—Annie L. Hannah, in Little Men and Women.

THE FACE OF LIBERTY.

Who the Model for the Beautiful Features That Are Seen Every Day Was.

In the early part of the year 1876 the Treasury department of the United States secured the services of a young Englishman by the name of Morgan as designer and engraver for the Philadelphia mint, and he was set at work to prepare a design for the Bland dollar about to be issued. The eagle was worked out first, but the figure was afterward reduced in size and the wings clipped, the latter giving rise to much adverse criticism. The great American eagle, bird of freedom, with his wings clipped!

While engaged in this work Mr. Morgan visited various art institutions to obtain a correct idea of American beauty, as he wished to produce upon the coin a representative female head. He tried ideal heads at first, but the result was not satisfactory, and he was determined to find if possible an American girl who would sit for her portrait. This was by no means an easy matter, and it was not until after many discouragements that he found the face he wanted. The next thing was to get the consent of the young lady, who was a teacher in a public institution in the city. An artist friend gave the introduction, and after much persuasion, with great reluctance, the young lady consented, and gave the desired sittings, first exacting a promise of entire secrecy; only her immediate family, Mr. Morgan and the artist friend were to know anything about the matter. The profile was pronounced to be perfect, the nose straight, lips firm yet delicate, the chin beautifully rounded.

The arrangement of the hair and Liberty cap were of course fanciful, and not even intimate friends would associate the Liberty face on the dollar with the young teacher without first having their attention called to the subject.

All went well with the secret for two years, when at last the reporters, who had in some way learned that a Philadelphia young lady had distinguished herself, ferreted out the whole affair, and the facts were published to the world, giving name and residence of the owner of the "most perfect profile in England and America."

Then began a series of persecutions which the unfortunate model endured for many a day. The house was besieged by reporters, offers of marriage came pouring in by mail, photographers and artists offered great inducements for a sitting, and her school became an object of intense interest to visitors. To a modest young lady all this was very annoying, to say the least; but what could she do? She had no protection from publicity, and was obliged to bear it as best she could.

That she has character as well as a fine profile may be inferred from the fact that popularity does not turn her head. To-day she holds a prominent position as teacher in normal kindergarten work in Philadelphia, while her picture is carelessly passed from hand to hand hundreds of times daily. —Wide Awake.

A BRAVE GIRL.

What She Did to Save "the Boys," But Mostly for Jack's Sake.

[Written for This Paper.]

THE FOLLOWING story was told me by my old friend, Captain Reed. It is a romance of the frontier post where he was once stationed. I give it in his own words:

Hunter Greet's daughter was the pet of the post, if I may put it that way. At the time I am telling you of, she was just past sweet sixteen.

She would ride over from her home, a little distance from the post, with her brother or father, and it would have done you good to see her. She could ride her calico pony, a four-footed piece of chain-lightning, like a Comanche; and she was mighty pretty, too.

Her form was lithe and graceful as a panther's, while her eyes were dark brown and full of sparkle. She was a splendid specimen of western young womanhood. I can see her now in picturesque buck-skin garb, riding that cranky little calico pony.

One of my men, Jack Bently by name, lost his heart to her incontinently from the first. He was a strong, handsome fellow, and I wished to see him succeed in his love affair, but he was so terribly bashful that I had doubts as to his doing so. I am sure that I was the only person in the post that suspected his infatuation, so oddly did he act when Vi—that was the abbreviation of her first name and the one she went by—was at the post.

He would stay in the background, and, I know, suffered torture to see the rest of us laughing and chatting with her. I often thought I would do him a good turn by speaking a word for him to the little prairie fairy, but, somehow, I never did.

He got into a quarrel with one of our men one day after one of Vi's visits; and, I am certain, all on account of the fellow giving her a trifling present.

He was a brave man. He came out ahead in several tussles with the Sioux that now and then bothered us, besides besting two grizzles with nothing except his bowie one day; but when it came to facing Vi's bright eyes, his courage left him.

Six months passed. At the end of this time he was no bolder than at the beginning. In fact his timidity in her presence grew on him. His was a queer case. He did not even have the courage to exchange a word with her when she was at the post.

One day I was on the point of sending for him and remonstrating with him about his diffidence. I had called my stable boy to be my messenger when an interruption occurred.

One of the post's two Indian scouts presented himself at my quarters. He brought a startling message. It was in effect that Red Hand, a treacherous Sioux, who, with some fifty braves, had been camped about ten miles from the post, had dug up the hatchet, and was leading his party upon the houses of the two settlers living just beyond the wooded and rocky section at the west.

Jack Bently passed my quarters just at that moment, and I sang out to him to get the men mounted and ready to start as quickly as possible, telling him of the Sioux movement. He hurried off and, in ten minutes, all the men were mounted, bristling with arms, in front of my door, ready for the start.

We galloped out of the post at mad haste, the Indian scout in the lead. No doubt entered my mind, or, I think, that of any of my men, that the message was a vile fabrication and that the Indian was—as it turned out—leading us into an ambush. He had always been a trusted scout. We put spurs to our mounts and dashed along at breakneck speed. Our best time would have to be made at the first and last of the run as there was a deep pass in a ravine ahead where we would be forced to rein in a little.

As I watched Jack Bently's great form rise and fall with his mount, as if he and it were one, and admired his strong, determined pace, I could not help wishing I had in some way brought things to a happy end in his love affair with Vi. He was a superb horseman; a splendid soldier.

I wondered if the little wild flower knew of the love this silent fellow had for her. She had never appeared to be conscious of it.

He might be going to his death. She might never know it.

We raised a cloud of dust as we tore on. Our horses were of superb metal. Mine had carried me on many a run for life.

"Won't we make it hot for 'em?" cried one of my men, as he rode by my side. Poor fellow, he was one of the first to lose his life that day through our scout's treachery.

In an incredibly short time we covered the first seven miles of the run—the level part—when the entrance to the long ravine was reached. It was winding and precipitous. The great walls of rock rose almost perpendicularly on either side, and, at some places, the branches of the trees above met over our heads, making it a picturesque, though gloomy place.

Red Hand, the Sioux, could not have selected a better place for his fiendish plot.

The day was a cloudy one, so the cut was even darker than usual.

We sent the gravel flying as we rode down the narrow trail. The traitor scout was ahead, I next, Jack Bently at my side, and the rest of my boys were a couple of horses' lengths behind. The hoofs of our mounts made the echoes ring as they beat the ravine's rocky bottom. It was a wonder none of the gallant steeds fell, we urged them on so recklessly.

Half a mile ahead was an abrupt turn in the way. Soon we neared it. Then we met with a surprise that made us pull our horses back upon their haunches.

Around the corner of the wall of rock ahead at lightning speed dashed Vi, the hunter's daughter.

Her head was bowed down, her hair streaming out behind, and she was urging her calico pony recklessly on. Brave, dashing girl!

A volley of shots were fired after her and the war whoop of the Sioux rang throughout the pass. It was a startling moment.

That little woman had learned of the plan to massacre us and had come to warn and save us. One of her friends, an Indian maiden, had told her of it.

It was late when she learned of the ambush; so late that every minute had been precious.

Her father and brother were away from home at the time, and she did not dare to waste an instant in searching for them.

There was only one way, too, of reaching us in time—the way directly through the ambush. Think of what she did!

Mounted on her pony she had dashed right through the death-bordered ravine—right through Red Hand's ambush!

Our scout, as I have said, was ahead of us. As she neared him, he struck at her with his tomahawk.

"The Indians are 'round the corner, boys," I cried. "Take cover and fight!" As I spoke I covered the treacherous redskin with a revolver, and, simultaneously with Jack Bently, pulled trigger.

I do not think I ever saw an Indian fall with so much satisfaction in my life before.

Vi's mount staggered and went down as she neared us, yet she never reached the ground. I saw Jack Bently's strong arm lift her from the saddle just in time, and bear her to cover behind a great bowlder. He did not hang back in that emergency. Blood was coming from several wounds on her; one over her right temple. I saw it, and so did Jack.

Then the Indians demanded all my attention. They swarmed around the turn in the trail. Red Hand did not hang back; he forgot in the front of his bloodthirsty gang. One of his bullets felled one of my boys at my side.

The powder smoke hung low in the damp ravine. Pandemonium reigned there. Like hadean imps the Sioux glided about in the uncertain light. Their whoops were almost deafening. The devils outnumbered us three to one.

Red Hand seemed to bear a charmed life. He was worse than ten of his braves. But this was destined to be his last fight. He fell, ere long, I think, from one of Jack Bently's bullets.

After he received his quietus we had things our own way. He was the life of his men. When they saw him drop they fled. Thanks to little Vi, we were the victors. If we had ridden into the ambush I doubt whether one of us would have escaped. It was only her surprising the Indians by riding through from the other direction that enabled her to get to the turn before they fired upon her.

I sent my men after the flying Sioux and went to the bowlder where Jack Bently had taken the brave girl.

She was not unconscious, and her head was in his lap, her eyes lifted to his.

"I did it," I heard her say, "to save the boys, but mostly you, Jack. I knowed all along you loved me."

You should have seen the look that came into Jack Bently's handsome face. At last they understood each other.

He pressed her little bleeding form to his breast, and then blushed scarlet as he saw me.

"Captain," he said, "she's hit hard, but you can pull her through?"

It meant I must pull her through.

As the cracking of rifles sounded down the ravine I examined her wounds. There were five of them.

Jack Bently was watching me intently all the time. Blood was flowing from an ugly wound in his shoulder, yet I do not think he noticed it in his anxiety for Vi.

"You can?" he asked again.

Fortunately the wounds were not serious.

"Yes," I returned. "In two weeks she will be all right!"

A DRAMATIC SCENE

Sensational Ending of the Miller Murder Trial.

LINGO'S CASE GOES TO THE JURY.

To Produce an Effect Counsel for the Prisoner Cuts Himself With a Razor.

The Negro Ties Up the Gaping Wound—An Intimation from the Defence that Mrs. Miller Was Killed by Her Sister and Her Husband—A Verdict Expected To-night—Great Excitement at Camden.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 20.—The last words have been spoken in the Miller murder trial, and it is believed that Lingo will know his fate before he retires for another night's rest.

Mr. Westcott's speech was very brilliant. In the course of his argument he handled the razor with which the crime is alleged to have been committed with such recklessness as to call forth a warning from Judge Garrison. After declaring that if the wounds had been made with the razor it would have been dulled, he thereupon, to prove that it was sharp, drew it across the back of his own hand, making a deep cut. This is the second time this lawyer has subjected himself to physical pain to produce an effect. Whether it will result as desired with the jury, or arouses the suspicion of desperate resources, remains to be seen. After cutting himself he asked Lingo to bind the wound.

Judge Westbrook said that the State had proved neither the time or place of the murder. He then went on in an eloquent manner to advance the theory that Mrs. Miller was killed at home by her sister and her husband and the body carted to where found. He created a sensation by declaring that no male fiend ever conceived the crime, and no male mind ever placed the dead woman's handkerchief and gloves where found by the body.

In closing he significantly said: "Did Mrs. Miller go out of that brush lot alive, and go home that night? That is a question that is going to be answered sooner or later. And if she did, what did she see? Frank Lingo, you are an innocent man. Gentlemen, your duty is plain."

There is a great crowd in and about the court house, and there is much guessing on the verdict.

THE LILLA HOYLE MYSTERY.

Another Tumult of Excitement Over the Sensational Murder.

WEBSTER, Mass., March 20.—The whole country about here is in a tumult of excitement over a possible end of the famous Lilla Hoyle mystery of three years ago through a statement of the wife of Andrew Hoyle, the uncle of the murdered girl, who reiterates the confession of Alice Hoyle, Lilla's sister, which implicated McQuaid and Cowie with herself in Lilla's murder, and tells an almost incredible story of her husband's conduct toward her and his infatuation for Alice, which has already broken up the family. The majority of the townspeople believe Alice guilty of what she has confessed, while others think that another prevarication must be added to her already extensive list.

Mrs. Hoyle did not doubt that Alice told the truth when she made her confession. She does not doubt it to-day. One day Alice and Mrs. Hoyle went out for a walk. Their steps took them in the direction of the north village. They reached a place just at this side of the bridge, when Alice stopped and impressively said:

"It was just about here that Lilla screamed that night and some one strangled her."

Then she examined the locality a little more closely and added:

"Yes, it was just about here."

Andrew Hoyle is a person of much interest now. There is a feeling that, if he dared to show himself, he could come forward and explain a good many things. No one knows whether he is aware of the whereabouts of Alice, but it is thought that if he is it should not deter him from acknowledging something. Some persons think that he is still in Worcester County, while others say that he is not in the State.

New York's Prison Superintendent.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 20.—It is rumored that R. Brown, brother of Judge Brown of the Court of Appeals, will be appointed in place of Austin Lathrop of Corning as Superintendent of State Prisons. It is also reported that Governor Hill denies that he knows anything about the removal of Warden Brush of Sing Sing. He is not the removing officer. The removal must be made by Superintendent of Prisons Lathrop, and at his office all knowledge of such a move was denied.

Fire Claims Two More Victims.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Two lives were lost and 22 families were left homeless by a fire that gutted the six-story double tenement at No. 215 East 29th street. The dead are Peter Cryan, aged 60, and Mary Cryan, aged 55.

A REIGN OF TERROR.

Braddock Strikers Use Clubs and Stones to Terrify Non-Union Men.

BRADDOCK, Pa., March 20.—The west end of Braddock is under a reign of terror.

August Coulson, a Swede, came here last night from the East to go to work at the Carrie blast furnaces. He was met at Copeland station at 10 o'clock by his brother-in-law, John Martin, and in making their way towards Ranking station with two valises thrown over their shoulders they were set upon by a crowd and unmercifully beaten with stones and clubs. Martin is under a doctor's care. Coulson, being a stranger, got lost in his flight and has not yet been found. Martin thinks that Coulson has been dangerously hurt.

John Penny was attacked by a crowd while returning from work at the wire mill during the morning. He drew a revolver and warned his assailants to stand aside. He was afterwards arrested for carrying concealed weapons and was held for court.

Andrew Hanson, another Swede, was stripped of his clothing, and is confined to his bed as a result of the injuries he sustained by the rough treatment of the crowd of strikers. The police are now keeping the west end under surveillance.

POWDER MILL BLOWN UP.

Two Employes So Horribly Burned that They Cannot Live.

MAHONOY CITY, Pa., March 20.—The Brandonville powder mill caught fire and blew up last night, fatally injuring two men and seriously injuring a third.

The victims are Cyrus Faust, who was burned in a horrible manner, the flesh hanging in shreds from his body; Jeremiah Zimmerman received injuries from which he cannot recover; Elias Lindermuth was also badly burned and is in a precarious condition. The men were blown 30 feet into the air amid a cloud of dust and smoke.

The cause of the accident was due to a pebble getting under the crusher while the men were making powder, the friction of the stone, coming in contact with the heavy iron crusher, causing the powder to ignite. The drying house was burned to the ground, but the magazine escaped.

The men were carried to their homes, but there is no hope for the recovery of Zimmerman and Faust, and Lindermuth's life hangs on a thread.

AN OFFER TO EVA

Mrs. Robert Ray Hamilton Will Settle for $75,000.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 20.—Eva Hamilton has left the house at Carbondale where she she has been stopping the past two weeks for New York.

She was interviewed by a reporter, and said: "My husband's estate has an annual income of $18,000. By right one-third of that is mine. His relatives refuse to recognize my claim to any part of the estate, however inconsistent it may seem with their denial of my claim. They have, nevertheless, offered me $60,000 to settle all matters with them.

"Upon the advice of my attorney I positively refused to accept this amount. I shall not think of a settlement for less than $75,000."

In the course of her remarks she carefully avoided all references to her alleged husband, Joshua Mann, and did not speak of Ray being yet living. She seemed to take it for granted that he had died.

A Boy Murdered by Indians.

WATERLOO, O., March 20.—T. Jacobs, who lives near this place, has received word that his son, aged 12 years, had been killed and scalped by Indians in Nebraska, where he had been visiting. Young Jacobs was taken prisoner by the redskins and was disposed of just as a rescuing party of white men came in sight.

Passed Both Houses.

TRENTON, N. J., March 20.—The Congressional Apportionment bill has passed both Houses. It gives New Jersey eight Congressmen, an increase of one. The lines are so arranged that six out of the eight will be Democratic. The First and Second districts remain the same. The rest are all changed.

Oleomargerine Factory Seized.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 20.—Revenue officers have seized the oleomargerine factory owned by the Providence Dairy Company, No. 257 Eddy street. The seizure was made on the charge that the concern had recently shipped a number of unstamped packages.

To Row for the World's Championship.

NEW YORK, March 20.—A cable dispatch says John McLean and James Stansbury will row for the world's championship and $2,000 a side on the Parramatta course on March 24. Stansbury will go to America after the race to row William O'Connor.

Judge Bingham's Resignation Accepted.

CONCORD, N. H., March 20.—The Governor's council accepted the resignation of Hon. G. A. Bingham, of Littleton, as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Leader Barondess Bailed.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Barondess, the leader of the striking cloakmakers, has been bailed. The district-attorney was satisfied with the sureties he offered.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Efforts to Induce Germany to Admit American Pork.

NO ULTIMATUM HAS BEEN ISSUED

Mr. Blaine Denies that the President Intends to Shut Out German Imports.

Italy in a Dilemma Over the New Orleans Affair—The State Department May Ask an Apology—The Revenue Cutter Bear to Go on a Dual Mission—Gen. Johnston Better—Carter Reappointed Minister.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Secretary Blaine said to-day that he knew nothing about the published reports that the United States intended to institute retaliatory proceedings against Germany, in case that country refused to admit American pork. No pronunciamento, he said, looking to the exclusion of German imports had been issued.

Private Secretary Halford also said he knew nothing about the President contemplating such retaliatory proceedings.

The President simply directed Secretary Blaine to call the attention of our Ministers in Germany and France anew to the subject and try to reach some tangible result. He expects to reach results through the usual diplomatic channels and not by the sudden presentation of an ultimatum proposing the prohibition of German and French imports into this country if Germany and France do not yield at once to our demands. The McKinley bill is about as far as the administration will go at present in the direction of prohibition.

The President has the power, however, by the Meat Inspection act to go beyond the McKinley bill and shut out German and French imports altogether, and the fact that he has it will be impressed on Ministers Phelps and Reid with instructions to impress it upon the Foreign Ministers of Germany and France. Both Mr. Phelps and Mr. Reid have already brought the subject of discrimination against American meats to the attention of the German and French governments and have received some encouraging assurances.

THE NEW ORLEANS AFFAIR.

Mr. Blaine May Submit Some of the Grievances of the United States.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—In diplomatic circles it is regarded that it would be just as well if the Italians throughout the country would abandon the idea of public meetings on account of the New Orleans affair. The men who were put to death on Saturday last were not executed because they were Italians, but because they were assassins, and their continued existence would have been a menace to the peace and safety of society. There is no more reason why Italians should work themselves up over the matter than that Greeks or Turks should.

In the course of the correspondence with the Italian government, it is to be anticipated that Mr. Blaine will feel called upon to submit some of the grievances of the United States in this connection. If Italy has a right to interfere in behalf of her subjects, or alleged subjects, she must at the same time admit responsibility for some of their actions. There has as yet, unless we accept the charge to the grand jury at New Orleans, been no official account of the occurrences of Saturday. All the information upon the subject has been derived from the newspapers. According to the newspaper reports, when the acquittal of the assassins by the jury which tried them was announced, Italian sailors in the port of New Orleans trampled and heaped other indignities upon the American flag. If these accounts are verified, it will be Mr. Blaine's duty to demand reparation for the insult.

As this insult preceded the killing of the criminals, Italy must first apologize to us for before expecting any expressions of regret on our part. The flag of the United States waves from the top of a lofty signal pole on the river front of the city. Not satisfied with turning the American flag upside down on the masts of their vessels and hoisting their own flag above it, these Italians tore the flag from the signal pole where it fluttered as the emblem of national authority, and ran up their own flag in its stead.

Undoubtedly such acts as these intensified popular indignation and prompted the men who met at the foot of the Clay statue to let it be known that American justice and American authority would in one way or another strike the stiletto from the cowardly hands which use it only in ambush or in darkness.

FELTON ELECTED SENATOR.

The Ex-Congressman Carries Off the Prize in California.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 20.—Ex-Congressman Felton has been elected to succeed Senator Hearst in the United States Senate.

The ballot first stood: Estee 40, Felton 40, Johnston 4, Hancock 4, Blanchard 1; White, Dem., 23. A number of changes being made to Felton a stampede occurred which finally made the ballot elect him.

Senator-elect Felton was born in New York 58 years ago and came to California when he was 17 years of age. He engaged in mining and mercantile pursuits and entered politics as a Democrat. He afterwards became a Republican and was elected to the Assembly for four years. He declined renomination six years ago and was sent to Congress from the Fifth district. He has also held the position of United States Sub-Treasurer of San Francisco.

In an interview Mr. Estee said: "I have nothing to say for publication except that I was defeated because I had not enough of votes. No poor man has a chance to aspire to office in California. I do not pretend to say that money was used for the election of Mr. Felton, but he certainly had with him the influence of great corporations like the Alaska Seal Fur Company, sugar refineries, federal brigade, etc. After my defeat I congratulated Mr. Felton on his election and wished him many happy days. I am satisfied, and I don't want the Japanese mission even now. California's climate is good enough for me."

TO PROBE THE SCANDAL.

A Legislative Inquiry Into the Soldiers' Orphan Funds.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 20.—Mr. Parker of Delaware County introduced a resolution in the House which was unanimously adopted authorizing the appointment of a committee to consist of three members of the House of Representatives and two Senators to investigate the amounts expended by each of the Soldiers' Orphan Schools each year from 1875 to 1889.

This is a result of the charge published to the effect that recent revelations at Mercer, Pa., discloses the fact that the State had been robbed of over $1,000,000 in the management of the Soldiers' Orphan Schools.

The committee is directed to report the result of its investigations at as early a date as practicable. The Senate subsequently concurred in the resolutions.

Mr. Brennan declared that he would brand Brown's name with infamy, to which Brown retorted that it could not be made more infamous than his own.

PARNELL'S DECISION

A Rumor that He Will Resign the Leadership.

THE M'CARTHYITES SURPRISED.

Another Report that He Will Test Public Sentiment Against Healy.

The Socialistic Groups of London Celebrate the Commune—The Speeches of a Gory Character—England's Warlike Preparations—Praise for American Ships—The Utopia's Captain Arrested.

LONDON, March 20.—It is stated in the lobby of the House of Commons that Parnell has decided to resign the leadership. This has been expected among a small circle of his own followers but is really a surprise to the McCarthyites, who have been impressed lately with the idea that they had a long, bitter fight ahead of them.

A later report is that it is not as head of the Irish party that he will resign, but simply as a member from Cork to contest with Maurice Healy.

Whichever proves true the subject is discussed widely to-day.

RAMPANT SOCIALISTS.

They Indulge in Gory Talk While Celebrating the Commune.

LONDON, March 20.—The Social Democratic Federation, comprising the allied Socialistic groups of London, celebrated the 20th anniversary of the Commune in St. Andrews's Hall last night. The attendance was very large.

The speeches were delivered by the perennial Louise Michel, Henry Hyndman, the poet Morris and other well known social revolutionists. Herbert Burrows, the present friend-in-chief of Annie Besant, presided over the meeting.

The utterances of the speakers were of a gory character, and the applause which they elicited was chiefly provoked by the threats of the orators to overthrow the social system by force of arms, and at the cost of the lives of capitalists, monopolists, aristocrats and others who bar the progress of Socialism to its goal.

ENGLAND MAY MEAN WAR.

MACQUEARY SENTENCED.

The Accused Pastor Quickly Tenders His Resignation from the Ministry.

CANTON, O., March 20.—The official sentence of Bishop Leonard in the heresy trial of the Rev. Howard MacQueary has been received. After enumerating the charges on which he was tried, the sentence concludes with the following:

"Therefore we, William Leonard, D. D., of divine permission, exercising ecclesiastical and spiritual jurisdiction in this diocese, do hereby pronounce upon the Rev. Howard MacQueary sentence of suspension from the exercises of the functions of the holy ministry, in all and every particular, for the period of six months.

"We furthermore order that if, at the expiration of six months he shall not have retracted and given evidence that he will no longer teach his errors of doctrines, he shall thereupon be deposed from the priesthood of the church."

After receiving the document Rev. Mr. MacQueary wrote to Bishop Leonard tendering his resignation from the ministry of the Episcopal Church of the United States, and asks that it be accepted at once and that steps be taken at once for his deposition. He wrote, "There is not the slightest possibility of my retracting my alleged errors. On the contrary I have every reason to believe that further investigation will simply confirm my present convictions."

To a reporter Rev. Mr. MacQueary said: "I know that my opinion concerning the birth of our Saviour is concurred in by many Episcopal clergymen. When I was in the East a number of clergymen said to me: 'I agree with you but I think you have spoken too plainly.' I will have the verdict published."

NEW YORK, March 20.—The Irish envoys opened the campaign in America for Mr. Parnell last night at Cooper Union Hall before an audience of 3,000 persons. Michael Breslin presided.

J. J. O'Kelly was the first speaker. He said the envoys were here to ask sympathizers with the cause of Ireland to support them in the struggle which had been misrepresented by the press agents in this country as well as in England. Their mission was to ask those who believed in an independent Irish party in Parliament to come to their aid, so that they could fight every seat in Ireland and restore unity by wiping from public life the men who had betrayed the trust reposed in them. Mr. Redmond and Mr. O'Connor also spoke.

At the close of the meeting it was announced that $4,388 had been subscribed during the evening.

An Evening With the Wesleys.

A delightful programme is to be presented by the Epworth League at the Methodist Episcopal church, this evening. It is to be an "Historical Evening", and the papers by the young people, together with the songs to be sung, will be in reference to the Wesleys, who did so much for Methodism and all evangelical Christianity.

A Pastor's Views on Gambling.

To-morrow morning, at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Dr. Lewis will discuss the sin of gambling—whether in poker, or horse racing. Strangers are always welcome at this church.

Hires' Root Beer is essentially a temperance drink, and, as such, ought to find a place in every larder in the land. It is also cheap too. A 25 cent package makes five gallons.

JACK HORNER WAS MISSING.

But Everybody Got a Taste of His Pie, and of Many Other Good Things Besides.

HOSE who "took tea" at the bazar and supper given by the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the Trinity Reformed church at 28 West Front street, last evening, had a really delightful time. The large room was very prettily decorated with bunting, flags Japanese parasols and hangings. The place was constantly filled with people, and an animated scene was presented. The supper tables and the various booths were very tastefully arranged, and were presided over in most charming fashion.

To tell of all the good things that were served and eaten at the tables would be a long though pleasant story. The supper was all that could be desired, and was composed of most toothsome and substantial dishes. Cold meats, coffee, Tier's ice-cream, and other edibles, were provided in abundance.

Those presiding over the five supper tables were:

Mrs. F. A. Church, Mrs. J. M. Tier, Mrs. C. F. French, Mrs. A. M. Gillem, Mrs. A. L. Force.

They were assisted by the following waitresses, all of whom wore the neatest of white caps:

Mrs. W. F. Oliver, and the Misses Etta Krymer, Phœbe Mills, Marion Nevius, Minnie Force, Emma Gillem, Grace Nevius, Lou Snediker, Minnie Arnold, Grace Clark, Carrie Mebl, Ella Dunn, Lizzie Wyckoff, Ella Gardner and Ella Conkey.

The Supper Committee who saw to it that everything was palatable and good was headed by Mrs. P. M. Demarest, chairman and general manager, who proved herself a most tireless and efficient leader. Her helpers were as follows:

Mrs. A. M. Gillem, Mrs. F. A. Church, Mrs. J. M. Tier, Mrs. C. Frank French, Mrs. A. L. Force, Mrs. S. M. Runyon, Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, Mrs. J. V. P. Ryerson, Mrs. Geo. L. VanEmburgh.

The good things besides the supper were many. Those who were thirsty found at the cool, inviting lemonade well a most refreshing beverage, graciously served by Miss Nellie Arnold and Miss Nora Williams. For lovers of the sweet dainties which confectioners dispense there was a candy table, where Mrs. E. H. Bird, Miss Mabel Woodruff and Miss Jennie VanWinkle did a thriving trade.

More useful, but no less attractive, was a booth filled with household goods, whose merits were successfully shown to customers by Mrs. J. F. MacDonald, Mrs. E. J. VanWinkle and Mrs. S. C. Shann.

Then there was a big and interesting Jack-Horner pie, where for the familiar nickel one might thurst in his whole fist and secure a prize. Mr. Horner was expected to be present in person, to distribute his goodies, but at the last moment Mother Goose sent word that he was mysteriously missing, and could not be found. In his absence Miss Lizzie Dunn took care of his pastry, and gave to all applicants a nice fat plum.

At the grocery store Mrs. Wm. G. E. See and Miss E. Kline conducted a thriving business.

In fancy goods, of which there was a large and handsome assortment, Mrs. P. Emmons, Mrs. J. K. Arnold, and Mrs. R. B. Rogers, did a brisk trade.

The table full of cakes was robbed of many choice treasures by eager customers, who were waited on by Mrs. T. H. Hardy and Mrs. John Barrett.

The event was in every particular a highly successful one, and the ladies feel very grateful to the public for its generous support. Much credit is due to the indefatigable efforts of Mrs. Wm. G. E. See, chairman of the managing committee, and general manager of the affair.

The capable Treasurer was F. A. Church.

A large quantity of canned and other goods was donated to the grocery store by Wm. M. Stout, of the firm of Stout, Spencer & Co.

J. F. MacDonald, the uptown grocer, took all his clerks to the bazar to supper.

The affair will be repeated this afternoon and evening, and will no doubt again be liberally patronized.

An Unexpected Delight.

There was never a more thoroughly gratified audience than that which listened to H. E. Krehbiel, at The Casino, last evening. His lecture on Wagner's "Meistersinger von Nurnberg," was an unexpected delight to the majority of those present, and the man himself charmed them all.

He was assisted at the piano by Mr. Venino and Miss Utter. There is now no doubt that a series of like lectures by Mr. Krehbiel in this city next season, would be an artistic and financial success.

FIRST GAME FOR THE CRESCENTS.

Bicycle Boys Defeated in the In-door Base-ball Contest.

The in-door base-ball game at The Crescent last night was enjoyed by an audience numbering nearly six hundred people. Though most of the players were amateurs, they acquitted themselves in a manner that would have done credit to professionals. The two teams played as follows:

CRESCENT LEAGUE.	POSITIONS.	BICYLE CLUB.
Lee	Catcher	Wais
Jones	Pitcher	R. Erickson
Van Winkle	1st Base	Tilney
Teel	2d Base	Rushmore
Rogers	3d Base	Murray
Rosane	Short stop	Sandford
Williams	Left field	J. Erickson
Davis	Right field	Beebe

At the outset the Crescents took the lead, and maintained it throughout the game. When the Bicycle boys went to the bat for the last time, in the ending of the ninth inning, the Crescents were ten ahead. The "Bis" worked desperately to tie the score, but to make ten runs in a single inning was more than could be expected, and they had to content themselves with a gain of five, thus making a total of 24, against their opponents' 29.

The applause from the spectators was frequent and generous, and a repetition of the interesting game would no doubt be as liberally patronized.

The especial features of the evening included tremendous slides by the Ericksons, two-base hits by R. Erickson and Sandford, and a home run by Rushmore. Rogers played an excellent game on third, and made some first-rate catches of difficult flies. Jones did sharp work in the box. Chief Murray, Jr., umpired the game to the satisfaction of all.

WEIGHING A HUMAN HAIR.

Franklin Smith Gives Novel Illustrations During a Practical Talk on Gravitation.

Franklin S. Smith gave a most practical explanation of the system of weights and weighing at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening. The talk was well attended, and very interesting.

The following extracts from the Weights and Measures Act of 1878, of the United Kingdom, were given:

"The imperial standard for determining the weight of the imperial pound is of platinum, the form being that of a cylinder 1.35 inches in height and 1.15 inches in diameter, with a groove or channel around it, whose middle is .34 inches below the top of the cylinder, for insertion of the points of the ivory fork by which it is to be lifted. The edges are carefully rounded off, and such standard is marked, P. S. 1844, 1 lb. One sixteenth part of the imperial standard pound shall be an ounce, and one sixteenth part of such ounce shall be a dram, and one seven-thousandth part of the imperial standard pound shall be a grain. Four hundred and eighty grains shall be an ounce troy. All the foregoing weights except ounce troy shall be deemed to be avoirdupois weights." After explaining the French metric system, and exhibiting scales of various sorts, Mr. Smith succeed in ascertaining with his own valuable chemist's scales, the weight of a hair of his head and also the weight of a lead pencil mark on a piece of paper.

Taking four heads of hair of equal weight—he said—a patient German physicologist found the red one to contain about 90 000 hairs; the black 103,000; the brown 109,000; and the blonde 140,000.

Take a head of hair that contains 132,000 hairs, two feet long, and there will be 50 miles of hair in the head.

If each hair weighed one milligramme, the whole head of hair would weigh but 4½ ounces.

LOOKING FORWARD.

Rip VanWinkle, on the Electric Railroad, 1991, A. D.

I was suddenly awakened from a nice long sleep by an awful noise, such as I had never heard before, which presently formed itself into sounds something like these: "Threatened electric railroad—Plainfield—beautiful streets—ruin—rush—deadly trolley—combine—Essex county capitalists," and other confused and indistinct echoes. It kept up such a perpetual din that I could not get to sleep again, so after vainly trying to sink into another nap, I determined to go and see what all the noise was about. Learning that it proceeded from Plainfield, N. J., I whistled to Schneider (that's my dog), and started for the scene of the disturbance.

After considerable difficulty we at last arrived; having first been nearly smothered in a "quick mud" on the corner of Richmond and Third street, and Schneider getting awfully shocked by coming in contact with a wire which was twisted round a tree in front of the Quaker meting house.

At the corner of Park avenue and Front street I saw an old friend named "Vox Populi," alias "Veritas," alias "Pro Bono Publico." Going up to him I said, "Hello, what's all this noise about? I heard it way up in Sleepy Hollow. Why can't a fellow sleep in peace?"

Vox—"Why, we are getting ready for a rush!"

Rip—"What; a cane rush?"

Vox—"No, a rush road."

Rip—"How do you know?"

Vox—"Well, we are talking about it; have been talking about it for a hundred years or more; in fact, 'Old Subscriber' used to write against it when they discussed it in 1891. We are all opposed to it."

Rip—"Why are you opposed to a street railroad?"

Vox—"Because it will spoil our beautiful streets and endanger our lives; and—anyway we don't want it. When we do, we want to build it ourselves, and as we won't do that, we don't want anyone else to do it."

Rip—"Well, it would be a pity to spoil these streets; because if they were spoilt much more, you'd want to wear rubber hose to navigate in. But if you are afraid of wires, what are these things overhead, and tied round the trees and fences?"

Vox—"Oh, those are electric light and telephone wires, and we need them in our business. We could not get along without them."

Rip—But see how many there are, and how low some of them hang: I should think they would be dangerous?

Vox—Well, now and then a lineman (in New York) does get broiled, or a horse killed, and in 1889 I believe the cupola on Stelle's building caught fire from the telephone wires, during a thunderstorm.

Rip—Then why don't you order them taken down?

Vox—O, we find them a great convenience, we could not possibly get along without them!

Rip—Don't you suppose a great many people who use neither telephones nor electric lights, would find the cars a great convenience. Why shouldn't they be considered as well as you?

Vox—Well, if we must have electric cars we don't want the trolley, we want the storage system.

Rip—Do you know any responsible storage system company that offers to build a road, without calling on you for a penny?

Vox—No, I don't; but when they get out of their temporary difficulties (which they will by and by), I have no doubt that as soon as we are ready for them, they will be ready to experiment with us.

Just then the awful noise that woke me up, sounded again; nearly deafening me. "What's that" I asked; "O! replied Vox, that's our electric fire gong."

"What a very distressing noise; I don't see how you can endure it?" said I.

"Well, we've got used to it, and rather like it," answered Vox; "it amuses us, besides telling us what's o'clock. But come with me and I will show you our big dynamos that drive the current over our electric wires."

We went along Front street to Madison avenue and I could not keep from wondering at the inconsistency of a man, who did not want poles and wires in the streets, and yet here they were by the score. Wires crossing and recrossing the streets in every direction; running over the tops of houses, in and out of windows, and some hanging so low in the streets that the drivers of hay wagons were in danger of being decapitated as they passed under them. But Vox seemed perfectly unconscious of their very existence; because, as I afterward discovered, he uses both electric lights and the telephone in his business.

As we went under a railroad bridge, a train rushed by, whistling furiously and making a noise such as the thunder does when it crashes around Storm King. "How many trains pass here in a day?" I asked. "Oh, hundreds of them," he exclaimed proudly.

"And do you have that distressing noise, hundreds of times a day, with all that shrieking, snorting and thundering?"

"Yes," he replied, "but we don't notice it any more."

We now reached the building where the big wheels were rushing round at a great rate, hundreds of times per minute, and making such a buzzing and rattling one could hardly hear himself think. I was afraid to go near them for fear something would burst. I asked Vox what it was that caused the wheels to revolve so rapidly; he said, the steam from the big boiler. "What would happen if the boiler should burst?" I asked; "Well," said Vox. "I don't think that very much of this building would be left if such a thing did happen, and I wouldn't want to be looking out of a car window when a train was going over the bridge at that time."

"Did you ever hear of a boiler bursting?" I inquired; "Yes, I have," retorted Vox, "but we have got to take some chances you know, in this world; we want electric lights and telephones because they are useful to us, and we don't want the electric railroad; see!"

"I think I do;" I replied, "and the difficulty appears to settle down to this: You don't want an electric railroad, and the principal objection you advance is the disfigurement and dangers that poles and wires cause upon the highways; yet you are guilty of the same offense (if offense it be), because you want telephones and electric lights for your convenience. Your nuisances and dangers are considered blessings—thinly disguised however—and condemnation seizes upon the wants of others that may not be reflected by your little hand mirror. But fortunately, in this age, the majority rule, and their wishes are entitled to as much consideration as yours. You had better come with me to Sleepy Hollow, and after a good nap we will return when the electric road is running, and all take a ride." Then catching Schneider by the tail and pulling him out of the mud, (where he had stuck fast), I bid a long farewell to Vox populi.

RIP VAN WINKLE.

N. B.—By virtue of the latitude allowed by poetic license, I have selected Sleepy Hollow for my last long sleep; but am sorry to say there is far more truth than poetry in this letter. RIP.

Evangelist Mills at Westfield.

(From The Westfield Leader.)

Regarding these meetings as a whole, several things are worth noting as specially impressive. The harmony of spirit between the churches has been delightful and a very powerful influence. The denominational lines not only have been broken down, but they have been forgotten. No one has thought about them. No one has cared what church the meetings have been held in; and the delightful spirit of unity has made every church home-like. May this spirit continue after the regular services are resumed.

As for Mr. Mills, every one loves him who has sought to be helped by his preaching. He is a preacher of fine abilities; but what touches the people most is his genuineness, his whole-hearted earnestness, his sympathy, and the undoubted facts that he is being used of God, here as elsewhere, for the salvation of men. His appeal is to the conscience and reason more than to the emotions. His style is conversational rather than declamatory; but at times he rises in a torrent of eloquence that is almost irresistible. Some of his best sermons have been his afternoon appeals to professing Christians to live better and cleaner lives, and the uplift in this direction has been one of the grandest features of the meetings.

The Rev. Mr. Mills left Tuesday on the Blue Line, which made a stop for his special accommodation, for his home in Providence, R. I. He will remain there for a brief rest, and will then immediately resume his evangelistic work at Bloomfield. Mr. Mills takes with him the profoundest respect and admiration of those who have enjoyed the benefits of his ministration in Westfield, and not only at the Presbyterian church just prior to his departure, but at the station where large numbers attended to see him off, this affection was manifested in a most remarkable manner. Hymns were sung, words of cheer uttered, adieux waved, and the heartiest wishes for his continued health and success in his great work expressed, and the train moved off mid a scene of mingled regret, thankfulness, and religious fervor, such as has never probably before been witnessed in Westfield.

As for Mr. Greenwood's singing, there is but one opinion. He is a singer and a true Christian man. No one hears him without believing that every note and word comes from the heart. It is true spiritual singing, and has been a large feature in the attainment of these spiritual results.

These union services are to be continued under the leadership of the Rev. Mr. Ottman, of Newark, who is a pastor of rare gifts in the evangelistic direction. He has been generally blessed in his own church, and in other fields. He comes to Westfield at the earnest request of all the churches, and will have as hearty support as Mr. Mills has had. It is Mr. Mills's own opinion that Mr. Ottman has no superior for the work that needs now to be done in Westfield.

They Will Have Two Trains a Day, at First.

Superintendent Baldwin, of the Jersey Central Railroad, to-day visited Graceland, the new suburban settlement between Fanwood and Westfield, for the purpose of selecting a site for the new station soon to be built at that place. The design for the building, which is already shown, calls for a pretty little structure of the Gothic style of architecture, situated midway between North avenue and the present line of the road, near the spot now occupied by a small stone bridge. The slight depression now existing there will be filled in with several feet of earth. It is understood that the Central will erect a much larger and handsomer station as soon as the growth of the place will warrant it.

A Great Spring Tour to Florida via Pennsylvania Railroad.

By reason of the enormous popularity accorded the Pennsylvania Railroad's personally-conducted tours to Florida during the winter and spring of 1891 the company has decided to run the sixth and last on March 31. It will differ in many points from the others. Going south the tourists will travel in a special train of Pullman Sleeping and Dining Cars similar in every respect to the trains used on previous excursions. The excursion tickets, which will be sold at a rate of $50 from New York and $48 from Philadelphia, will include Pullman accommodations and meals en route on the south-bound trip and railroad transportation only on the north-bound trip. They will be valid for return trip on regular trains up to May 30, 1891. Fifteen days from the date they leave Jacksonville will be allowed tourists to reach Philadelphia or New York, and during those fifteen days they can stop off at points designated on the tickets.

A Tourist Agent and Chaperon will accompany the party south.

The unusual limit of the tickets and privileges accorded will afford an excellent opportunity of a lengthy visit in the South.

Only Two Weeks More of "Men and Women."

The announcement of the last two weeks of "Men and Women" at Proctor's theatre, 23d street, New York, has resulted in drawing crowds to the house to witness LeMille & Belasco's great play. In addition to the souvenir night, March 25, when the play will have its 200th performance, the management have decided to make a special event of the farewell performance, March 28, which will mark the close of the first regular season of the stock company.

The company engaged for the play, "Mr. Wilkinson's Widows," are in active rehearsal with the following well-known people in the cast: Joseph Holland, Fred Bond, Mrs. Dion Boucicault, Henrietta Crossman, Maud White, and other prominent people. This new comedy is even funnier than the "Comforts of Home." Taken as it is from the French it is full of complications and funny situations. The title indicates an amusing play. A long run is predicted for it at Proctor's like its predecessors. The last performances of "Men and Women" are drawing to a close.

In Memory of Judge Devens.

Death of a Prominent Scientist.

LANCASTER, Pa., March 20.—Dr. S. S. Robinson died last evening, aged 79. He was one of the most prominent scientists in the State, and his writings on entomological subjects were very extensive.

PHYSICIANS AND TEMPERANCE.

Influence of the Medical Profession in Temperance Reform.

Upon no one does responsibility for the continuance of the widely-prevalent, injurious social drinking usages rest more heavily than upon the members of the medical profession. Medicine, in the true sense, is preventive as well as remedial. Among the agencies productive of disease, physical and moral, intoxicating liquors are pre-eminent. The attitude which physicians as a class assume toward the use of intoxicating beverages, personally and professionally, therefore involves very largely, for good or ill, the interests of the temperance reform.

There have been from the beginning, since the time of Dr. Benjamin Rush, and are now, a few eminent American physicians who have done much to encourage, by both example and precept, the cause of temperance. But they have been and continue to be a small minority of the profession as a whole. A very large majority of physicians upon social and festive occasions, at their banquets, etc., do not hesitate to provide freely and to partake of intoxicants. The international medical congress, held last year in Berlin, appears to have been a striking and most unseemly object-lesson of this kind. A Berlin correspondent of the Philadelphia Medical and Surgical Reporter writes: "The disgraceful scenes at the banquet given by the city of Berlin to the medical congress were recently the topic of discussion in council. A councilman called it 'the medical schwutzenfest,' and emphasized the waste of money. He was not altogether wrong. The money spent by the city for the Rathhaus banquet was really enormous, and the result was the total intoxication of most of the shining lights of the profession."

This correspondent, whom we assume to be a physician, and from the high professional standing of the journal in which the letter is published, also to be trustworthy, gives additional details of the great medical drinking-bout in the German capital as follows: "I regret to say that the bigger the man the more he was inebriated. On a professor whose name is a household word all over the medical world artificial respiration was practiced for almost an hour, and another professor who has revolutionized one of the most important of medical branches had a bad cut in his head, the result of a fall. A French physician who has made his name renowned by fighting intemperance through exposure of the injury inflicted upon the organism by alcohol, was unable to spell his own name. By a queer coincidence I also saw two men hugging each other who are known as irreconcilable antagonists in science, one a leader of German bacteriologists, and the other a well-known Paris professor who does not believe in bacilli."

Such disgraceful alcoholic excesses on the part of eminent medical men, if not thus well-attested, would seem well-nigh incredible. We may hope that they would not, at least, in grossness and want of common decency, be equaled at any kindred gathering in this country. Yet we remember that the liquor supply for the late International medical congress, held in Washington, as reported in the journals, was very large.

Great Britain leads the world at the present time in intelligent, organized medical temperance propagandism. The British medical temperance association, with Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson, of London, as its distinguished president, and upwards of five hundred abstaining physicians in different parts of the united kingdom as members, fills a very large place of usefulness. Its organ, the Medical Temperance Journal, published quarterly, is a most valuable periodical, which physicians everywhere might read to great advantage. The need in this country of the counterpart among American physicians of the British medical temperance association is most urgent.

The education which medical students receive in our colleges, either concerning the use of alcohol as a curative agent in the treatment of disease, or with reference to its beverage use in the sphere of preventive medicine, is very incomplete and superficial. There ought to be some provision for the supplementary training of young physicians especially in this direction. The London temperance hospital is demonstrating conclusively the practicability of the successful non-alcoholic treatment of all the diseases common to general hospital practice. But few physicians on this side of the Atlantic know, however, of its important and eminently successful mission. While physicians continue indiscriminate and needless alcoholic prescriptions for their patients, and themselves indulge moderately or immoderately in the use of alcoholic beverages, their influence must needs be greatly harmful among the masses by whom they are looked to as teachers and guides, especially in matters involving physical health. There is a moral side to the physician's profession, which, with many of its members, needs greatly to be cultivated and emphasized, and especially as related to the popular beverage use of intoxicants.—National Temperance Advocate.

THE LIQUOR PALACES.

Where the Money Comes From to Build Them.

In a paper presented to the twentieth annual convention of the Catholic total abstinence union of America, Mr. T. V. Powderly said:

"Before the delegates to this convention separate to go to their homes, I would ask them to go on foot through the streets of Pittsburgh, and study the temperance question as they go. They will see handsome buildings devoted to the sale of liquor on the principal streets, and if they estimate the cost of one of these buildings, they will learn that it runs away up into the thousands, far above the reach of the workingman's income. On one of the streets of Pittsburgh will be seen a saloon the plate-glass front of which is worth five thousand dollars, the bar and fixtures are worth ten thousand dollars, the paintings and other decorations are valued at seven thousand dollars. All of this is separate and apart from the building itself, and of the plot of ground on which it stands. Stand guard at that door for twenty-four hours, and thousands of men will be seen passing in and out. Of the number, nine-tenths will wear the garb of labor; they will be the workers in the mills and factories that make Pittsburgh famous and foremost in the history of manufacture in the United States. Follow one of these men to his home, and contrast its appearance, condition and surroundings with the palace he stopped at on his way home, and not one iota of resemblance will be seen. Inquire if he owns the house he lives in, and it is more than likely that the answer will be in the negative. Ask him why he cannot afford to live in a better or more comfortable home, and his reply will be: "I cannot afford it." Take a walk through the entire city, and it will be seen that the palaces in which liquor is sold are costly and well furnished, while the homes of the toilers are cheap and poorly furnished. Go still further, and it will be discovered that the men who live in the illy-ventilated, poorly-furnished, stuffy, unhealthy tenements or dwellings, are the very men whose dimes and dollars have furnished the 'Palaces of Hell' with plate-glass windows, expensive bars and fixtures, costly paintings and neat surroundings."—National Temperance Advocate.

A SCIENTIFIC EXPERIMENT.

The Disastrous Effects of Intoxicants Upon the Human System.

Dr. B. W. Richardson, the noted physician, says that he was once enabled to preach an effectual temperance lecture by means of a scientific experiment. An acquaintance was singing the praise, of wine, and declared that he could not get through the day without it.

"Will you be good enough to feel my pulse, as I stand here?" asked Dr. Richardson.

The man did so.

"Count it carefully. What does it say?"

"Seventy-four."

The physician then went and lay down on a sofa and asked the gentleman to count his pulse again.

"It has gone down to sixty-four," he said, in astonishment. "What an extraordinary thing!"

"When you lie down at night," said the physician, "that is the way nature takes to give your heart rest. You may know nothing about it, but the organ is resting to that extent; and if you reckon the rate, it involves a good deal of rest, because, in lying down, the heart is doing ten strokes less a minute.

"Multiply that by sixty, and it is six hundred; multiply it by eight hours and, within a fraction, there is a difference of five thousand strokes; and as the heart is throwing six ounces of blood at every stroke, it makes a difference of thirty thousand ounces of life during the night. When I lie down at night without any alcohol, that is the rest my heart gets.

"But when I take wine or grog, I do not allow that rest, for the influence of alcohol is to increase the number of strokes. Instead of getting repose, the man who uses alcohol puts on something like fifteen thousand extra strokes, and he rises quite unfit for the next day's work, until he has taken a little more of that 'muddy bumper,' which he calls the 'soul of man below.'"—Youth's Companion.

SHORT SPECIALS.

THE Union Series of Physiologies, which tells the truth about stimulants and narcotics, has just been adopted by the Philadelphia board of education for the public schools of that city.

THE brewers declare that the beer they make is pure and wholesome, yet they were very much opposed to the bill introduced into congress which prohibits with severe penalties any adulteration of beer.

REV. G. A. BENNETTS, B. A., has recently been made temperance secretary of the British Wesleyan conference, and is to devote his entire time to the promotion of temperance. This is a notable step forward, and met with some opposition, but carried by a strong vote.

BEER-DRINKING in Germany has grown to an enormous extent. An English magazine estimates, from recently-published statistics, the annual consumption to each inhabitant of Munich,—man, woman and child—to be two hundred and thirty-six gallons. "Such swilling," adds this paper, "even if not attended with intoxication (which of course it is), is as disgusting as the vice of gluttony."

DRUNKENNESS in Edinburgh is not a punishable offense. Persons found in this state are arrested for their own protection and released on recovery. In this country the punishment of inebriates as criminals is thought to be deterring force to check inebriety. The practical result is that the inebriate is educated into a criminal, and becomes a dead weight on the community.—Journal of Inebriety.

ONE of our Chicago school principals was accused of locking up children in a dark basement room for punishment. The charge looked pretty bad on the face of it, but cleared up considerable when the fact became known that the accused was an active opponent to the liquor traffic, and it was the saloon—which puts hundreds and thousands in dungeons—which was the practical accuser.—Western Rural.

THE Cincinnati Times-Star gives the following instance of a saloon closed by knitting: "'Never had but one saloon in our town, and the ladies knit that one out,' said a gentleman who lives in Moor's Hill, Ind. 'What!' exclaimed the astonished delegate; 'knit it out?' 'Yes; when the saloon was started, the women formed in relays, and went and took their knitting to the saloon. Of course that knocked business higher than a kite. It was not long before that saloon had to be closed, and since that time no man has ever had the nerve to start another.'"

MINISTERS' WIVES.

Their Place in the Parish and Their Qualifications.

Mrs. Lyman Abbott Speaks of a Pastor's Wife's Opportunities—Opinions from Dr. Talmage, Mrs. Beecher and Mrs. Theodore L. Cuyler.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Rev. Dr. Talmage sat in his study the other evening, his eyes fixed quizzically on a bronze boy of Egyptian aspect who stood patiently in the doorway carrying candles.

"I used to read," he said, "a good deal of literature on the subject of ministers' wives.

"I wish my wife would tell you how untrue were all those stories of pulling and hauling, of constant demands, of fault-finding.

"Congregations as a rule are composed of ladies and gentlemen, who make the position of the minister's wife an especially pleasant one. My wife knows of hundreds; yes, of thousands, of ministers' wives, all happy, all honored.

"The place a pastor's wife should take in the congregation depends on herself. Her call may be to her husband's flock or it may be simply to the things of her household. This is a matter for her own decision.

"The qualification she needs especially is common sense; for she may be a great hindrance to her husband's work or a strong reinforcement."

When one has a glimpse of the experiences, the chances for observation, the responsibilities and the opportunities that come to such a woman as Mrs. Lyman Abbott, the wife of the pastor of Plymouth church, one hesitates over the question how much one is justified in making known.

For Mrs. Abbott lives in her home. "If my children," she says, "felt themselves defrauded or my husband wished it otherwise, even if my judgment did not agree with theirs, I could not go outside."

In the early days of their married life Mr. Abbott was a lawyer and Mrs. Abbott studied his cases with him, copied legal papers and absorbed herself in his labors. When he felt himself drawn to the ministry still her thought was to forward his undertakings. So it has been during the years given to the pulpit and to editorial duties.

"I know of no demands," she says, "made on a minister's wife, but I see privileges. A pastor must be in some sense a leader, and his wife, too, can do much in the service of humanity.

"There's a good deal of talk against the churches, but much of that comes from people who don't know what the churches are doing. I would like to see a church so organized that every woman on becoming a member should be asked at once on what committee she could give much or a little time. Then once a year there might be a grand rallying day with accounts of things done.

"Plymouth church has its mission churches, the Mayflower and the Bethel, and it is a constant pleasure to watch the transformation of women who come in with shawls over their heads, poor, discouraged.

"Then there are two working girls' clubs with their educating influences. The little girls of the 'junior club' sew and cook, and one day not long ago when they gave an exhibition I was unable to attend they sent me a box with a beautiful biscuit and a piece of pie and some cake and a great variety of things, all daintily made in the cramped quarters of their own homes.

"Then there is the Young Women's league. They have made towels for the gymnasium, bringing the young men of the church into sympathetic relations with its cultivated young women. Last summer they sent a trunkful of linen to the Holiday house of the working girls. We read together Whitcomb Riley's little poem of 'The honest stitches on the under side,' for I wanted the things made fine and neat for girls whose low wages often press them to think more of dress than of underwear.

"Then there are the boys' and girls' classes. The boys are making picture screens for the hospitals and the girls make covers for the bare bureau tops in the rooms of the colored girls and the Indians at Hampton institute. They are helping to educate an Indian boy and an orphan in India.

"There is the Sunday-school teaching. There must be nearly two hundred and fifty teachers."

"And your work?"

"I have the infant class. Then there are the broader charities of the city, which want the pastor's name, and his wife's sympathy. One could give one's life in each of so many directions. The needs that force themselves on one's attention would discourage and overwhelm, did not help and sympathy also appear at every turn. Money sometimes is sent me anonymously, articles of clothing have been left at the door, and if one sees necessities one also sees how many stand ready to relieve it."

So strangely near does a woman like Mrs. Abbott stand to the trials, the joys and the sorrows that make up the daily lives of other people. Of the Ladies society of Plymouth church Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher is president, and on rainy afternoons the members spare her the labor of going out by gathering in the parlors of her home in Orange street, flowerdecked and vocal with bird songs.

"The work of a pastor's wife," says Mrs. Beecher, "must differ widely in different cases. Some ministers believe their wives can aid them most efficiently by giving them quiet and restful homes, others like to see their wives active also in parish duties.

"In my own case, five of my seven brothers became ministers and a sister married a minister, so that before my marriage I understood the life I was entering on.

"I made it my first effort to spare Mr. Beecher's time by attending to his correspondence and to financial matters. Our desks stood in adjoining windows, and it was only with the most important letters that I troubled him. Some of these he answered, on others he would write four or five words as a guide to me. The checks for his salary were made payable to me, and if he wanted money he came to me for it, except that he retained the proceeds of his lectures, making himself a fund of 'spending money.'

"I saw all callers who came to the house, so many of them only curiosity seekers. When he was in the house I never left it, and so his energies were not drawn on except in cases of importance and urgency.

"I was not able to do in addition a great amount of parish visiting, though I did what was possible. In my early married life I was asked to lead the female prayer meeting, but it was very hard for me and I did not continue.

"It was in the war days that we were lifted out of ourselves completely. I remember the dispatch that came to us one day at Peekskill, where Mr. Beecher was recuperating from hay fever, saying that his boys—the Brooklyn phalanx—and the other regiments at Fort Schuyler were without food and without clothes.

"I came down to the city immediately and crossed to Fort Schuyler to see the condition of things. I wouldn't think of being pulled across the Narrows in a rowboat now, but then one hadn't time to think of being afraid. Then I went about to the bakers for their stale loaves, and with an express wagon to the shops for mattresses and blankets and—but I can't talk about ministers' wives. If I had thought the reminiscenses I have been writing would have taken me back through so many years of my life I could not have begun them," and Mrs. Beecher's face beneath her white hair became thoughtful.

The wife of Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler, whose influence through his books has been world-wide, believes that the work of the minister's wife can be done most gently and efficiently in her own home.

"A minister," she says, "sometimes marries before he fixes on his profession and usually marries to suit himself rather than his congregation. If his wife makes him happy in his home and leaves him as free as possible to pursue his work untrammeled, she aids him most effectually.

"When some of his parishioners asked me for my portrait for a memorial they were designing in commemoration of Mr. Curley's thirty years pastorate, I declined giving it, on the ground that I had not done any pastoral duty. 'Why,' they said, 'you have been our sister and friend.' A minister's wife should know her husband's parishioners by name and visit all who need her. In a large city parish to do more than this is not possible."

Rev. Dr. Meredith, well known for his expositions of the international Sunday-school lessons, has a wife who places first among a minister's wife's qualifications, tact and the ability to hold one's tongue. "I have been a minister's daughter," she says, "all my life, and a minister's wife for twenty-seven years, and I speak from experience."

It is the minister's wives who see the social side of their husband's churches, of whom men and women alike make confidants, who must perforce have wide experience thrust upon them and to whom, the country over, are carried a large share of humanity's troubles.

ELIZA PUTNAM HEATON.

A NIGHT'S EXPERIENCE.

What a Young Girl Accomplished by Her Presence of Mind.

YEARS ago, when I was a young girl, I had an experience which taught me the inestimable value of presence of mind in emergency.

We were living that winter in a lonely spot about eight miles away from a small town of western Pennsylvania. We had but one near neighbor, a farmer, whose place adjoined ours. My father was superintendent of the B—— iron works, and, on the memorable day of which I am about to relate, he had received a large sum of money for distribution among the employes, according to their respective duties. In the evening he received a telegram, calling him away on urgent business. He did not dare take the money with him on his horseback ride into the town where he was to catch the ten o'clock express, for the roads were lonely, and considered rather dangerous by night.

There was one spot, called the Gorge, where the road narrowed suddenly to hardly more than the width of a footpath, and ran through a piece of dense woods, the thick trees of which met over the way. This part was gloomy by day, and by night it was darkness no ray of light could penetrate. A turbulent stream ran in the woods at one side, and at a certain point between two rocks there was a miniature whirlpool—the delight of small boys by day, the horror of pious people by night. Blood-curdling tales were told of masked men, gleaming knives, and lone travelers who had never returned from the Gorge. Superstitious people pointed to the whirlpool, and warned their children not to go near the abhorred spot. But I, being of a practical turn of mind, was firmly convinced that nothing greater than a leaf or twig ever had been or ever could be sucked into that whirlpool.

However that may have been, on this particular night I was left in charge of the house and the money and, most important of all, of my sick mother. She was suffering from heart trouble, and the doctors had said that any shock or even special anxiety might prove fatal to her. My brothers were both away to college.

Although I was not naturally timid, I confess that it was with some trepidation that I went the rounds of the house late that night to see that all was secure. After I had gone to my room I thought I heard the rattling of a basement door, so I went around again to every door and window, fastening every lock and sliding every bolt. I paused at the door of my mother's room until her soft, irregular breathing assured me she was asleep. Then I retired to my own room.

What strange noises one hears in the dead watches of the night, and what a night that was for them!

I lay awake a long time, straining my ears at every sound and conjuring up in my excited imagination terrible images gathered from all the tales I had ever heard of robberies, witchcraft and ghosts. At last I fell into a restless sleep and realized in my dreams the fancies of my imagination. All of a sudden I found myself sitting bolt upright in bed, the cold sweat standing out in large drops on my forehead and my hands clutching spasmodically at the bedclothes. I listened and heard a slow, grating sound which seemed to come from the basement. At first I thought it must be the echo of my last dream, but as I grew more fully awake the sound became more and more distinct, until I was convinced that it was no fancy. Suddenly it ceased, and I heard a light footfall. My first impulse was to hide myself completely under the bedclothes and await further developments. But I nobly resisted that impulse, and, rising, hastily donned wrapper and slippers, saying, half aloud: "It must be father come back unexpectedly."

I think I never was more sure of anything in my life than I was then, that it was not father.

I softly stole downstairs and along the hall. The dining-room door was ajar, and I paused a moment on the threshold. There, by the dim light of a lantern, held in the hand of one, I saw the forms of two burly, rough-bearded men, one apparently middle-aged and the other much younger. The butt of a pistol protruded from the pocket of the older. At almost the same instant they saw me, and gave a slight, involuntary start of surprise.

It immediately flashed over me that these were men from the neighborhood, that they knew of my father's absence, of the presence of the money in the house, of my mother's illness, and that they had supposed my mother was alone. (I had been away from home for some time previous to this.)

I knew that the unexpected presence of a young girl would not turn them from their purpose, their assistance would be useless, and perhaps dangerous, that to give the alarm would be impossible now that they knew I had seen them. To keep my mother from awaking and to save the money were the thoughts uppermost in my mind.

All this flashed across my brain during the almost unappreciable instant that we stood looking at each other; and I suppose there seemed to the astonished burglars no interval at all before I rushed forward and embraced and kissed each of them, exclaiming:

"Oh, Uncle Tom and Cousin Jim! I'm so glad to see you. It was so late I had almost given you up. I suppose you wouldn't know me any more than I would you. Let me see, I was two years old when you were here before, wasn't I? Mother is no better than she was when we wrote last, so we mustn't wake her up. I will get a lamp and show you right to your room for you must be tired. How is Martha?"

While I poured forth this volley of words, the burglars had had time to take in the situation, and I saw them exchange a glance which plainly said: "Let's carry it out."

"Martha? Oh, she's quite well. Had a bad cold, but she's getting over it," replied the younger man in a tone that implied a lifelong intimacy with "Martha."

"How's your father?"

"Father's well," I replied: "he was called away suddenly this evening but we expect him back to-morrow. He'll be sorry not to have been here to greet you," I added with perfect truth.

"Never mind about a light," said the elder burglar, as I made a motion to light a lamp standing on the table.

FARMER BROWN REACHED THE DOOR FIRST.

"We can see to get to bed by the lantern, and a light might disturb your mother. Sorry she's sick."

I saw that he was afraid their uncouth appearance might arouse my suspicions, so I readily acquiesced.

"Are you alone with your mother?" asked the young man.

"Yes," I answered. "Father left me in charge of the house and mother."

"Weren't you afraid?" asked the elder burglar, kindly.

"Yes, a little," I replied; "but now I sha'n't be;" and I turned a trustful glance up to him that I hoped would melt his hard heart. Meanwhile, we were ascending the stairs to the guest room. I showed them in and paused at the door.

"We thought you'd all be asleep, and we could get in without disturbing you," said the younger burglar, in a somewhat embarrassed way.

"Yes, it was very kind of you, Cousin Tom," I said. "Now let me bring you a pitcher of water and a little something to eat," I added; "you must be hungry."

"Oh, no," said the burglars; "we're not at all hungry; it isn't necessary. We mustn't keep you up any longer."

I saw they wanted me to go so bed, so that they could have an opportunity to go on with their work.

"Oh, yes," said I; "it won't take me but a few minutes, and then I'll go to bed without saying another word and let you have a good rest. Sleep as long as you want to in the morning. We shan't have breakfast till late."

So saying, I took the empty pitcher and went out leaving the door wide open. I tripped two flights of stairs to the basement. I was trembling all over lest my scheme should not prove successful. I had a confessed sense that when I kissed them in my inward recoil from them and excitement, I had called the younger man Uncle Tom and the elder Cousin Jim, and that afterward in trying to correct myself I had called them Cousin Tom and Uncle Jim. Still I was pretty sure they had not noticed it.

I slipped out of the basement door and fairly flew across the field to Farmer Brown's house. I dared not look behind me for fear I should see a multitude of shadowy shapes pursuing me. Visions, horrible visions, rose before my eyes. I imagined the burglars going downstairs to see why I was gone so long, and not finding me, killing my mother in revenge for my treachery. It seemed hours before I reached the door, although it could not have been more than a few minutes. I aroused the family, and Farmer Brown, his son and the hired man quickly prepared to return with me. Not more than ten minutes from the time I left the door of the guest room we were ascending the stairs in breathless expectation. Farmer Brown reached the door first. Instead of going in he turned to me with a blank look of inquiry on his face. I glanced in and saw that the room was empty. My worst fears had then been realized! Without a word I turned and rushed to my mother's room. Thank God! she was there, safe and sound, and still asleep. Then I went to the place where the money was hidden. It was all there. We went slowly from room to room of the whole house looking in every corner and under every sofa and table. Nothing was taken, but the men were nowhere to be found.—Ethel Wilkinson, in N. Y. A Perfect Success. 7

The Rev. A. Antoine of Refugio, Tex., writes: As far as I am able to judge, I think Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is a perfect success, for any one who suffered from a most painful nervousness as I did. I feel now like myself again after taking the Tonic.

A Strong Proof.

CHELSEA, ONT., CANADA, June, '88.

I was first attacked by epilepsy in November 1876; residing in New York I consulted the best physicians, but they could only arrest the disease, the honest ones told me then there was no cure for it—I was compelled to give up my occupation and return to Canada in 1878; since then I tried innumerable remedies and consulted some of the best physicians, but nothing benefited me until I began to use Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in September '89, since then I had not a single attack.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

Some Baking Powders Lose Their Strength Quickly.

For twenty-five years the Royal Baking Powder Company has refused to be controlled by the mania of its competitors—to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality or wholesomeness. Some lower-cost brands are now being pushed on the market, which are made of inferior materials and lose their strength quickly after the can is once opened. At the second or third baking there will be noticed a falling off in strength. It is always the case that the consumer suffers in pocket, if not in health, by accepting any substitute for the Royal Baking Powder, especially when the substitute is offered on the ground that it is cheaper.

The Royal Baking Powder is the embodiment of all the excellence that it is possible to attain in an absolutely pure powder. It is always strictly reliable. It is not only more economical because of its greater strength, but will retain its full leavening power until used, and make more wholesome food.

Was there ever any article of human consumption that has so many friends among housekeepers as the Royal Baking Powder?

LINGO FOUND GUILTY

The Jury Decides that He Murdered Mrs. Miller.

SURPRISE OVER THE VERDICT.

The Prisoner Heard His Doom Without Betraying Much Emotion.

His Counsel Will Move for a New Trial. Sentence Deferred by the Judge—When Lingo Was Taken to His Cell He Crouched Down and Was Greatly Overcome. Chalkley Leconey Jubilant.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 21.—Francis Lingo has been found guilty of murdering Mrs. Miller. The verdict was brought in by the jury last night. It caused considerable surprise, as the general impression had obtained within the last few days of the trial, and particularly since Judge Westbrook had made his plea, that the trial would end in a disagreement.

Despite a furious rain storm a crowd began to gather about the court house soon after 7 o'clock, it having been whispered that a verdict was ready. The doors were thrown open and there was a wild scramble for seats. All eyes were fixed on Lingo as he was brought in and took a seat opposite the empty jury chairs. For the first time Sheriff West took his seat immediately alongside the prisoner. This had an ominous look and the whisper went around: "They've convicted him."

Rendering the Verdict.

Judge Garrison mounted the bench and warned the spectators that any person expressing approval or disapproval of the verdict would be committed to the county jail. A minute later the jury solemnly filed in.

"How find you, gentlemen, guilty or not guilty?" the clerk asked.

There was a silence as of death in the crowded court room, and everyone was leaning forward to watch Joseph Burrough, the foreman.

"Guilty of murder in the first degree."

Tears Trickled Down the Negro's Cheeks.

A little shiver ran through Lingo's burly frame. He made no motion, but his lower lip quivered and two big tears trickled down his cheeks. His wife, who sat on a bench facing him, seemed not to comprehend that the fatal words meant the blotting out of her husband's life. She showed no emotion. The great audience restrained itself, only a low murmur sweeping around the room.

Ex-Judge Westcott said he would move for a new trial, pending which sentence was deferred. Closely guarded by the sheriff and constables, Lingo, dejected and terror stricken, was led back to his cell.

One of the jurors said that but one ballot was taken after discussing the case for an hour.

Chalkley Leconey Jubilant.

Chalkley Leconey and his friends are jubilant. They look upon the verdict as a confirmation of Leconey's innocence of the murder of his niece, as they have always declared that Lingo killed Annie Leconey as well as Mrs. Miller. Lingo's counsel have hopes of securing a new trial, but it is almost certain that the verdict will stand.

The death watch was set on the prisoner as soon as he was taken to his cell. He crouched down with his face in his hands, greatly overcome.

LAWRENCE BARRETT DEAD.

The Well Known Tragedian Succumbs to Heart Failure.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Lawrence Barrett, the actor, died last night at 10:45 o'clock at the Windsor Hotel. Death was due to heart failure and was quite sudden. His wife and his physician were with him when he died.

Mr. Barrett's illness dates from Wednesday night, when he was compelled to leave the theatre where he was engaged. It was said at the time that he was merely suffering from a severe cold and would be out in a few days. Even yesterday the reports of his condition were very favorable. Late last evening, however, his physician, Dr. Chambers, was summoned. Heart failure, superinduced by pneumonia, was the direct cause of the great tragedian's death.

Dr. Chambers says pneumonia set in Thursday morning. Mrs. Barrett, who was in Boston, was sent for and arrived Thursday evening. Dr. J. P. Oliver of Boston, Mr. Barrett's family physician, was also summoned and came on at once. A consultation was held and it was decided that Mr. Barrett's case was serious, but that if no other complications appeared the sick man might pull through. Between 9 and 10 o'clock last night there was a rapid change for the worse, and at the latter hour Mr. Barrett was in a semi-conscious condition. About 15 minutes before the end came Mr. Barrett was entirely unconscious, and so he remained until he died.

The funeral will probably take place in Boston. Edwin Booth was deeply moved when he received notice of Mr. Barrett's death.

FELL INTO AN ACID VAT.

One Man Dies in Terrible Agony and Another Maimed for Life.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., March 21.—News comes from Livingston Manor, Sullivan County, of a sad accident at the Mandeville Wood Acid Works there. In converting the crude acid into acetate of lime the fiery liquid is boiled at a high temperature in big iron kettles. While George Huftelin, one of the workmen, was passing by a group of these kettles he was partially blinded by the escaping steam and made a misstep and fell into the boiling acid up to his neck.

George Reiman, a fellow workman, who heard his shrieks of pain, sprang to his assistance and dragged him out of the fiery bath. He died shortly after in intense agony. He was 28 years old and leaves a wife and four little children.

His fellow workman, Reiman, who went to his rescue, was badly burned about his hands and forearms and may be disabled for life.

HE ESCAPED LYNCHING.

An Angry Crowd Demand the Life of an Old Lady's Assailant.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., March 21.—James F. Lanagan was arrested last night for assaulting Mrs. Julia Compton, 60 years old, a very wealthy lady, at Fairfield on March 17.

He had been in hiding since the crime was committed, and when his capture became known a large crowd assembled, and they were only prevented from lynching the prisoner by the timely arrival of assistance.

Lanagan was conveyed to Bridgeport in a carriage protected by policemen. The woman is a cripple and will die.

Arrested for Train Wrecking.

BIDDEFORD, Me., March 21.—A Boston detective arrested two young men named Kimball and Allen here, on a charge of attempting to wreck the Boston & Maine passenger train near Wells recently. They confessed that they placed the sleepers on the track, and said they were drinking at the time and did it for fun. The prisoners were taken to jail at Alfred, where they will await the action of the grand jury at the May term.

SAD STORY OF CRIME

The Unhappiness Which Followed a Secret Marriage.

HELEN POTTS' DEATH RECALLED.

She Was the Wife of Young Harris Who Gave Her the Fatal Pills.

The Unfortunate Young Woman Makes a Horrible Confession to Her Mother—Efforts to Have a Public Ceremony Postponed—The Mother's Affidavit Submitted to the District-Attorney for Action.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Quite a sensation has been caused by bringing to light the facts which caused the death of Helen Neilson Potts, a handsome and accomplished girl of 19, and a student at the Comstock Finishing School for Young Ladies on West 40th street, this city, who died on Sunday, Feb. 1 last, from an overdose of morphine.

The mother of the girl, in the interests of justice, has made an affidavit to the following:

The Unhappy Mother's Story.

"My daughter, Helen Potts, who died of morphine poisoning at the Comstock School, has been the wife of Carl W. Harris since Feb. 3, 1890. I liked the young man and his family, but refused a long engagement. A secret marriage followed. I knew nothing of it until August, when I was telegraphed for and went to my sick child. I had no suspicion of the nature of her illness for some days. Then my brother-in-law assured me it was 'the effect of sin.' When I gained courage to enter my daughter's room she saw by my face that I had been told, and said: 'Mamma, bring me the Bible,' and with her hands on that told me of the marriage. Her husband had performed a criminal operation upon her before this visit, and assured her her troubles were all over. They were not. A sharp instrument had entered the perfectly formed little boy's head and killed it some time in the latter part of June. After I was told of the marriage her husband wrote me an affectionate letter, and I began to feel that this youthful folly might well be forgiven and wrote kindly to him."

The mother then tells how her daughter and Harris were married before an alderman, and how her daughter pleaded with Harris for a religious ceremony. He had promised that it should be performed on Feb. 8. The girl died on Feb. 1 from opium and quinine pills made up by Harris at a druggist's.

Mrs. Potts then tells about meeting Harris after her daughter died. She says:

"When Dr. Harris met me he told me it was the druggist's awful mistake that had caused her death, but refused her her name in death as in life, and I listened in vain for any real grief at her untimely end in his voice. I asked him, as he could not take his true position, not to come to the funeral, but he came and was sent away. I dread beyond expression to have her name dragged through the papers, yet how can I believe she will rest in peace defrauded of life and name? If I could only believe in him, but I cannot."

The affidavit of the heartbroken mother has been submitted to the district-attorney for action. The father of young Harris is said to be a clerk in a Brooklyn establishment, and his mother prominent in the temperance movement there. His grandfather is Dr. McCready, of this city.

CONGRESSIONAL TROUBLE.

A Hitch Over the Distribution of Public Documents.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—It is probable that considerable trouble will result between ex-members of the 51st Congress and their successors of the 52d over the distribution of the immense number of public documents provided for by the Congress just ended and which are yet to be printed.

In years passed it has been the custom of the House, just before the adjournment of a Congress, to adopt a resolution allowing the members of that Congress to control the distribution of public documents until the new Congress assembles in the following December.

Such a resolution was not passed by the recent Congress, and now the members of the 52d are claiming that they have a right to all documents printed after March 4, while the members of the 51st contend that all documents authorized by that Congress, no matter when printed, belong to its members.

The Colombia Extradition Treaty.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The extradition treaty with Colombia, which has just been made public by proclamation, was ratified by the Senate two years ago. The extraditable offences are: Murder or attempted murder, counterfeiting, forgery, embezzlement, robbery, burglary, perjury or subornation of perjury, rape, arson, piracy, murder on the high seas, malicious destruction of railways, bridges, vessels, public buildings or other edifices when the act endangers human life.

No Gold Bars for Gold Coin.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Acting Secretary Nettleton directed the Assay Office at New York to decline to furnish gold bars for gold coin. In speaking of the matter, Acting Secretary Nettleton said it must not be understood that this was to be the cast-iron policy of the Treasury Department. Circumstances might occur to cause a change, but for the present, at least, he saw no reason to change the policy of refusing to supply gold bars for gold coin.

Charged With the Murder of His Wife.

BOSTON, March 21.—James Ryan was arraigned in the Cambridge District Court charged with the murder of his wife Bridget, who died Wednesday night or Thursday in their wretched home in Mohnahan Court, East Cambridge. Ryan plead not guilty. He did not seem to realize his position nor the enormity of his crime. He was held without bail for the grand jury.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

Settling an Election Contest the Last Act of the New Jersey Legislature.

TRENTON, N. J., March 21.—The 115th Legislature adjourned sine die last evening.

At 4 o'clock the House Committee on Elections reported in the McAdams-Engard contest case to unseat Engard, the Republican from the Second Camden district. The Republican members of the committee offered a minority report not to disturb him. Mr. Engard then addressed the House in his own defence and made an able speech, being frequently interrupted by applause from the Democratic side. At the conclusion of the address Speaker Bergen, Democrat, announced that he would vote for the minority report.

A vote was taken on the minority report and it was revealed that the Democrats voted with the Republicans. An effort was made to reconsider the vote.

Mr. Kerr (Dem.), chairman of the Committee on Elections, vigorously denounced the Democrats for deserting the committee.

Mr. Hankin (Dem.), of Newark, offered a compromise resolution, which was adopted, that the majority report be accepted, excepting that part which unseats Mr. Engard. This was adopted just one minute before final adjournment.

At the end of the session Speaker Bergen was presented with a magnificent gold watch and chain by his friends in the Chamber.

Seven hundred bills were introduced this session and about 320 will become laws.

THE FAILURE NOT FELT.

No Excitement Over the Closing of the Doors of the Keystone Bank.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—The closing of the doors of the Keystone Bank by order of the Comptroller of the Treasury did not affect any other institution in this city, because it had little credit since the panic.

The closing was sudden and quiet. There were but few in the building at the time, and hardly anyone in the street. The news quickly spread, however, but the intelligence did not arouse much excitement.

The bank had a capital of $500,000; deposits, $1,075,000. It held about $300,000 on the active account of the city of Philadelphia and for the State about $150,000. By last October's report the bank had an undivided surplus of $128,569.

The president was S. W. Marsh and the cashier Jonathan Hays.

The opinion is general that the bank will resume shortly with new capital and under new management.

THE CORK CONTEST.

Parnell Says that Each Side Must Provide Two Candidates.

DUBLIN, March 21.—Parnell stipulates, before consenting to resign and to accept Healy's defiance, that each side must provide two candidates, one for each seat.

The Freeman's Journal says it is rumored that Michael Davitt will appear as a candidate in opposition to Mr. Parnell at the next election in the northern division of Cork, which the latter now represents.

The Evening Telegraph says it would be an indignity for Mr. Parnell to reply to so offensive a letter as was that of Mr. Healy, "If," says the paper, "Healy wants fight, let him return and he will soon find Mr. Parnell in Cork."

The Conservatives are preparing to contest both seats in Cork if the present members should resign.

Question About Extradition.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 21.—An officer and attorney from Rochester, N. Y., presented at the State Department here a requisition from Gov. Hill for the extradition of James Hughes, who is wanted in Rochester on a charge of coercion in connection with the tailors' strike in that city. As Gov. Pattison is absent from the city no action was taken in the matter. On his return here the case will be considered. Coercion has not heretofore been considered an extraditable offense in Pennsylvania.

ITALY'S SONS MEET

The New Orleans Tragedy Discussed in Mass Meeting.

FULL REPARATION DEMANDED.

The Speeches Were Almost Terrifying in Their Vehemence.

Agitators Tried to Create Trouble, But Were Hustled from the Hall by the Police—A Meeting in Philadelphia—Parkinson Cheered by Resolutions from Boards of Trade in Nebraska.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Five thousand Italians crowded the big hall of Cooper Union last night to denounce the lynching of their brethren in New Orleans. As many more were unable to gain admittance, and an overflow meeting was held outside in a drizzling rain.

Signor A. De Angelo presided at the door meeting, and on the platform were seated about 200 prominent Italians, merchants and business men of the city.

The speeches were nearly all in the Italian tongue and were almost terrifying in their vehemence. The sentiment that the Italian race demanded satisfaction for the killing of their countrymen seemed to express the opinion of the meeting and was vigorously applauded.

An air of suppressed excitement hovered, however, to pervade those present, and it needed but a word to change them into demons. The committee in charge realized this, and it must be said to their credit that they took every precaution to avoid trouble.

That there was danger from this source was evidenced just as the meeting was about to close. Several persons in different parts of the hall arose and asked to be allowed to speak. This request was promptly refused by the chairman.

The agitators then appealed to their fellows, asking them if they meant to remain inactive, and urging them to rise and avenge the wrong done in New Orleans. The instant they began to talk this way those in charge sprang from the platform into the aisles and urged the audience to be quiet and orderly.

The Police Take a Hand.

Meanwhile the police had taken the riot inciters in hand and hustled them from the hall. It was a critical moment, and bloodshed would have followed had not the committee and police acted promptly.

All the speakers were unanimous in protesting in the name of the Italians of New York city against the [illegible] of Italians in New Orleans, and were emphatic in the demand that justice be meted out to those who were guilty of the crime. Resolutions to this effect were adopted and the meeting dispersed.

WILL GIVE LIFE FOR LIFE.

Scheme for Vengeance Disclosed by a Talkative Canadian Italian.

OTTAWA, March 21.—Antonio Scarpelli, a leader of the Italians here received a letter last night from Pennsylvania summoning him, in the name of Italy, to send recruits for an army which is to avenge late New Orleans. A reporter talked with him when he was inquiring from Scarpelli the way clerk as to transportation.

He said there were already 3,000 men under oath to avenge force with force, and each man was willing to die, provided he first killed a New Orleans citizen.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

While Quarreling a Man Shot His Wife Dead and Then Killed Himself.

ST. ALBANS, Vt., March 21.—A few minutes after 7 o'clock last night, Fred T. Harding, a resident of this town, shot and killed his wife Ellen, and then committed suicide by firing a ball through his heart.

Harding and his wife had a quarrel recently and she left him. Yesterday they met and went to a disreputable house in the suburbs, where they spent the afternoon. They left the house at about 7 o'clock and walked in the direction of the village. They quarreled on the road and Harding drew his pistol and shot his wife dead. He then shot himself, dying instantly.

Mrs. Harding was a woman of dissolute habits, named Ellen Laduc, when he married her. She formerly lived in East Georgia. The couple quarrelled frequently and the tragedy did not cause much surprise in the village.

It is believed that the murder and suicide were premeditated as Harding left a letter addressed to his wife's father, but its contents are not known.

LONDON, March 21.—Superstitious sailors are noting, in connection with the Utopia disaster, that the Rodney Ironclad, which sank the Utopia, had just returned from Tangier after conveying the body of the late Sir William Green, British Minister at Morocco, from Mazagan. The Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut delivered an address before the Epworth Leagues and Christian Endeavor Societies of Rahway, last evening.

The marriage took place in New York, Thursday, of Frederic A. Pollock, of West Seventh street, this city, and Annie L., daughter of Christopher Fine, of New York city. The Rev. William Snodgrass officiated.

The Hyde-French dam case was argued before the Chancellor, the other day, by Counsellors Marsh and Reed. As THE PRESS said some time ago, it is a battle between counsel entirely. However the decision goes, it means a defeat for the counsel on the losing side.

Counselors Marsh and Bergen Agree to Wait.

The case of the City vs. the Water Supply Company's contractor and his men, came up before Judge Codington for a hearing this morning. The charge was a violation of the city ordinance against digging up the streets without permission of the Council.

As the Supreme Court has, since the arrest of the defendants, expressed its desire to look into the ordinance and decide whether it has any force against the Plainfield Water Supply Company acting under its own special charter, Corporation Counsel Marsh for the city, and Frank S. Bergen for the Company, agreed to a postponement of the hearing until the Supreme Court's decision is received.

The Corporation Counsel moved the case and the defendant's counsel said he was ready. Mr. Marsh inquired of Capt. Grant whether the digging complained of had taken place on ground between the pumping station and Cedar Brook. Mr. Grant said that it had. Mr. Marsh produced and read the recent order of the Court published exclusively in THE PRESS, which stayed the city from enforcing the ordinance on that particular street until further order of the Supreme Court, and stated that in view of Captain Grant's statement it would be impossible for the City Court to proceed further with the case until further orders of the Supreme Court. To do so would be to be guilty of contempt of court, for which all concerned would be liable to attachment. He suggested that the Court make no order, but leave it to the counsel for the city to bring up the case at the earliest time the Supreme Court would permit. This was adopted.

Another Bowling Team.

PLAINFIELD'S RIGHTS ANNULLED.

Three Men to be Appointed by the Governor May Grant Licenses to Those the Council Refuses, and May Reduce the Fee to $250.

One of the last acts of the 115th Legislature that adjourned at Trenton yesterday, was the passage of a law authorizing the Governor to appoint county boards of excise of three men each who shall grant or revoke licenses as they see fit, or reduce any fee therefore if they please.

The law is intended to affect Little Egg Harbor and such places in South Jersey where the people voted under the Werts law, to impose $2,000 license upon hotels or saloons; and also such cities as Plainfield, where the council sometimes refuses to grant licenses.

The first section enacts that "upon the condition hereinafter stated there shall be in each county of this State a board to be known and designated as the 'County Board of License Commissioners' in and for the respective counties; it shall consist of three members, to be appointed by the Governor; such board may be appointed in any county upon the application of not less than one hundred citizens, who shall represent to the Governor, in writing, that such a board is desired in said county; such commissioners shall hold office for a term of five years and until the appointment of their successors; they shall serve without compensation; they may appoint a secretary in each county whose salary shall be fixed by the board of chosen freeholders of such county, but shall not in any case exceed five hundred dollars per annum."

The second section provides "That such boards shall have general supervision and control of the wholesale and retail sale of spirituous, vinous, malt and brewed liquors, except where the license for the sale thereof has been granted by a court, in their respective counties."

Section four relates to Plainfield. It reads: "That if any commissioner, board or other body, other than a court or judge thereof, having the power to grant licenses to sell liquor within this State, shall neglect or refuse to grant a license to any applicant, he or she may apply to the board hereby created in the county in which refusal is made, who, in their discretion, may grant such license."

Section five says "That where complaint shall be made to any such board in writing, signed by one hundred citizens of any county for which such board was appointed, that the maximum fee fixed under any law of this State for a license to sell any kind of liquor is unjust and oppressive, it shall be lawful for such board to reduce such fee to a sum not less than the minimum amount fixed as a license fee by such law for the sale of such liquor."

NEWS OF A THRIVING CHURCH.

Items of General Interest from the Rev. Mr. Mitchell's "Visitor."

The following paragraphs of general interest are selected from the current number of The Visitor, the organ of the Plainfield Methodist Episcopal church, dated March 20:

Mrs. John D. Moore, of 20 Chatham street, is still quite ill, being confined to her bed.

Clifford W. McGee will be home next week from Yale, to spend the Spring vacation.

Mrs. D. E. Davis has returned from visiting her brother, D. H. Mulford, at Vineland.

Chas. E. Scudder has returned from a two weeks' visit to his parents in New York State.

Geo. C. Mahon and family will soon remove to their own homestead on West Seventh street.

Miss Mabel VanMiddlesworth has been home from Newark, visiting for a brief time with her parents.

Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, of 88 West Second street, will soon remove with her family to Philadelphia.

Miss Maria Penny will be absent for the Spring and Summer visiting friends and relatives in New England.

On Sabbath afternoon, Feb. 22, there were 376 in the Sunday school, the largest attendance in several years.

Dr. VanMeter is expected to preach for us on Conference Sabbath, April 12. A warm welcome awaits his coming.

Mrs. Chas. L. McBride, of 41 Somerset street, recently enjoyed a visit from her mother, whose home is in Sing Sing.

Mrs. J. G. Cadmus expects to spend the Summer with relatives in Pennsylvania. She will continue to make Plainfield her home.

The Young Ladies' Mission Band held recently a very delightful social at the residence of John Chandler, 28 East Third street.

Dr. Tuttle was one of the minority in the Baltimore Conference who voted for the admittance of women as delegates to the General Conference.

Mrs. George R. Cornwell has been confined to the house for several weeks. Her many friends will rejoice to see her at the church services again.

Our last Communion service was largely attended, and about 425 communed. The Rev. Mr. Hyde and Dr. Hurlbut assisted the pastor in the services.

The entire church is under obligation to Mrs. Geo. H. Burgess for the very beautiful baskets of cut flowers with which she has been supplying the pulpit.

Miss Pennock, of Omaha, Neb., a friend of Dr. Hurlbut, sang most sweetly at the "Martha Washington Tea Party." She will always be welcomed in Plainfield.

It is the "Monroe Avenue chapel." So the Official Board has decreed. It is a good name, euphonious, and at the same time designating the location of the chapel.

Mr. James McGee led the prayer meeting last Wednesday evening. There was a large attendance and a good meeting. It is always a good meeting when Mr. McGee leads it.

The contracts are being awarded for the erection of the chapel in North Plainfield on the corner of Somerset street and Park place. We hope to have the building ready for dedication in the Autumn.

Quite a large number of our people have been sick this winter with la grippe. The pastor knows how to sympathize with them. He places it next to sea-sickness for producing unexpressible wretchedness.

The pastor hopes to be in his pulpit next Sabbath. He still has a very sore throat which stubbornly resists treatment. He feels, however, that Dr. Jenkins will succeed, so far as human skill can be effective in the case.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Joy are at home in their beautiful and convenient house on Orchard place, Washington Park. A large number of friends have called to wish them happiness in their new estate.

Very few of our church members leave their own services to attend elsewhere. Those who do are ashamed of it and rarely get any good. "The rolling stone gathers no moss," and the rolling Christian gathers as little blessing.

Master Clarence Mills is making rapid progress on the violin. He surprised us all with his very fine playing at the "Tea Party." Clarence's success has fired the ambition of several other boys, and they are now taking lessons from the same musical instructor.

Mrs. Jacob Voehl has been confined to her house for about one month. She is greatly missed, not only in the church services, but in the many homes where she goes as a very evangel of good cheer and helpfulness.

The regular attendance of our Sunday-school teachers gives great joy to the Superintendent. Rarely is a teacher absent without sufficient excuse. This faithfulness on the part of our teachers has much to do with the increasing prosperity of our school.

Both Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jackson have been ill in New York. Both have recovered and return this week to their Crescent avenue home. Mr. Jackson was in his place in the Sunday-school last Sabbath and received a warm welcome home.

The Conference will be held April 8, at Washington, N. J. Bishop Mallalieu will preside. Our Conference will vote on the admittance of woman delegates to the General Conference. It is safe to predict that a large majority will not favor their election.

At the last monthly missionary meeting in the Sunday-school, the new President of the Society, C. C. Cokefair, presided, and the largest collection in the history of the Society was taken. The School will give $450 missionary money this conference year.

At the last meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Charles C. Cokefair; Vice President, Mrs. P. Minturn Smith; Secretary, Mrs. Colles T. Pond; Treasurer, Miss Mary Brown; Assistant Treasurer, Mrs. L. J. Spicer.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Taft recently celebrated their fifth wedding anniversary. A number of their neighbors called to spend the evening and leave some very beautiful tokens of their regard. The affair was very informal, and all the more pleasant on that account.

Dr. Tuttle is to give us a Sabbath in the near future. He is as popular a preacher in Baltimore as he always has been in other places. They say they will think of nothing else than keeping him for at least five years at Mt. Vernon Place. The Doctor is as pleased with the church, as the church is with him. Happy pastor, happy people.

The pastor learned while in Baltimore that Dr. VanMeter is the most popular teacher in the Woman's College. When the young ladies are to take any kind of a pleasure trip they always ask for Dr. VanMeter as chaperon. The class in Bible study, in charge of the Doctor, recently sent to the faculty a request for one hour's extra work each day in that department. This will be no surprise to the Doctor's many friends in Plainfield.

—Kid gloves a specialty, at Peck's.

PLAINFIELD RAPID TRANSIT.

ANOTHER STEP FORWARD, IN STREET RAILWAY MATTERS.

Here Is an Ordinance, Iron-Clad in Its Requirements, Planning to Give the City the Very Best Service and Equipment in the World—New Converts and Powerful Allies to the Project Every Day—Mayor Gilbert the Latest.

The project of giving Plainfield a superior system of rapid transit was materially advanced at last night's meeting of the City Common Council, when an ordinance was started through the mill of municipal legislation granting to The Plainfield Street Railway Company the right to construct and operate a surface road of as excellent pattern as that of The Rapid Transit Company of Newark, over the following route:

In Somerset street, from the North Plainfield line to Front street; through Front street to Park avenue, through Park avenue to Sixth street, through Sixth street to Plainfield avenue, through Plainfield avenue to Seventh street, through Seventh street to Monroe avenue, through Monroe avenue to Fourth street, through Fourth street to Grant avenue, through Grant avenue to Front street, through Front street to Park avenue, through Park avenue to North avenue, through North avenue to Peace street, through Peace street and Broadway to Woodland avenue, through Woodland avenue to LaGrande avenue, through LaGrande avenue to Belvidere avenue, and through Belvidere avenue to South avenue.

The proposed ordinance covers the matter in every detail, but will probably undergo considerable amendment before final passage. As it stands at present it provides that a double track shall be laid on Front street from Grant avenue to Park avenue, that on the other streets of the route the track shall be single and in the middle of the roadway, that suitable turnouts and switches, none of which shall exceed 150 feet in length, shall be constructed, that the company shall keep in repair the road bed between tracks and eighteen inches on each side, that slush, snow and ice removed from the tracks shall be spread out evenly over the street surface, that bridges over gutters shall be of iron, that the most approved steel rails shall be used, that the company shall be liable for all damages, that the cars shall not be kept standing so as to obstruct cross streets or cross walks, that the cars shall be of the vestibule pattern, that the franchise shall be revocable by failure to put the system into complete operation within nine months after the granting of the franchise, that the cars shall be lighted by electricity and shall be of pattern similar to those of the Rapid Transit system in Newark, with "climax" or other noiseless gearing, that the cars shall be run at a speed not greater than twelve miles an hour, that the propelling force shall be electricity, and the system that of overhead wires, that the poles shall be of steel or iron, standing between the curb and sidewalk, that the trolley wires shall be properly guarded from contact with tree branches and other wires, that the current used shall not exceed 500 volts, that the fare for passengers shall be the uniform rate of 5 cents, except for all children between the ages of 4 and 10 years, and for all school children and school teachers, for whom the fare shall be three cents, that children under 4 years of age shall ride free, that for the first 5 years no license fee shall be charged, that after five years a fee of $10 per car per year shall be paid to the city, that after ten years the fee per car shall be $20, that cars shall run at intervals of 15 minutes between the hours of 6 and 10 a. m., 30 minutes between 10 and 3, 15 minutes between 3 and 8, and 30 minutes between 8 and 12, this headway to be reduced as traffic may require, that at any time when a commission of three electrical experts, to be chosen by the city and company, shall decide that a better system than the trolley is practicable that system shall be substituted, and that the company shall file with the city, a bond of $20,000 for the faithful observance of the ordinance.

Against the proposed street railway system considerable objection was made.

James E. Martine, the first citizen to take the floor, held that the overhead system was dangerous, unsightly and noisy. The city even now was confronted with the problem what to do with the wires already up, and to string more wires overhead would be a crime. He believed rapid transit to be desirable, but held that there were better systems procurable than this proposed. Disaster after disaster was sure to follow the overhead wire. The trolley system might be cheaper than others for the railway company, but when the city was giving away a valuable privilege for a very little stipend cheapness ought not to be an element of the bargain. The city ought to start with the best—with the storage-battery system, which he considered fully practicable. To introduce the trolley system was to bring shame and sadness to Plainfield, and be the cause of its ruin.

Before any others spoke, City Clerk Coward read a number of written protests.

Henry P. Talmadge, O. T. Waring, J. L. Anthony, H. E. Bowen, Constantine P. Ralli, S. A. Haines, J. J. Pollion, George Taylor, Charles Fisk, and others, protested against running the road through Belvidere avenue, as thereby one of the most beautiful pleasure drives in the city would be spoiled. Mr. Bowen explained later that the Netherwood people favored the road, and wanted it; it would bring hundreds of people there, and develop $500,000 worth of property which The Belvidere Land Improvement Company were now holding only in the hope that the railway would be built; they merely wished a slight change of route so that Belvidere avenue should not be touched.

Stephen Cahoone was opposed to the railway as a whole, and especially wanted it kept off Broadway. He believed the trolley to be fraught with great danger to human life.

M. L. C. Fisk, Charles Potter, and others, desired to examine the papers purporting to bear the written consent of property-owners along certain streets of the route, and claimed that the required one-half had not given consent.

Wm. Thompson, Pliny Fisk, Albert Yenino, S. St. John McCutchen, and others, were opposed to the trolley, as being neither convenient nor safe, and held that not only was there no extensive public demand for the railway but that it would depreciate the value of property.

J. W. Johnson, S. Cahoone, Isaac L. Miller, A. D. Cook, J. Martine, I. C. Pierson, S. A. Ginna, and others, desired opportunity to examine the alleged written consent of property-owners, claimed that the required one-half had not signed, and were opposed to the invasion of Broadway.

Wilson Fisk petitioned that the track down Broadway be put outside of the macadam, instead of in the centre of the street.

C. W. Opdyke, in a semi-humorous letter, spoke of the torrent that swept like a mill-race down the Broadway hill, after every rain, cutting the street into big gulfs that reminded one of the canals of the city of Amsterdam. These washouts were not the result of any peculiar taste on the part of the inhabitants; they would be glad to be rid of them. He asked that the railway company be compelled to curb and pave Broadway substantially at that point, so that there would be room to drive on each side of the track. The cost, he thought, would be from $3,000 to $4,000.

Isaac L. Miller, W. K. McClure, S. E. Birdsall, Hermann Simmonds, H. C. Squires, F. Ruttman, and others, protested against extending the road through Broadway.

E. R. Pope, J. Frank Hubbard, J. W. Murray, H. H. Lowrie, and others, were opposed to the trolley system for Park avenue, and preferred the storage-battery. They were also skeptical about the required fifty per cent. of signatures granting consent having been obtained.

Chas. Schipper, E. Woltman, James A. Taylor, and others, were opposed to the railway going through West Seventh street.

When these petitions had all been read, referred to the proper committees, or placed on file, Chandler W. Riker, representing The Plainfield Street Railway Company, was given the floor. He answered in detail the charge that the trolley system was dangerous to life, and quoted as high authority as Prof. Brackett of Princeton, and Thos. A. Edison, to show that anyone could easily take the full shock of 500 volts from the railway wires, without serious injury. Companies that insured railways against damages resulting from accidents, he said, reported that the accidents on electric street railways were 25 per cent. less than on horse railways, and gave a better rate of insurance to the electric companies. There was little danger of collision, as the motor could be instantly reversed, a powerful brake applied, and the car quickly stopped. The poles used were far less unsightly than telegraph or telephone, or even electric light poles. The storage-battery system, he explained, was far from being practicable. Not a single car had been sold to a street railway company since 1882. A storage car could run down hill, but it took a dozen horses all day to pull it back. Edison himself said that there must be a great radical change in the storage system before it could be used successfully. There were only two systems open to Plainfield—horse cars and the trolley. The cable was not to be thought of, as it must have tremendous traffic, with cars full of passengers running every three or four minutes, to pay expenses. Besides, the cable was jerky, unsatisfactory, uncertain, and the cause of a great number of accidents—four times as many as the trolley system. The trolley was not a cheap system; it cost $40,000 per mile to construct. If the city wanted a street railway, the company would put in the best; indeed, the proposed ordinance called for the very best equipment and service in the country.

In response to a query from E. P. Williams, Mr. Riker said that land along the line of the Rapid Transit road in Newark had doubled in value since the construction of the system.

Charles W. Opdyke asked that the ordinance be withheld from passage, so that the citizens could go to Newark, see the road in operation, and judge for themselves. The Council, he said, had no right to rush the matter through without giving the citizens a chance for examination. He thought that the franchise, which was a valuable, money-making one, ought to be sold to the highest, best bidder.

Isaac L. Miller stated that he had most of the residents of Broadway with him opposed to running the line along that thoroughfare. It was no comfort to him to know that the poles and wires to be used were not as unsightly as were some others—that they were not so bad but they might be worse. It was idle to say that there was no danger in the trolley system. It was playing with lightning, and the penalty was death. He listened to the ordidance with profound astonishment. It was an insult to the citizens to suggest such a proposition as would tear up, disfigure and ruin the streets, the only public improvement Plainfield had to be proud of.

E. P. Williams said he thought it time to demonstrate that a select few did n't own the streets. There was too much meanness of spirit prevailing. To the people in the suburbs the railway was a crying need. It was a shame that two or three men on West Seventh street and Broadway should be so selfish in the matter, and should seek to keep Plainfield a country village.

Mayor Gilbert was asked by President Smith for his views, just as he was about to retire from the meeting. The Mayor responded with the statement that he was the servant of the people, and what they wanted he wanted; what the people wanted he pledged himself to work for faithfully. Candor compelled him to state, he added, that he had been prejudiced against the proposed overhead system, had felt that it was something Plainfield did not want. But he had made a personal examination of the system in operation in Newark, and had been greatly disappointed. It was not the hideous, unsightly, noisy thing he had anticipated; it was not entirely objectionable. The cars were nice, the tracks were substantial and well-laid, and he was surprised that there was so little noise; the ordinary horse car made fully as much. He honestly preferred this to a horse railway. There were objections to this as to every system, but he honestly believed that as the people became familiar with it they would like it. Regarding the policy of passing the proposed ordinance, he had to say—and he said it with emphasis—that it was not wise to try to pass the ordinance to its second reading that night. Be deliberate—he said. Impress upon the people that you are not trying to rush this thing through with undue haste. I go about among the people, and hear it generally expressed that this thing is being unduly hurried. The idea is that this is being pushed through. That is not right, not wise. You ought to have the people with you; you are their servants; you ought to find what is their will, and conform thereto. This is one of the most important things ever presented before us. Put yourselves in harmony with the people, and give them every opportunity to study the matter and see the good instead of the bad. I would suggest that you merely read the ordinance once, and defer the second reading. It is full of objections, and needs amendment. Don't give away a valuable franchise for a mere pittance. People seem inclined to withdraw their consents. I supposed that the legal consents had been obtained all along the route. Don't try to force the railway on the people if you are satisfied that the majority do not want it.

The Mayor was loudly applauded.

Dr. J. T. Fritts said that the rights of way had been in his possession two years, and that no people had sought to withdraw their consents except a few who explained that they understood that the road was to be like that at Asbury Park, and that they did n't want that kind. On finding out just what the road was to be they seemed entirely satisfied.

Councilman Hetfield said that there had been and would be no attempt nor desire to rush any matter through Council. The Councilmen and various citizens had visited Newark, had examined the road, and were entirely satisfied. He did n't believe that any five of the remonstrants had seen the road in operation. They did n't know what they were talking about. As soon as they should see the road they too would be converted into infatuation for it.

The ordinance was placed on its first reading, laid on the table till the next meeting, and ordered published in THE PRESS and the Central Times.

The Committee on Laws and Ordinances were instructed to examine the written consents of property-owners and to see if they had been legally obtained.

All of this action was unanimous and harmonious. All the Councilmen were present.

The Council adjourned at midnight till March 30.

Women in the Church.

By a vote of 128 to 54 the New Jersey M. E. Conference, in session at Trenton, Thursday, voted against permitting women to become eligible to election as lay delegates to the electoral and general conferences. It is more than probable that the Newark conference will follow this lead. Little interest was taken in the question in this State; the meetings at which the members of the churches voted on it were, as a rule, not largely attended; and almost everywhere, in the absence of earnest championship of the women's cause, the majority declared against the new movement.

It is in the West that the overwhelming popular vote in favor of the extension of women's rights was piled up. The New Jersey Conference and the New Jersey churches may vote to debar from the high councils of the denomination all representatives of the sex which furnish it with the majority of its members and the most devoted, faithful and earnest of its adherents, but in a few years, it is thought, they will have to submit to the inevitable.

The feminine delegates to general conferences yet to be are marching on, and nobody need be surprised if, out of the West, before very long, comes in triumphal progress the woman born to be a Bishop.

TRUTH TO PLEASE.

The Pharisee informed the Lord
How good a life he led;
The Publican shrank back in shame,
And smote his breast instead;
But when the Lord, in tender love,
The penitent commended,
The hypocrite, with heart unchanged,
Straightway his prayer amended.

Said he: "The man who says he's worst
Is by the Lord thought best;"
So next when he to worship went,
As Publican he drest,
And smote upon his hollow heart,
And bowed him down and groaned,
And, proud of his humility,
His unfelt sins he owned.

The Publican, an altered man,
Came, too, with lifted head,
And joyfully gave thanks to God
For the new life he led:
The Lord again his offering took,
Still spurned the Pharisee's,
For sometimes tears, and sometimes thanks,
But only Truth can please.

NECESSARY TO SUCCESS.

Morality and Godliness Always Essential to a Successful Career of Any Kind.

A man may be a professor of religion, a nominal Christian, and yet be destitute of moral principle. But that such a one can lead a useful and successful Christian life, act honorably and consistently, secure the confidence and respect of his fellow men, and by no word or act of his exhibit the falsity of his pretensions, is an impossibility. A man may play the hypocrite and pass for a genuine Christian for a time, with apparent success, but the deception can not always last; sooner or later the mask will be removed, and he will appear in his true character.

But while it will be generally admitted that a man who is not a subject of Divine grace, and whose life is not regulated by the principles of pure morality and religion, can not meet the requirements or attain the ends of the Christian profession, it is a common opinion that Christian morality is not essential to success in business or political life. It is even maintained that the principles of morality and religion have no place in politics, and that to be successful in worldly business a man must not be hampered by the laws of Christianity.

But what are the facts which anyone may gather from his own observation? Are they not these: That the great majority of the most successful men in the professions of law, medicine, in all lawful, secular pursuits, in railway management, in manufacturing, in merchandising, in civil and military life, are men who are strictly moral, and generally men of positive religious character? The Astors, the Vanderbilts, Mr. Rockefeller, and scores of other millionaires that might be named, are men who show their respect for Christianity, and in private and public life recognize their subjection to Divine authority.

What was the character of the men who rose to successful leadership in our late civil war? Were they drunkards, gamblers, socialists, agnostics or infidels? Not one of them. The leading and most successful naval commanders on both sides were not only moral, but Christian men. The armies as well as the navies were led by men who believed in "the God of battles." Lincoln, Grant, Lee and Jackson believed every word of the decalogue.

Examples have been multiplied on every hand of the failure of men to achieve success who lacked moral principle. They were brilliant men. They had a promising future before them. They were supported by hosts of friends and admirers. They possessed every element of success, save one; but that was the all-important one—moral integrity. Lacking this one thing, which would have given them faithfulness to principle, consistency of action, steadfastness of purpose, and enabled them to retain the respect and confidence of honorable men, they failed, and brought disgrace upon themselves, humiliation upon their friends, and, in some instances, injury to a cause which seems almost irreparable.

That young man who starts out in life with the idea that "righteousness and temperance," honesty and integrity, are not essential to permanent success makes a great mistake. "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." Godliness, pure religion, is profitable to every man in every relation and business of life. Other things being equal, the upright man will have a clearer head, better judgment, more prudence, a better knowledge of men, and a truer estimate of all the conditions and elements of success, than the man who is blinded by self-interest, and negligent of the claims of moral rectitude.—United Presbyterian.

BROUGHT HIM TO GOD.

The Message Left an Avowed Infidel by the Pages of a Burning Bible.

Mr. J. H. McEwen says: "I knew a man, an avowed infidel, who hated God's Word with a most virulent hatred. To show his abhorrence of it, he burned all the Bibles and books of a religious nature in his house. He resolved that never again should a page bearing the name of God upon it enter his house. Time passed on, and one day as he was going through an old lumber-room he spied, under a heap of old books, the well-known covers. Kneeling down, he drew it out, and there met his eye the familiar words, 'Holy Bible.' With a frown of displeasure he lifted the book between his finger and thumb, as if its very touch would contaminate, and hurried down stairs and gathered the whole household together to witness the destruction of that Bible. The fire was stirred into a blaze, and the Word of God cast into the flames. It fell wide open, and as the master of the house stood gloating over its destruction, and watching its leaves scorch and shrivel up, his eyes caught the words: 'Every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds be reproved.' These words shot into his heart with sudden force. 'Ah,' he thought, 'that is just what I have been doing, hating the light, perhaps I am in darkness all the while!' By degrees the awful conviction forced itself upon him that he was going with headlong speed to his ruin. His anxiety increased, until he could bear it no longer. He knew a Christian who he thought could help him. Going to his house he told him his difficulty, and God's way of salvation was shown him. The result was that soon he accepted Christ and became His most devoted follower."—Christian Record.

Eternal Things.

The only things which endure are moral truths and the characters which they form. No matter what changes occur in human society or in the realms of the physical world, no matter whether the world or the universe changes or not, right is right, and always will be. Goodness is better than sin. Love, charity, self-sacrifice and holiness remain the same, and ever must. God is "the same yesterday, to-day and forever," and as the Divine character is unchanging, so is that imitation and reflection of it which men and women are permitted, and enabled by Divine grace, to attain. To this holiness change in the sense of development and further culture must be possible, but not in the sense that its nature can vary. The eternal endurance of righteousness is an inspiring fact which nothing can disprove, and on which we may depend safely.—United Presbyterian.

How to Help the Meeting.

Come.
Come early.
Take a front seat.
Bring some body else.
Don't start a discussion.
Make the stranger welcome.
Talk the meeting up and not down.
If the meeting drags, don't you drag; make it snap somehow.
Don't think of that engagement to-morrow. Too much world in your heart will act like water on a fire.
Look just as pleasant as you can. It is contagious. Remember that it is God's service and not the human being leading.
Sing. Suppose you do not know one note from another, you will feel better for having tried, and it will encourage others.
Finally, take home that part of the meeting that hit you the hardest and think it over. Don't pass it over your shoulder to the one back of you.—Geo. E. Strong, in Ram's Horn.

Judge with a Wise Tongue.

It is sometimes as much of a duty to overlook imperfections as it is to see excelencies. In this world there is nothing perfect; and if we look for faults we can easily find them; and if we give much attention to them, we miss many things which are better worth seeing. Without doubt there are times when imperfections should be noted and openly rebuked, but the teacher who corrects all the faults in his scholars would be a failure, for he would have time for nothing else. Neighbors who never overlook each other's faults can not live in peace. The members of a congregation who are always pointing out their pastor's weaknesses will not be profited by his instructions and labors. He is a happy and useful man who knows when it is best to close his eyes —United Presbyterian.

Temporal Success Not Enough.

Ransack the whole earth and show me one man who has been made happy by temporal success. You can not find one of the millions and hundreds of millions, not one. First, a man wants to get a living. Having obtained a living he wants to get a competency. Having obtained a competency he wants to get a superfluity. Having obtained a superfluity he wants more—more. The husks of this wilderness can never satisfy the hunger of the soul. A lion is carnivorous, and wants meat; an ox is gramnivorous, and wants grass; but man is omnivorous and wants everything. The buckets of this world's pleasure are not large enough to bring up water to slake the thirst of the soul.—Talmage, in N. Y. Observer.

WISE SAYINGS.

—Beware of despairing about yourself; you are commanded to put your trust in God and not in yourself.—Augustine.

—What a joy there is in throwing the heart into an earnest prayer in behalf of those who need our prayers!—United Presbyterian.

—A good many people are afraid to open their pocket-books very wide, for fear the Lord will see how much they have in them, and want it all.—Ram's Horn.

—All the doors that lead inward to the secret place of the Most High are doors outward—out of self, out of smallness, out of wrong.—George Macdonald.

—To know one's self is an advantage; to correct one's self a virtue; and to give thanks to God the means to obtain success and perseverance.—Bossuet.

—It is questionable whether to do good from vanity is not as bad as to do evil with a relish. The first is the idolatry of self, the worship of vain glory. The second is but the doing evil outright without circumlocution or deception.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

—The promises of the Bible compass every human want and woe. Having these laid up in memory, hidden away in the heart, is food laid up in summer for the winter of want.—Standard.

—He that is habituated to deceptions and artificialities in trifles will try in vain to be true in matters of importance; for truth is a thing of habit rather than of will. You can not in any given case by any sudden and single effort will to be true, if the habit of your life has been insincere.—F. W. Robertson.

—"Busybodies" are three times referred to in the Bible, and always with disapproval. They are persons who concern themselves a great deal about the affairs of other persons when they have properly and rightfully nothing to do with them, and should be content to mind their own business. Such persons are a standing nuisance to every circle in which they move. They are usually exaggerating "tattlers" as well as busybodies.—N. Y. Independent.

FOR LITTLE PEOPLE.

WHAT A BOY HAS LEARNED.

I've learned to-day two things quite new—
At least they're new to me—
I think I'd better tell to you;
They may help, you see.

This is the first—a pocket-knife
That opens and that shuts—
Is dangerous to human life,
Because it's sharp, and cuts.

The second is, that fire hot,
That in the furnace burns,
Is rather apt to hurt than not
The boy who never learns

To keep his fingers from the grate.
These things from wisdom's shelf,
In confidence to you I'd state,
I've learned all by myself.
—John K. Bangs, in Harper's Young People.

ROXIE'S DREAM.

How Too Much Jelly Cured a Little Girl of Many Faults.

She was such a jolly little dumpling of a girl that the whole house was brighter when she was in it. Her grandma was a very young grandma, not at all like the grandmas in the picture books, with a cap, kerchief and glasses, but a grandma who wore dresses like Roxie's mamma, and yet who was the very best kind of grandma; she could play games, and, holding Roxie on her kneb, would sit at the piano and play all Roxie's favorite songs, and sing them in such sweet, low tones that Roxie's little curly head would rest heavier and heavier against grandma's pretty gown, and the song would be sung softer and softer, and the next thing Roxie would know, she would find herself all covered up on grandma's wide, soft couch among the big pillows like a bird in a downy nest just waking up from a lovely nap. Carlo would raise his great head with the long, silky ears, and then get up on his feet and come to her and lick her fat, chubby hand with his pink tongue; but before Roxie was really awake grandma would surely come in and lift her in her arms and carry her downstairs to get a cup of milk.

This day Josephine, the cook, had several glasses of jelly out on the table, and, of course, Roxie wanted some. Grandma gave her one teaspoonful in tiny bits, and told her any more would not be good for so small a girl. Roxie's mamma came in—a dear, sweet little mamma, with soft, light hair like Roxie's on her forehead, and soft pink in her cheeks, just like Roxie's. She knew what that wrinkle on Roxie's forehead meant, and she said very gayly: "Let us run out and see the chickens." Roxie jumped down and trotted out after her mamma, all tied up in a big shawl. The wrinkle disappeared, and the clouds all floated away from the jolly eyes, and Roxie forgot about the jelly. After lunch the grandma and mamma went out to make calls and Josephine asked if she might have Roxie for the afternoon, instead of Mary, the upstairs girl, who had had her the afternoon before. Roxie's nurse was sick. When Roxie went into the kitchen she found in a row on the kitchen table a ginger-bread man, horse, rooster, cat and pig. She had a Noah's ark at once, with the salt-box as the ark. For an hour Josephine and Roxie had a most delightful time. And then—I am sure I do not know what suggested it—Roxie said, very sweetly:

"'Phine, I likes jelly."

"Do you, shure?" said Josephine. "Shure, it is good when it is good, but its poor 'nough stuff when it is not."

"I think your jelly is very good," remarked Roxie, snuggling still closer to Josephine.

"Do you now? thin you shall have some," and Josephine went at once to the closet and brought out a glass, and got Roxie's oatmeal spoon and gave them both to Roxie.

Roxie's cheeks were very red, and she did not put the spoon in the jelly at once. She patted it, and held it up to the light, and told Josephine it was "beautiful," and then, looking quickly over her shoulder, she just put the tip of her spoon into the jelly, and took the tiniest piece; but the next taste was larger, and I am very sorry to have to tell it, but in a very few minutes more than half the jelly was gone, and part of it was taken out with her finger. Dear! if mamma had seen that!

"Put it away, 'Phine," said Roxie. "I don't 'ike jelly so welly much as I did," and Roxie gave a queer little shudder.

"Shure, it's cowld ye are, precious," said Josephine, running to the range and giving it a vigorous shake, and, pulling the big rocker in front of the range, she took Roxie in her lap, and began crooning a song of the most doleful description of a sailor lad who was lost at sea, and whose lady-love died of grief; the last Roxie remembered was a description of a tombstone decorated with turtle-doves. Roxie wondered and wondered what turtle-doves were, and then she found herself with her finger in her mouth, and she could not get it out. Carlo, with the kitten on his head, would not have any thing to do with her, while the old cat mewed so, it sounded like "Jelly;" the rooster crowed as loud as he could, "Jelly f-i-n-g-e-r-s!" while grandma's lovely green-parrot turned her back indignantly, and would not notice Roxie. Neither would Josephine notice her, because Roxie's finger was in her mouth, but made beautiful ginger-bread toys for a round-faced little black girl, who always ate nicely with a spoon; and mamma did not know her, and grandma would not notice her, they were both so delighted with a jolly baby who never cried when it was washed, but just put its little round head in the basin and laughed through the water that ran over its face when it lifted it up. This was really more than Roxie could bear, and she cried out: "I 'on't cry, or eat with my fin'ers."

And then somebody said: "Why, Roxie, darling, it is mamma; your own dear mamma!"

And Roxie opened her eyes into her mamma's face, with grandma's face just over her shoulder, and they cuddled and petted Roxie, who at last told them her horrid dream.

Of course it was a dream. Did you not guess?

Was not this strange? Roxie really tried not to cry when she was washed, and she very, very seldom put her finger in her mouth, and she never liked jelly again.—Alice Dalton, in Christian Union.

GETTING KNOWLEDGE.

Charles Dudley Warner on the Habit of Attention and the Reading of Books.

An active-minded boy or girl can find out a great deal about the world we live in by the habit of attention, by looking around; and he or she can get much inspiration from the example of good men and women. But this knowledge can be added to indefinitely by reading, and people will read if they have a genuine desire to know things, and are not, as we say, "too lazy to live." When I hear a boy say that he does not know what to read, I wonder if he has no curiosity. Is there nothing that he wants to know about? Most children ask questions. It often happens that the persons they ask can not answer the questions. Now, it is the purpose of books to do just this thing which the particular person asked can not do. And it must be borne in mind that curiosity is of many kinds; curiosity about facts, about emotions, about what happened long ago, about what is taking place now, about the people who lived ages ago, the people who live now, about others and about one's self. So it happens that one wants to read science, and poetry, and history, and biography, and romances, and the daily news.

It is quite impossible to lay down rules for reading that will suit all children, and generally difficult to map out a "course" to be inflexibly pursued by any one. But nearly every mind is or can be interested in something, and a very good plan is to encourage reading concerning the subject the child shows some curiosity about. One thing will certainly lead to another, for nothing is isolated in this world. Try to find out all you can about one thing, one fact in history, one person, the habits of one animal, the truth about one historical character; pursue this, and before you know it you will be a scholar in many things.

Do not forget that reading is a means to an end. The indulgence of it is good or bad according to the end in view. The mind is benefited by pursuing some definite subject until it is understood, but it is apt to be impaired by idly nibbling now and then, tasting a thousand things, and swallowing none, in short, by desultory reading.—St. Nicholas.

THE FAITHFUL POSTMAN.

A Cat That Was Awarded a New Collar for Her Services.

One day last autumn, when chilly days first came on, Baby Winfred wakened with a hoarse cry. The young mother's heart was filled with fear. The dreaded croup had come, and she was alone; there was no one to send for the doctor.

Just then sober old Sally, the tortoise-shell cat, came slowly up the garden-path from the barn. The mother remembered that Sally had been trained to carry notes to the store—grandpa's store at the foot of the lane—she had never been known to fail in carrying them safely.

Calling old puss, she hastily wrote: "Send the doctor at once; baby has croup." She tied it about the soft, plump neck, and said: "Run, Sally, as fast as ever you can! Run on the fence; hurry and give it to grandpa!"

Off went Sally, never minding the barks of impertinent dogs or friendly calls of her relations, and the doctor was in the house in ten minutes.

"I was on the street," he said, "at the store door, when old Sally came running on the fence as fast as her four feet could carry her. I feared there was trouble, and waited till she could reach us. I think Sally has never forgotten how I took fish-bones out of her throat with pincers. She always seems so glad to see me."

The very next day Sally had a new collar; on it was engraved: "From Baby to His Faithful Postman."—F. P. Chaplin, in Our Little Ones.

—"Well, Tommy," said a visitor, "how are you getting on at school?" "First-rate," answered Tommy. "I ain't doing as well as some of the other boys, though. I can stand on my head, but I have to put my feet against the fence. I want to do it without being anywhere near the fence, and I guess I can after awhile."—Jewish Messenger.

—Father—"Didn't I hear high words between you and your brother just now, Henry?" Henry—"Very likely, father; but, surely, you wouldn't wish me to use low language."—Journal of Salvation.

Cutting Glass With Shears.

Panes of glass can be cut under water to almost any shape with a pair of scissors. Two things are necessary for a success: first, the glass must be quite level in the water while the scissors are applied, and secondly, to avoid risk, it is better to perform the cutting by cutting off small pieces, thus reducing the form gradually to that required. The softer glasses cut best, and the scissors need not be very sharp.—Toledo Blade.

NOTICE TO PIRATES

The President's Annual Proclamation About Ready.

THE SEALS WILL BE PROTECTED.

Two War Vessels Going to Alaskan Waters to Watch Marauders.

Gen. Johnston's Funeral to Take Place To-morrow—Secretary Proctor Will Not Resign—Kincaid's Trial Begun—The President's Trip West—Treasurer Huston's Resignation Not Yet Accepted.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The proposed proclamation for the protection of seals in Behring Sea is expected to be promulgated within a few days.

The President, in issuing it, simply complies with the statute enacted by the 50th Congress, which requires him to do this once a year, just before the approach of the fishing season. It is hinted that the coming pronunciamento will be even more vigorous than that of 1890.

The proposal to dispatch at least two war vessels to Alaskan waters means that the President intends that the pirates shall be punished if they resume the depredations of former years.

The Sayward libel case comes before the United States Supreme Court early next month. The President will find no necessity, therefore, for defining the geographical limits within which marauders may be seized. That question remains for the court to determine. Whether its decision will be accepted by the Salisbury government as final remains for the future to develop.

GEN. JOHNSTON'S FUNERAL.

The Body to be Interred in Baltimore Without Military Display.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The arrangements for Gen. Joseph E. Johnston's funeral are about completed. The funeral will take place from St. John's Episcopal Church to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock, after which his remains will be taken to Baltimore and be interred alongside his wife's in the cemetery there. There will be no display, military or otherwise, either here or in Baltimore.

The honorary pall-bearers selected are: Senators Daniel and Mahone, Hon. J. L. Curry, formerly Minister to Spain; Gen. J. G. Parke, U. S. A.; Gen. Charles W. Field, Henry Rath, Rear Admirals Rodgers and Temple, Gen. H. G. Wright, Benjamin W. Brice, Col. Archer Anderson, Col. E. G. Harvie, J. G. Bancroft Davis and Gen. James Walmough.

The active pall-bearers are all residents of Washington who served under Gen. Johnston during the war.

Numerous telegrams were received at Gen. Johnston's house from friends and army associates who wore the blue and the gray, expressing the deepest sympathy and the most profound sorrow at the General's death.

Bishop Simpson, P. T. Sherman and Col. Archer Anderson were among those who sent telegrams of sorrow and condolence.

CABINET RUMORS.

Secretary Proctor's Friends Say He Has No Intention of Resigning.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—No confirmation of the report that Secretary Proctor contemplates resigning his office can be obtained in Washington.

Those who would be apt to know if the Secretary had any such intention are of the opinion that there is no foundation for the report. A gentleman who traveled South with the Secretary last week says that Mr. Proctor then spoke enthusiastically of War Department work that he had laid out to do during the next two years, and that, judging from that conversation, he thinks the Secretary could not possibly be contemplating a resignation.

Mr. Proctor's present tour is far from being a "junket." This tour will extend over a month, and is planned to produce results bearing on the course of affairs in military circles for the coming two years. Then, too, he has just brought from the West an officer whom he intends to make his military aide. He would hardly do this, it is argued, were he soon to resign. Assistant Secretary Grant said that the rumor is without foundation.

Kincaid's Trial Begun.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The trial of Charles E. Kincaid, for the killing of ex-Congressman Taulbee of Kentucky opened here this morning. The trial will attract widespread attention, as the witnesses come from such distant and widely separated parts of the country as Massachusetts, New York, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Alabama and Louisiana.

Parnell's Envoy Recovering.

NEW YORK, March 23.—Henry Harrison, M. P., who came here in the interests of Mr. Parnell and was taken sick with pneumonia, was reported as doing well to-day, though he is not yet out of danger.

Ex-Gov. Robinson Has a Relapse.

ELMIRA, N. Y., March 23.—Ex-Gov. Robinson has again suffered a relapse, and his death is momentarily expected. He began failing early this morning.

DAMAGE AT LONG BRANCH.

Gaps Torn in the Bluff by Angry Seas and Property Destroyed.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., March 23.—The destructive storm along the Jersey coast, which set in with a howling gale from the northeast Friday, steadily increased in velocity last night, and the indications are that it will eclipse the damaging storm of September three years ago. Last night the wind was blowing a gale from the northeast and the rain fell in torrents all day.

Saturday and Sunday the sea ran high and was fully as rough as it was on Friday. Its damaging attacks upon the much-torn Long Branch bluff at high tide last night renders it only a question of hours when Ocean avenue will have been engulfed to such an extent that it will be impassable at points and entirely beyond repair at the Howland House property, where Friday's high seas washed tons of bluff away. The gap extended within a few feet of the sidewalk on the west side of the drive last night. The rainfall widened the cut opposite the Ocean Hotel several feet, and any number of minor washouts have been made between North Long Branch and Elberon.

The fences around the gaps on the East End property, between Long Branch and North Long Branch, were nearly all carried out to sea yesterday, together with great blocks of the bluff.

The washout near the United States Hotel has been enlarged some ten feet since Friday's storm set in, while public travel over the famous drive is extremely dangerous near the De Peyster cottages, opposite North Bath avenue and to the north of the Seaborn Hotel. Thousands of dollars' worth of damage has been done to the Monmouth Beach and Seabright bulkheads.

The storm at Seabright created no end of havoc, and the big bulkhead east of the Octagon House there was torn in two by the big seas.

SUSPECTED MURDER.

A Man's Residence Burned and His Body Found in the Ruins.

FRANKLIN, Pa., March 23.—About 5 a. m. the residence of N. P. Tobin was burned and shortly after the body of Tobin was found in the ruins. There is a suspicion that Tobin was murdered by burglars and the house burned to conceal the crime.

Twenty years ago Tobin was brought from Canada to whip Ben Hogan, then an oil region terror, but one evening he wandered into a Methodist prayer meeting, and before he left he was converted and has since lived an earnest Christian life and had successfully conducted a leading tailoring establishment.

He leaves a family, who were visiting in New Castle, Pa. Several arrests have been made.

SEE LEFT $15,000,000.

Death of Mrs. Mary Brayton Young of Fall River.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 23.—Mrs. Mary Brayton Young died at her home in this city last evening, aged 76.

She gave to this city a public high school costing $750,000. Mrs. Young leaves a fortune estimated at $15,000,000.

The wealth of Mrs. Young and her immediate family has been for some years the controlling factor in Fall River's growth, it being represented in many mills, banks, railroads, steamboat companies, etc.

Muldoon's Challenge.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 23.—Professor William Muldoon, who has arrived here from San Francisco with Jake Kilrain, challenges Robert Fitzsimmons, the present middleweight champion of the world, to meet Jim Hall, the Australian middleweight. Mr. Muldoon says he is authorized by Joe Thompson and Joe Harris, the Australian bookmakers, to back Hall for from $5,000 to $25,000. Fitzsimmons is now in this city and says he will probably accept. A purse of $15,000 for the fight has been offered by the San Antonio (Texas) Club.

Sensational Burglary Case.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., March 23.—The Bork-Bradley burglary case is assuming a rather sensational aspect by the fact that the girl took poison yesterday with suicidal intent. The general belief here now is that the girl did the whole business herself or with the aid of an accomplice, who did it in a bungling manner. J. H. Witherspoon, whom Miss Bork implicated in the burglary, is thought to be innocent of the crime.

A Strike Averted.

CHICAGO, March 23.—Committees from the Carpenters and Builders' Association and the United Carpenters' Council have reached an agreement, thus averting the threatened strike of next Saturday. The agreement, which will come into effect April 1, 1891, and last until April 1, 1893, provides that journeymen carpenters will receive 35 cents an hour as the minimum rate of wages and that eight hours will constitute a day's work.

A Mother's Claim.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 23.—Mrs. Calvin Vangorder, the mother of Jason Vangorder, 20 years of age, who recently lost his life near Woodbourne, Sullivan County, through drinking, has entered two actions in court in the sum of $5,000 each, one against John Reilly, a hotelkeeper, and the other against Daniel Freer, a saloonkeeper, at Ellenville, where, it is alleged, her son procured the

MRS. POTTS WANTED

Called to New York by the District-Attorney.

SHE ADHERES TO HER STORY.

It is Believed the Trouble Has Affected Her Mind.

She Claims She Is Not Alone of the Opinion that Her Daughter Was Murdered—Dr. Fowler Suspected Foul Play—She Accuses Young Harris of the Murder of Another Girl.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., March 23.—District-Attorney Nicoll of New York city has telegraphed Mrs. George Potts, the mother of Helen Potts, wife of Medical Student Harris, who she accused of murdering her daughter, asking her to call at his office immediately.

Mrs. Potts reaffirms her charge that Harris substituted for the morphine pills something which caused the death of Helen. It is believed the trouble has affected her mind.

Mrs Potts claims that she is not alone of the opinion that her daughter was murdered. She says Dr. Peabody, a member of the coroner's, jury told her such was his opinion, despite the verdict rendered. She also claims that Dr. Fowler, who attended her daughter immediately after she took the pills, told her he suspected foul play.

WHAT HARRIS SAYS.

He Does Not Believe His Wife Signed a Statement.

NEW YORK, March 23.—Young Harris said last night of Mrs. Potts's statement that a written statement had been signed by her daughter in the presence of Drs. Treverton and Hand, in which she accused Harris of performing a criminal operation upon her:

"If such a statement is in existence, Treverton must have used coercion to obtain it, for even if it were true (and it is most certainly false) the girl would not have given it otherwise. I never heard of such a thing until to-day. Dr. Hand was not at home when any operation was performed.

"Mrs. Potts," he continued, "without being of the opinion, has still, in a half-frightened way, believed me guilty of several murders, of which she has written to my friends. She has even sent letters in this strain to my lawyer, Charles E. Davison, my brother and my mother. In the latter one, which was received a week ago, she accuses me of the murder of a young girl named Williams, which happened, she says, five years ago at Asbury Park. I can easily prove that I was not near there at the time. Her mind appears to be temporarily unbalanced, and it is no wonder. I saw her last about March 1. She then talked of my responsibility for Helen's death, but when I left her she seemed to be partially convinced that I was not directly concerned in it."

INGERSOLL ON BARRETT.

An Eloquent Tribute to the Virtues of the Dead Tragedian.

NEW YORK, March 23.—Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll delivered the last of a series of lectures last night for the benefit of the New York Press Club building fund. His subject was Shakespeare and he opened with the following eulogy of Lawrence Barrett:

"Lawrence Barrett," said the orator, and he paused impressively. "My heart tells me that on the threshold of my address it will be appropriate for me to say a few words about the great actor who has just fallen into that sleep. Lawrence Barrett was my friend and I was his. He was an interpreter of Shakespeare to whose creations he gave flesh and blood. He was the greatest tragedian of our time next to Edwin Booth. He shunned the questionable, the vulgar and impure, and gave the intellectual, pathetic, manly tongue. He was a thoughtful Hamlet, an intense Othello and the best Cassius in the world.

"One by one the players leave the stage and others take their places. There is no pause. No one knows what the next scene is to be. Will this drama have an end? Will the curtain fall at last and will it rise again on some other stage? Reason says perhaps, hope still whispers yes. Sadly I bid my friend farewell. I admire the actor; I love the man."

The Funeral.

NEW YORK, March 23.—The religious services over the remains of Lawrence Barrett were held at 10 o'clock this morning. They were very short, consisting merely of the prayers for the dead from the ritual of the Roman Catholic Church, which were read by Father Tom Sherman, who was a personal friend of Mr. Barrett.

The body was taken out of the Grand Central depot by a special car attached to the New York, New Haven & Hartford train which left for Boston at 11 o'clock, and the interment will take place to-morrow in the Barrett family plot at Cohasset, Mass. No one accompanied the body except Mrs. Barrett, her daughter, Mrs. Marshall Williams, Mr. Marshall Williams, Mr. William Winter, Mr. Louis Aldrich, who represents both the Actors' Fund and the Edwin Forrest Lodge, and Undertaker Davidson, who has charge of the funeral car.

FOR HER SISTER'S MURDER.

Caroline Schmidt and Her Husband Called For Trial To-day.

PHILADELPHIA, March 23.—A half-crazed woman walks her narrow cell in the Media jail day and night. The theory of the prosecuting officers of the county is that it is remorse for the slaying of a sister which drives sleep and peace from her brain. The woman's friends declare that it is shame and nervous shock at an unjust accusation of a brutal crime which has nearly made a mad creature of her.

To-day in the county courthouse the judicial sifting of the evidence for and against these widely different theories has begun. The woman is Mrs. Caroline Schmidt, who jointly with her husband is charged with the murder of Emma Pfitzenmeyer at Chester on the early morning of December 4. The trial, if the prosecuting officers press the evidence they claim, promises to disclose the details of one of the most remarkable tragedies in the annals of crime.

THE MURDERER CAUGHT.

Fred Fitzsimmons, Who Killed Detective Gilkinson, Has Been Arrested.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 23.—Fred C. Fitzsimmons, alias A. G. Budd, the burglar who shot and killed David Gilkinson, head of the American Detective Agency of Pittsburg, and seriously wounded Detective Murphy near McKeesport, Pa., while they were attempting to arrest him, and who later escaped with the aid of his wife, was arrested near Homestead, Pa., last night.

A satchel found near the scene of the murder contained a lot of valuable jewelry stolen at Homestead. A copy of the will of Robert Fitzsimmons, dated at Brockville, Ont., Dec. 10, 1890, was also found in the valise. This will shows that the murderer's father was a wealthy man, having about $40,000 in money to divide among his heirs besides a large amount of real estate. The murderer is named in the will as Frederick Carrollton Fitzsimmons and is bequeathed $8,000 in money and a good share of real estate.

FLOWERS FOR PARNELL.

Drogheda Gives the Home Ruler a Mixed Reception.

DROGHEDA, March 23.—Mr. Parnell was warmly greeted at Skerries while on his way to this place. He was met by the parish priest and his parishioners, who presented him with an address, while the ladies threw bouquets to him.

At the meeting Parnell spoke on the lines of his recent speeches regarding the Gladstonian dictation.

A vote of confidence in Parnell was enthusiastically taken.

There were a number of demonstrations at North Sligo and some indications of rioting, but a large force of police was on hand, and they finally succeeded in preserving the peace.

T. Yerkes of the West Chicago & North Chicago Street Railroad Companies, said the scheme was impracticable and that he did not think there was any possibility of its being carried into effect.

EXPOSING THE [illegible] PLOT

THE MAFIA'S MEMBERS [illegible] ITED.

A Secret Meeting Held in an [illegible] Building in New Orleans.

The Subject of the Recent Lynching Debated—Police Unable to Learn Whether Any Threats Were Made—O'Malley Says He Will Return to New Orleans and Give Important Evidence.

NEW ORLEANS, March 23.—[illegible] promised expose of the Mafia plot, which ended in the assassination of Chief of Police Hennessy by Sunzeri and Natali, two of the Italian prisoners now in jail, has caused a great deal of excitement in Italian quarters.

Last evening a secret meeting was held in an old building near Congo square, which was attended by 100 Italians, who discussed the report for nearly an hour. The police have information the subject of the recent lynching was put they and certain phases of it debated, but they have not been able to learn either or not any threats were made.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 23.—[illegible] Detective O'Malley of New Orleans, who was in this city was only learned by chance, does not appear to be at all worried over the state of affairs in the Crescent city nor for his own personal safety.

He is accompanied by his wife and child. He is registered under an assumed name. To a reporter he said last midnight:

"I was present at the meeting and hid in New Orleans for two days after the lynching. I first to Houston, Tex., and then to Corsicana. Then turning about I came Eastward to Brinkly, Ark., and from there to Memphis. It is my intention to return to New Orleans next Wednesday or Thursday."

"I will certainly expose the workings of the Mafia. I have been in the employ of the Matrange faction of Mafia for six years, and in my capacity of detective have plenty of information which I am sure no other man has."

O'Malley declined to say anything in connection with the bribing of the jury, except that he thinks they were bribed. He said, in conclusion, that six of the Italians killed were guilty of complicity in the Hennessy case.

LONDON, March 23.—Mr. J. McCarthy has already found the task leading the Irish party too much for him. His health has broken down. EN[illegible]ISHMEN INDIGNANT.

The Grand Duchess Elizabeth Cruelly Persecuted by Her Russian Husband.

LONDON, March 23.—Deep indignation is expressed among all classes of Englishmen in regard to the reports current as to the treatment of the Grand Duchess Elizabeth, granddaughter of Queen Victoria, by her husband, the Grand Duke Sergius of Russia, brother of the Czar.

It is well understood that the Czar's anger for appointing his brother governor of Moscow was not, as officially announced, to give him a mark of esteem, but to remove the Grand Duchess from the foreign society of St. Petersburg, where her maltreatment by the Russian imperial family has already caused an international scandal.

The reports as to the abuse to which the lady has been subjected are not mere gossip, but come from high and trustworthy sources, and nobody in England has any doubt of their truth. The Grand Duke is said to be really attached to his wife, but treats her on the same principle that Russia treats a conquered province or state. Having annexed her by marriage, he has claimed that she must become Russian altogether, even to the abandonment of the religion in which she was born and educated.

With this object coercion, characterized as brutal, was tried upon her. When she desired to attend English services she found her carriage to take her. The Grand Duke on such occasions has shown a displeasing ways that a Russian or a Tartar, when high or low, very well understands. There is no allegation of physical violence, but rumors are current to that effect are current.

END OF A FAMOUS FEUD.

The Hatfields and McCoys to be Reconciled by a Marriage.

WHEELING, W. Va., March 23.—The famous Hatfield-McCoy feud, which has made Wayne County, this State, and Pike County, Ky., a bloody ground for 30 years, has come to a happy and romantic end.

In the course of the vendetta it is said that [illegible] lives have been sacrificed, but it became open war only within the last four or five years, when cold-blooded murder followed assassination so closely as to terrify the country. This new activity dated from the murder of a McCoy, who had married his cousin, by a Hatfield, who had been betrothed to her.

As it began, so it will end—in a wedding. It has been arranged that Aaron Hatfield, a nephew of "Devil Anse," long head of the gang, shall marry a fair daughter of the house of McCoy in May, when a big barbecue will be held in a grove in Wayne County, near the Big Sandy, and both factions promise to have on hand all their relations who can possibly be gathered.

Captain "Devil Anse" Hatfield has furnished a card for publication declaring the vendetta at an end, and that amnesty has been granted all who took part in the [illegible] war.

The many friends of Judge Ulrich and wife will be grieved to learn that they lost their eight-months' child, Margarette, this morning. Her life had already been despaired of when as a last resort a very delicate surgical operation was performed, in the hope that it might restore her to life. LOST HIS LIFE FOR HIS HORSE.

HUGO WEIGMAN ROASTED TO DEATH IN HIS STABLE.

Excitement Crazed Him, and He Rushed Headlong Into the Mass of Seething Flames, Beyond the Reach of Human Aid.—The Corpse Charred and Blackened Beyond All Semblance to a Human Form.—The Horse Dead Too.—Terrible Tidings for a Suffering Wife.

Hugo Weigmann was burned to death Saturday night.

He was seated at the bedside of his wife, at his home, 32 East Front street, when he heard some, one shout "Mr. Weigmann, Mr. Weigmann, your barn is afire!"

He rushed out of the house in an instant, without a hat, and with slippers on his feet. Smoke was pouring through every crevice of the building just at the rear of his house, and a lurid light was visible at the windows.

In the stable which formed a part of the building was Rosa, Weigman's horse, a great pet of the family. Hugo's first thought seemed to be of the animal, for he shouted "My horse is in there! My horse is in there!" and before any others of the people who were flocking to the scene could get near him he had unlocked and thrown open the door.

Instantly a great burst of flame gushed forth, with a loud, swishing, roaring noise. It enveloped Weigman, singed his whiskers, and scorched his clothes. Then it receded for a moment. Among the people who were running towards the place were Garret Hammeal, Chas. Lyman, Chas. Burnett, Wm. Kline, James Donohue and Wm. Wright. Some of these saw Weigman pause irresolutely at the blazing doorway. "For God's sake, come back!"—they shouted. He turned and glanced at them with a wild look on his face, then, before they could prevent him, plunged headlong into the flames. It was certain death to follow him. Those who did go as far as the doorway had their faces inflamed and blistered by the intense heat. They could do nothing but stare blankly at one another, dumbfounded with awe and horror.

Presently a pitiful, whimpering whinny was heard, and Rosa, the horse for which Weigman had just risked his life, came trotting out of the blazing building. Her halter had burned, and had freed her, and she had backed out of her stall of her own accord. The blanket on her back was blazing, and her flesh was steaming, quivering and smoking. Her head was a mass of burns, she was blinded, and had breathed so much flame that she was fatally injured by internal burns. With blankets the fire about her was smothered, and she was removed to Roberts's livery stable, where she was killed by order of Mayor Gilbert and Fire Chief Doane Sunday.

Whitfield Frezee was passing in front of Weigman's when he heard cries of fire, and saw the fierce light at the rear of the house. He ran at once to Shaw's Pharmacy, got the key for fire-box No. 12, and sent in an alarm. He did just the proper thing—pulled the hook down once, released it, and waited for the firemen to come, so that he could tell them the exact location of the fire.

The new alarm telegraph system worked to perfection. At the first blow of the gang the apparatus was rolled out of the houses, and the firemen knew without a moment's delay just where to go, the instant the box number sounded. Within less than five minutes water was being poured into the mass of flames that now shot from the roof and sides of the frame building, and in an incredibly short time the fire was subdued. The fire was a tremendously hot one, and the firemen deserve great credit for handling it so successfully. The building, which had been used by Weigman in his business as upholsterer and carpet cleaner, besides as a stable, was partially filled with bales of curled hair, excelsior, and similar highly inflammable substances. Great showers of sparks rose upward and were carried by the wind to other buildings. The roofs where they fell, however, were rain-soaked, and the hot cinders were therefore harmless to spread the flames.

As soon as it was safe to enter the ruined building, Chief Doane and Second Assistant Murray crept along the floor through the smoke to search for Weigman's body. They found it in a corner of Rosa's stall, under the manger, in such a posture as to indicate that he had fallen beneath the awful mass of flames that had held possession of the place, and had crawled in his dying agony further and further into the heat of the fire. He was lying face downward, with one arm thrown over his head, as if to shield his brain from the fearful heat.

When the two men tried to move the body the hot sizzling flesh came off in great flakes at their touch, and the stiff, charred finger bones snapped off at the joints, in their hands. His feet were burned off at the ankles. The blackened, shapeless mass bore no resemblance to the body of a human being.

The blackened corpse was sent to Terrill & Cole's undetraking establishment, where County Physician Westcott, from Scotch Plains, viewed it. He decided that no inquest was necessary, and granted a permit for burial.

To the Rev. Cornelius Schenck and Dr. Geo. W. Endicott fell, by request of friends, the sad duty of breaking to Mrs. Weigman the news of her husband's death. Mrs. Weigman had given birth to a child Thursday night, and it was feared that the shock of the terrible tidings would be too much for her. She withstood it bravely, however, and though for a time she was in a critical condition she is now considered out of danger. She has been the mother of thirteen children, nine of whom are living.

Weigman was a very impetuous man, and those who knew him are not surprised at the awful and fatal risk he took to save the family horse.

Weigman was a member of the Knights of Pythias, and of the American Legion of Honor. His life insurance from these lodges will amount to $5,000. He was also president of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein.

The money loss of the fire will not exceed $600, and is well insured. The carpet cleaning and other machinery which Weigman had in the building was not damaged.

Some coins and a watch were found yesterday where Weigman's body had been lying. The heat had been intense enough to melt the metal. The watch was stopped at 8:04.

How the fire originated is a mystery. There had been no fire in the building in four weeks.

Charges Against Policemen.

Some of the policemen who were on duty Saturday night are being harshly censured for the action they took in connection with the fire.

Policeman Cooney is criticised for refusing to guard a section of hose that stretched across the street, from being run over by wagons.

Official charges will be made against policeman Kiely at an early date. His accusers are firemen Harry Bush and John Albert, who say that though they were in uniform and were attending to duty he roughly shoved them away from the fire and struck them brutally with his club.

The accusations will be investigated.

Dragged Through the Streets.

George L. Schlereth, upholsterer, of West Second street, ran out of his shop at the alarm of fire Saturday night, and attempted to catch hold of the rear end of the ladders on the hook and ladder truck as it went flying by. He missed his aim, and grabbed instead the huge basket hanging underneath the truck. He was dragged violently over the ground, his clothes were torn, and he was covered with painful scratches and bruises. He succeeded in climbing into the basket just in time to save him from an awful bump over a stone crossing.

Wanted to Find His Father.

Little Charlie Weigman, an eight-year-old son of Hugo, came near losing his life also at Saturday night's fire. He heard that his father was burning to death in the barn, and started to rush in after him. He had dodged in and out among the crowd, and was well on his way to the blazing building when Mrs. Anastatia Stewart, who had been running after him, succeeded in overtaking him and dragging him back.

Little Things Sometimes Disastrous.

A piece of zinc which a careless tinner had let fall into the pump of one of the fire engines clogged up and burst a length of hose, and caused a vexatious and dangerous delay, at Saturday night's fire.

Three Cheers for Speaker Bergen.

Few Speakers of the New Jersey Legislature have received more flattering testimony from their fellow-members than that accorded to James J. Bergen, of Somerville, last Friday afternoon. Mr. Campbell made a motion to thank him for his uniform fairness and courtesy. At the suggestion of Mr. Cole, of Camden, every man jumped to his feet and gave three rousing cheers in honor of the Speaker. Mr. Bergen's face flushed as he saw the palpable evidences of enthusiasm manifested. Before he had time to think much about it Mr. Potts, leader of the minority, stepped forward and on behalf of the members presented the Speaker with a costly and elegant gold watch and chain. Mr. Potts spoke most kindly of the Speaker as a man and as the presiding officer of the Assembly.

In responding Speaker Bergen thanked the members for the support they had given him in trying to conduct the proceedings of the House in an orderly and proper manner. He also thanked the newspaper correspondents for their fairness and courtesy.

Caught a Gang of Thieves.

A gang of daring young thieves who for the past year have been committing depredations on the farmers of Union County have at last been hunted down by the Elizabeth police, and four of them are now in jail. The capture of Joseph Sullivan on Friday by Farmer Robert Walpole with a shotgun at Scotch Plains furnished a clue to the location of the gang, and yesterday John Nagele, age sixteen; John Sullivan, eighteen, and Joseph Connors were arrested at their homes in Elizabethport by Chief Tenney and his officers. The gang made a specialty of robbing poultry houses at Cranford, Fanwood, and Scotch Plains, of game chickens, which they sold to cock fighters in Newark, New York, and Jersey City.

Tiresly.

The man of leisure takes his own time; the pickpocket generally takes some other fellow's time; but the man who aims to be always on the mark gets his time at Collier's, 3 Park avenue, where the most reliable time-pieces are obtainable at bed-rock prices.

The surest means to rid yourself of that distressing cough is to use Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. 25 cents.

HORRIBLE DEATH ON THE RAIL.

DANIEL LEIBE AND WILLIE CANNON HURLED INTO ETERNITY.

Another Frightful Accident for Which Unguarded Railway Crossings Are Responsible.—Horse, Man and Boy Almost Torn to Pieces.

Daniel H. Leibe and Willie Cannon met a horrible death on the Jersey Central Railroad at Dunellen at 9:51 Saturday night. They were driving home to Plainfield from New Market. At the Prospect Avenue crossing they attempted to pass in front of a slowly-moving east-bound freight train, which shut out from their view the headlight of the Blue Imperial Lightning Express from Washington, going in the same direction. The express was upon them before either the driver or the engineer realized it. George Hackett was at the throttle. The train was thundering along at the utmost speed that the powerful machinery of locomotive No. 37 could give it. Suddenly before Hackett's startled gaze the horse and wagon stood revealed in the glare of the headlight on the track before him. He had barely time to choke off the steam and clap on the brakes when the crash came. The whistle was shrieking like mad. The horse stood still and trembled. The locomotive struck horse and wagon squarely, and with terrible effect.

The wagon was completely shattered. The horse was thrown eighty feet to one side of the track, its harness torn completely from it, and its huge and quivering body a mass of cuts and bruises. Liebe was hurled 140 feet forward, and struck against the moving freight train on the other east-bound track. Cannon was thrown 100 feet in the same direction. Both bodies were frightfully torn and mangled. Cannon's head was beaten into a soft pulpy mass. Death in all three cases was instantaneous.

The train was stopped with a heavy, grinding jar a short distance farther on, and the curious passengers climbed down and saw the horrid sight of mangled bodies by the light of the trainmen's lanterns. The bodies were taken to the morgue of Walter G. Runyon, where County Physician Frank M. Donahue, from New Brunswick, viewed them yesterday. He granted a burial permit, and young Cannon's corpse was taken to his father's home at "Eight Row", between Dunellen and Evona. Leibe's body was given in charge of his mother, who lives at Greenbrook. Leibe was 23 years of age, unmarried. Cannon was the son of Edwin B. and Annie Cannon, and his age was 14 years. He was a nephew of Lance Mundy of Rockfellow's grocery store.

Leibe formerly kept a butcher shop in Plainfield, but of late had been in the employ of Ellis Eddy, manager for Geo. Eddy, who keeps a butcher shop on Liberty street. He and the boy had spent the day driving about the country delivering meat and making collections. Eddy's horse, together with what meat had been in the wagon, was buried at Dunellen. The money loss to Eddy is about $300. The sum of $65 which Liebe had collected for Eddy was recovered.

There is great indignation among Dunellen people because of the unprotected condition of the crossings at that place. There are four crossings. Two of them are protected during the daytime, but at 8:34 the flagmen go home, so that when there is most danger, at night, none of the crossings are guarded at all. Two crossings have no protection whatever. One crossing has to be watched from the station, a hundred feet away. The crossings are getting to be notorious as among the most dangerous in the country. During the past few years, it is said, more than twenty people have been killed there. It was hoped that the County Physician would insist on a rigid investigation and compel the railway authorities to guard the tracks, but it seems that no inquest is to be held.

CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE.

Unprotected Grade Crossings a Matter for Juries to Condemn.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The common report is that the County Physician has in the matter of the deplorable accident at Dunellen on Saturday night last, considered it unnecessary to hold an inquest. This, so far as the cause of death is concerned, may be all right; but the question of responsibility for the causes by which the possibility of such accidents are possible, is, in my opinion, a fit subject to be submitted to a jury. The habit of the railway company, in leaving a public crossing unprotected by flagman or gates at any time of the day or night, with trains running at a speed of fifty miles an hour, is a menace to the public security, and should not be tolerated. Some means ought to exist to hold some one responsible for what looks to me like criminal recklessness. Railway companies have a duty to perform to the public in guarding against the possibilities of any such loss of life as occurred upon the occasion referred to, and it is certainly a matter that suggests that some steps should be taken to compel action that will prevent the possibility of a recurrence of such a frightful disaster, which electrifies and horrifies the public mind. STANLEY DAY.

POKER IN THE PULPIT.

Severe Condemnation of the Gambling Habit, by a Plainfield Pastor.

Last Sabbath (Saturday) in his own church, and again last evening in the First Presbyterian church, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis preached on "The Supreme Wickedness of Gambling". He showed by actual figures the enormous waste of money, life and character, through private and public gambling. He examined representative forms of this evil, such as stock gambling, horse racing, and poker playing, quoting somewhat fully from Richard A. Proctor's book, "Chance and Luck", to show that, viewed from the stand-point of science alone, gambling is worthy of the severest condemnation. Among other things from Mr. Proctor was the following:

I regard betting as essentially immoral as soon as its true nature is recognized. When a wager is made, and when after it has been lost and won its conditions are fulfilled, money has passed from one person to another without any "work done" by which society is benefited.

Dr. Lewis declared that muscle and brain, operating upon the world's resources in honest, productive labor, form the only source of true wealth; and that all money obtained by "chance", whether in the wild speculation of business, or by direct gambling, where lying and deceit are essential factors, is ill-gotten—is positive wickedness. He startled his hearers who are familiar with "ten-cent limit poker" by the following words from the conclusions of "cold science as set down by Mr. Proctor":

The existence, and still more the flourishing condition, of such a game as poker, outside mere gambling dens, is one of the most portentous phenomena of American civilization, though it is not in this respect that I propose just now to consider it; for the art which chiefly avails to help the gambler in playing this game is nothing more nor less than that art of which the enemy of man is proverbially said to be the father. Poker has an advantage over whist in one respect. In whist skill will do somewhat; but it will not avail to make good cards yield to bad ones. In poker the case is otherwise. A man shall have not a point in his hand; yet by sheer bluffing—in other words, by lying—he shall cause such an idea to be formed of his hand, that every one else at the table will throw up his cards, and leave to the liar full possession of the stakes.

"Progressive euchre for prizes" came for full share of condemnation, and the failure of the New Jersey Legislature to pass the "infamous race-track bill" was set down by the preacher as due to "fear of political consequences, and not from any spasm of virtue". The growth of the gambling mania was declared to be a twin evil with the liquor traffic.

EVERY CLUB A TRUMP.

But Only One of the Four Crack Teams Can Win the Championship.

As already spoken of in THE PRESS, the clubs along the line of the Jersey Central railway have organized a whist tournament which promises to be of great interest to all lovers of the game. The clubs represented are: the New Jersey Athletic Club of Bergen Point, the Elizabeth Athletic Club, the Westfield Athletic Club, the Fanwood Club, and the Crescent League of Plainfield. Each club has selected a team of its best six players, and a schedule of eight games apiece has been adopted, as follows:

March 25—Elizabeth vs. Westfield, at Elizabeth. New Jersey Athletic vs. Crescent League, at Bergen Point.

April 1—Crescent League vs. Fanwood, at Plainfield. New Jersey Athletic vs. Westfield, at Westfield.

April 8—New Jersey Athletic vs. Elizabeth, at Bergen Point. Crescent League vs. Westfield, at Westfield.

April 15—Elizabeth vs. Crescent League, at Elizabeth. Fanwood vs. Westfield, at Fanwood.

April 22—Elizabeth vs. Westfield, at Westfield. New Jersey Athletic vs. Crescent League, at Plainfield.

April 29—Elizabeth vs. Fanwood, at Fanwood.

May 6—New Jersey Athletic vs. Fanwood, at Bergen Point. Crescent League vs. Westfield, at Plainfield.

May 13—Elizabeth vs. Crescent League, at Plainfield. Westfield vs. Fanwood, at Westfield.

May 20—New Jersey Athletic vs. Elizabeth, at Elizabeth. Crescent League vs. Fanwood, at Fanwood.

May 27—Elizabeth vs. Fanwood, at Elizabeth. New Jersey Athletic vs. Westfield, at Bergen Point.

May 29—New Jersey Athletic vs. Fanwood, at Fanwood.

The Closing Card Party.

The "Netherwood Whist Club" gave at Fanwood, Wednesday evening, the last of a series of card parties which have been held during the past Winter at the homes of its members. It was an enjoyable affair. A collation was served, and dancing continued until early morning.

Among the guests present were:

Miss Ida Coles, Miss E. Clark, Miss Madeline Beck of New York city, Miss Ada Whitmann, Mr. and Mrs. Meeker, Mr. and Mrs. Wynkoop of Dunellen, Mr. Hughes, Mr. Mattison of Jersey City, Mr. Clark, Mr. Meeker, Mr. A. Coles, Mrs. Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, and many others.

Big Profit by a Big Fire.

It is a great thing to be able to control a whole trade, as is illustrated in the case of the National Cordage Company, which, when its big property at Elizabeth was consumed by fire, last week, found itself possessed of such a monopoly as to be able to advance the price of the grade of goods made by that particular mill so as to make up at once the $600,000 lost by the fire—that loss being amply covered, too, by insurance. The advance in the output is large enough to pay for the erection of a completely-equipped new plant to take the place of the destroyed one—thus practically making the insurance so much net profit.

FORETOLD HIS OWN DEATH.

Singular Incident in the Last Days of Soldier-Orator Runyon.

Concerning the death of John B. Runyon, son of the late Ephriam Runyon of this city, and brother of Albert Runyon of North Plainfield, which occurred at his home in Elmora, last week Thursday, a Newark paper publishes the following:

Mr. Runyon was an old-time minstrel and temperance lecturer, a veteran of the war, and for many years a constable in the Union County Courts at Elizabeth. As a soldier he served the country faithfully throughout the War of the Rebellion. As a lecturer against the evil of intemperance he saved many souls. As a burnt-cork artist, in early life, he was one of the best on the road, and traveled all over the country with minstrel troupes. He was quite a character about town, and his quaint sayings and blithe-hearted manners made sunshine for everybody who knew him.

He was a most kindly man, and was faithful to any trust reposed in him. His familiar form, with his long white military mustache, will be missed from the court room, of which he was one of the best-known features. He was nearly fifty-six years old.

Mr. Runyon seems to have had a presentiment of his death, for two weeks ago he got Assistant County Clerk Moffett, of Plainfield, to draw up his pension papers, and said it was the last time he would draw a pension, as he was going to die within a month. The clerk laughed at this, but Mr. Runyon, with a solemn countenance, assured him there was not the slightest doubt of it, as he had a warning that his time on earth would be very short. His death was caused by hemorrhage.

THE STREET RAILWAY ILLUSTRATED.

Education for Plainfielders on the Subject of Electric Cars.

A popular talk on "Electricity" will be given by L. W. Serrell, Jr., the electrical expert, at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, Thursday evening, at eight o'clock. The subject will be introduced with a few remarks on the discovery of the electric force by the ancients and its various developments since that time. A brief reference will be made to the laws that govern electricity, and the audience will be told how the electric light is made, how the telephone operates, how the dynamos generate electricity, how the motor runs; and how electricity is used in the navy and land warfare will be noticed. The general system of electric railways will be explained, and a number of views exhibited of the electric car in operation with the improved electric system used in some of the largest cities. Cars will be seen climbing hills and running through snow. The talk will be illustrated throughout with lantern slides. The admission will be free, and every man in the city is invited to be present.

A Snug Profit by the Fair.

The bazar and supper conducted by the Ladies' Christian Work Society last week was a great success. The profit netted was $439.50. All goods on hand were auctioned off in excellent style Saturday night by E. T. Dunn, the popular letter-carrier. The ladies had so much kindly assistance from so many people that it would take a long time to thank them all personally, so they want THE PRESS to extend their sincerest gratitude to those who were so generous with their patronage, and to all who contributed so liberally with donations.

Building a Special Room for Them.

About January 1, four young men started a young men's class in the First Baptist Sunday-school, and immediately set out to get other young men to join them. So successful have their efforts been that now about 45 young men are on the class record; and an addition to the church, in the form of a large class room, is being constructed for them. The interest and growth of this class is believed to be a result of the Mills meetings held in this city last November.

Died of His Awful Injuries.

John Wilson Young, who was so terribly injured by jumping from a passenger train near the Grant avenue station, two weeks ago yesterday, died at the Muhlenberg Hospital at about one o'clock this morning, having never regained consciousness. His remains were taken charge of by his wife, an estimable young woman whose parents live at Bloomsbury. Young was a son of Valentine Young of that place. He had been married only about a year.

I HAVE been troubled with chronic catarrh for years. Ely's Cream Balm is the only remedy among the many that I have used that affords me relief.—E. W. Willard, Druggist, Joliet, Ill.

I HAVE been troubled with catarrh for ten years and have tried a number of remedies, but found no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most reliable preparation for catarrh and cold in the head.—Geo. E. Crandall, P. M., Quonochaug, R. I.

When your dealer sends you something "just as good" when Hires' Root Beer is asked for, the proper thing is to send it back. He delights in selling substitutes, because the profit is large.

Fell With the Scaffold.

A scaffold on Dr. Ketcham's new house at Eighth street and Arlington avenue broke this afternoon, and Stephen VanHorn, mason, fell with it.

He sustained a dislocation of the finger, and several scalp wounds, which were dressed by Dr. Rushmore.

"Mrs. Jones sits at the window all day as placid as a May morning, and her five small children play hide and seek on the back stairs." "No wonder! She uses Salvation Oil for sprains and cuts."

CHOICE BITS OF VERSE.

A Glimpse of Paradise.

The harried, worried editor
Sat toiling in his chair,
With ink-smears on his fingers, and Confusion in his hair.
There entered then an agent, one
Whose words were brief and few;
Who said: "Our firm would like to ad-
Vertise a bit with you.
We never change electrotypes,
It will not wash nor smash;
And here is what it brings you nets:
Ten cents a line—spot cash.
We do not care for top of col.,
Nor next to reading mat.,
Tw nor end,
Nor ask for readers fat.
We have no calendar to note
With puffs of your wares;
We run no pieces of disease
To make your readers squirm.
And if, perchance, your foreman shouts
A few insertions miss,
We will not cancel contract, nor
Send postal-card like this.
We give you ten per cent. of all
The business we make
From our ad. in your paper. That's
All. Good-by—good luck—shake!"

The meek and lowly agent turned
Unto the office door,
The editor, with three great gasps,
Expired on the floor.
—Jack Bennett, in Journalist.

A Child with Nothing to Do.

I have shot my arrows and spun my top
And handled my last new ball;
I trundled my hoop till I had to stop,
And I swung till I got a fall;
I tumbled my books all out of the shelves
And hunted the pictures through;
I've flung them where they might save themselves;
And now I've nothing to do.

The tower of Babel I built of blocks
Came down with a crash to the floor;
My train of cars ran over the rocks;
I'll warrant they'll run no more;
I've raced with Grip till I'm out of breath;
My slate is broken in two,
So I can't draw monkeys. I'm tired to death
Because I've nothing to do!

The boys have gone to the pond to fish;
They bothered me, too, to go,
But for fear fishing I hadn't a wish,
For I think it's mighty slow
To sit all day at the end of a rod
For the sake of a minnow or two,
Or to land, at the farthest, an eel on the sod;
I'd rather have nothing to do.

I wish I was poor Jim Foster's son,
For he seems so happy and gay,
When his wood is chopped and his work all done,
With his little half hour to play;
He neither has books, nor top, nor ball,
Yet he's singing the whole day through.
But then, he never is tired at all,
Because he has something to do!
—Margaret J. Preston, in Chimes for Church Children.

A Dream of the Sea.

A farmer lad in his prairie home
Lay dreaming of the sea;
He ne'er had seen it, but well he knew
Its pictured image and heavenly hue;
And he dreamed he swept o'er its waters blue
With the winds a-blowing free,
With the winds so fresh and free.

He woke! and he said: "The day will come
When that shall be truth to me."
But as years swept by him he always found
That his feet were clogged and his hands were bound,
Till at last he lay in a narrow mound,
Afar from the sobbing sea,
The sorrowing, sobbing sea.

Oh, many there are on the plains to-night,
That dream of a voyage to be,
And have said in their souls: "The day will come
When my bark shall sweep through the drifts of foam,"
But their eyes grow dim and their lips grow dumb,
Afar from the tossing sea,
The turbulent, tossing sea.
—Albert Bigelow Paine.

Rhetoric vs. Love.

Fedora's found another "fad."
And I am wild with apprehension
Lest her strange fancies drive me mad,
My mind is put to such a tension.
A rhetoric each day she cons;
She studies with a rhetorician,
And such a learned air she dons,
My learning seems a mere tradition.

"Blush-rose" was once my name for her;
It now I use the dear expression,
She calmly dubs it "metaphor,"
And I must own the soft transgression.
And when my faithful love I tell,
In guise of some romantic story,
She hangs upon each syllable,
And cries: "A charming allegory!"

Should this sad state continue long—
As long as melancholy Lent is—
Farewell to light, and love, and song!
I'll surely be now compos mentis.
If I could get clutches now
(So desperate is my condition),
Upon that "language-man" I vow
I'd choke the wretched rhetorician!
—Harry Pelouze, in Detroit Free Press.

Baby Logic.

She was ironing her dolly's new gown,
Maid Marian, four years old,
While her brown pickered down
In a painstaking frown
Under her tresses of gold.

'Twas Sunday, and nurse coming in Exclaimed in a tone of surprise:
"Don't you know it's a sin
Any work to begin
On the day that the Lord sanctifies?"

Then, lifting her face like a rose,
Thus answered this wise little tot:
"Now, don't you suppose
The good Lord He knows
This little from ain't hot?"
—Elizabeth W. Bellamy, in Wide Awake.

Lost! One Golden Hour.

Go, print as wide the world may read,
And shout so all can hear;
A gem from life's bright diadem
Is gone for aye, I fear.

'Tis lost, and where, I cannot tell;
In nook, or shady bow'r,
I've idly let it slip away—
One precious, golden hour!

'Twas mine, in rosy hue of morn,
And lost, ere vespers lay
Had sung, with twilight's lullaby
Its sweeping mates away.

O, tireless Time! turn back the tide
With all thy might and main,
To find that one, lost, golden hour,
And make it mine again!
—George E. Powell, in Inter Ocean.

Only Once.

It was a pitiful mistake,
An error sad and grim;
I waited for the railway train,
The light was low and dim.

It came at last, and from the car
There stepped a dainty dame
And looking up and down the place,
She straight unto me came.

"Oh Jack!" she cried, "Oh dear old Jack!"
And kissed me as she spake
Then looking again, and frightened cried:
"Oh what a bad mistake!"

I said: "Forgive me, maiden fair
That I am not your Jack,
And as regards the kiss you gave,
I'll straightway give it back."

And since that night I have often stood
On the platform lighted dim;
But only once in a man's whole life
Do such things come to him.
—Boston Courier.

The Students Remained.

A professor was exceedingly amazed by the fact that many of the students left the recitation room during the course of his lecture. He appealed to them in different ways, but in vain; some few still persisted in going out before the close of the lecture. Finally he announced at the beginning of the hour that in place of his ordinary lecture he proposed to preach a short sermon from the text: "Thou art weighed and found wanting." Then he added: "Gentlemen, you will please pass out as fast as you are weighed."—N. E. Magazine.

A PROPHECY.

Cousin Aurelia, bending over
Her broidery frame through the long still hours,
Stitching daisies and purple clover,
And spikes of gorgeous cardinal flowers;
All the sweet bright summer unheeding,
Save when her floss by the wind is stirred,
She chides the rover, her work impeding,
By lifting eyes with weariness blurred.

What will it profit my little cousin?
Will she gain wisdom, or wealth, or fame,
In days that run into months—a dozen,
While she bends over her 'broidery frame?
Will she be paid when friends shall praise her?
Will she regret when those less kind
With their superior skill amaze her,
Hinting at faults she cannot find?

What does she dream will be the guerdon?
Forward and backward her needle slips;
Her work, her dreams are sure no burden,
To guess by the curve of her rose-red lips.
What does she dream? that horn of plenty
Her magic fingers will soon complete;
Cousin Aurelia, fair and twenty,
Your work I label: "Sweets from the sweet."

What does she dream, while so demurely
Stitching that tuft of tangled grass?
She will not tell—I'll guess—now surely,
Something like this shall come to pass.
Far in the future, dim, uncertain,
A girl of the time will yawn, some day:
"My great-grandmother made this curtain
And ruined her handsome eyes, they say."
—Margaret Holmes, in Youth's Companion.

FRET AND WORRY.

The Most Subtle Enemies of Success in This World.

The most subtle enemy to success is fretting. At the same time it is the most plausible. Not the idle, ill-tempered indulgence which we call "scolding," but the vague worry that finds a ready excuse in fatigue or ill health or in anxiety about "the meat which perisheth;" for not even the genius is above substantial necessities. It is not possible to do one's best work while discontent is sapping the vigor of the mind. Preoccupation is fatal to honest thinking. What sort of mental work can we expect of a man who is engaged in taking account of the stock of his own grievances? And yet there are plenty of men and women who begin each day's task under just such conditions and wonder why they fail. Sighing over things that have been left undone and shrinking from the host of duties advancing upon them they "stand in pause where they shall first begin, and both neglect."

Untrammeled by worry, fretting, borrowing trouble—whatever you choose to call it—life would be relieved of half its friction. It is like the dust in the wheel or dust in the watch. From whatever cause, however excusable, it is a weariness and a snare. Hands stiffened with cold are not deft. The voice roughened with weeping is incapable of pleasant tones. In either case the remedy suggests itself. A society woman noted for her kind and charitable temper was asked how she managed to be so amiable under all circumstances in this gossiping, naughty world. "It is too much trouble to find fault," she made answer. "I should always be unhappy if I thought ill of my friends, and life is too short for that." Another woman who lived by the use of her facile pen was heard to say that although she had taken many lessons in poverty and disappointment, she could not afford to be ill-natured or despondent, because she would be unfitted to earn her own living if she were unhappy.

The farmer puts in his crops "come wind or come weather," and he who lives by the "sweat of his brow" must inure himself to every variety of change.

"A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile."

It takes sunshine to print a photograph. Cheeriness will bring out the best that is in a man. More. It will permeate his work. Did you ever notice the difference in the sound of the same message delivered by two persons? The writings of the prophet Jeremiah have so strong a flavor of melancholy that his very name is the synonym of despondency. We find there no lack of strength or symmetry or gentleness, but the healthy mind would vastly rather read the same message in the prophecy of Isaiah. There is the ring of promise in it. Isaiah seemed to take for granted that his expostulation would not be in vain. Jeremiah, on the other hand, scarcely appeared to hope that his admonition would be heeded. It is simply the man that shines out in his work.

Miss Alcott is one of the few women who could so divest herself of all irritation and discontent as to be able to write healthily and brightly under the most trying circumstances. Throughout her books—even in her pathetic journal—there is a vein of cheery courage which certainly was not the natural result of her early life.

Borrowed trouble is as hard to bear in anticipation as real trouble. A little girl was given a cart and pony and taught to drive. The first time she went out by herself her eye ran down the wide village street, busy with all sorts of vehicles, and the sight overcame her with alarm. How could she ever get safely through such a tangle? she asked herself, and dropping the reins, she screamed with fright. A passing neighbor went to her relief and sought to quiet her fears. "I am so afraid to drive through the crowd," she answered. "But there is no crowd," the friend urged. "These wagons are a long way off and they will only come to meet you a few at a time. Besides, some of them are going the other way." Thus encouraged, the child drove on in confidence unharmed. So we, seeing all that lies before us, fancy it already here, and, cowardlike, refuse to be comforted. Much of this may be endured, much can be cured. Indeed, I am inclined to think that after all our apprehensions are fictitious. We gauge our obligations and responsibilities rather by our own estimate of our own value than by the positive, expressed demands which others make upon our time and service. There is an insidious gratification in the feeling that on one's self depends the machinery of an important undertaking. Suppose it were true. Suppose we are necessary to society to-day; it is a humiliating thought that were we to drop out to-morrow another would speedily be found just as competent to fill the vacant place. In fretting over our cares are we not underestimating the value of the life which places its commands upon us? Fancy what that would be were the necessity for ourselves but removed! Did no one claim one kindly office at our hands! Did no pressing engagements vie with each other for our time!

Perhaps the novice is less likely to fall into the habit of fretting than he who has already proved his power and chafes at the little duties and interruptions which fritter away his time. In this progressive and "elective" age it would not be amiss if the great universities were to institute a course of training in the art of bearing interruption with equanimity and without waste of mental force. Perhaps it would be called the chair of "mental concentration." It takes so small a thing to intercept the thought hovering midway between brain and pen, but how great the struggle to recall it! So far as the interruption itself goes it matters little whether it be "just for one minute"—that sounds so plausible!—or whether the break be final. It is the knot in the thread of thought that mars it. Happy the man who can write a sermon with a child on his knee or draw up a "brief" in the din of the crowded court-room! It was said of Rev. Horatio N. Powers, preacher and poet, that he was in the habit of preparing his sermons with his children about him, answering their questions and attending to their wants.

Discouragement is another element which enters into the success or failure which depends upon purely mental work. It is far more than in its literal sense that "nothing succeeds like success." It has the power of transmutation. It is like yeast, pervading with subtle influence every function of the mind. Starving men thrive on it. Yet, knowing that, and how small a measure of praise would infuse new life into some disheartened soul, we withhold our commendation until perfection shall have been attained. Why not offer a word of encouragement to him who is striving upward by any road? It will help him the sooner to reach the top. There is plenty of room up there. The army that set out is dwindled to a forlorn hope long before it reaches the final struggle for the summit. It needs a stout heart and a strong arm to carry the standard and plant it there. But all honor to those who try and fail. Even though one never get there himself, it is something to have helped another up. A little patience, a little willingness to—be bored? Yes, if you will have it so; for not every one can be as interesting as we are, to ourselves. A clever artist once painted the sea. Under his brush it moaned and tossed its white foam as it advanced and retreated across the glistening sand. One could almost smell the salt. Beside his white umbrella, from day to day, was placed another; and a patient, painstaking lad also painted the sea. To be sure, it was not so restless, nor so wet, nor so salt; but every night his canvas bore away a better picture for the kindly hint and encouraging word which the older man did not grudge. There is no table by which we can calculate the value of inspiration to the humble 'prentice in any craft.

"The reward of one day's work is the power to achieve another." What though letters accumulate, engagements thicken, "wants" multiply, publishers become unreasonable, editors unappreciative, critics harrowing and—hardest of all—interruption breaks the thread of the very first arguments. Acknowledge yourself bankrupt of time and strength and capital. But do not mourn over it. Get out of your rut. If you have friends, seek them. If you have none, make them. It will put yellow glass into your own windows to take a glance through your neighbor's. The best tonic in the world is change of air. Home never seems so dear as when one has been away from it. Association was not given us to be abused, but to be used to the health and profit of both soul and body. Do not think the same thoughts from day to day. All the better that we do not all cherish the same opinions. We shall have an opportunity to test our own standards if there is a fair exchange.

But when you have anything to say, say it. Do begin cheerily. Whistle, if you are a man; if you are a woman, hum in the face of anxiety. Laugh at interruption, snub discouragement. Do not wait to file your letters or oil your typewriter. There will be time enough for that when you are intellectually tired. To-morrow you may have no message. Never mind the past. You cannot help it now. Let the future take care of itself. The present moment is your concern. There will never be another like it. While it may not be possible to make one's surroundings ideal, it is possible to fit one's self for the place designed for him. The Batavian wore an iron ring around his neck until he had slain an enemy. That was voluntary. The goading ring which discontent forges about our necks must be worn with many a tear till we have vanquished the enemy and set ourselves free.—C. Emma Cheney, in Chicago Post.

Wonderful Insects.

The fly-spider lays an egg as long as itself. There are 4,041 muscles in the caterpillar. Hook discovered 14,000 mirrors in the eye of a drone, and to effect the respiration of a carp 13,300 arteries, vessels, veins, bones, etc., are necessary. The body of every spider contains four little masses pierced with a multitude of imperceptible holes, each hole permitting the passage of a single thread, all the threads, to the amount of 1,000 to each mass, join together where they come out, and make the single thread with which the spider spins its web; so that what we call the spider's thread consists more than of 4,000 united.—United Presbyterian.

—"What do you know about the dissolution of parliament?" the managing editor asked of the new man at the foreign desk. "Nothing," he said innocently; "I didn't know it was dissolute at all."—Washington Star.

REALISTIC DIALOGUE.

At One O'clock in the Morning on Fair Mabel's Doorstep.

HARRY and Mabel are discerned standing on Mabel's doorstep. They have returned from the opera, and the love scenes and passages therein have brought a proposal from Harry that has been trembling on his lips for three months. They have been standing on the doorstep for two hours, and are now engaged. He is making a feeble effort to drag himself away, and she is as feebly endeavoring to have him go.

"Well, I s'pose I must go," he says, at last, with a sigh that hoists him almost off his feet.

"Yes, indeed you must," she says. "It's awfully late."

"I don't care if it is."

"Oh; but I must go in—good-by."

"No, no! don't go yet, it isn't late at all."

"Oh, you dreadful boy, you! it must be after midnight."

"No, it is n't. (He knows that it is after one o'clock.) Won't you call me 'Harry' again?"

"Why, I've called you so some fifty times already."

"Once more, dearest; just once more."

"Well, then, 'Harry.'"

"Can't you say 'dear Harry?'"

"Oh, you bad old boy, to make me say such things so soon!"

"Please, please say it."

"Well—'dear Harry'—now I must go."

"Oh, wait—wait—I want to tell you something."

"Well, what is it?"

"Oh, it was about—about—I forget now."

"Oh, you!"

"Wait—don't go, darling; I'll think of it after awhile. One kiss is n't enough when we're just engaged."

ON MABEL'S DOORSTEP.

"One? Why, Harry, how can you say 'one' when you've been so wicked as to steal fifty, at least?"

"Well, fifty don't seem many."

"Why, Harry! you're the very worst fellow—now I am going in; good-by—dear."

"Oh, Mabel, why are you in such a hurry to leave your Harry boy?"

"Such a hurry? Why, Harry, we've been standing here ever and ever so long!"

"Has it seemed so dreadfully long to you?"

"Now, Harry; you know I didn't mean that."

"It hasn't seemed two seconds to me."

"You foolish fellow—but do look at your watch and see what time it is."

"Why, it's only a little after eleven."

"O-o-o-o-h H-a-r-r-y!"

"Look, you can see for yourself by the street lamp."

"Now, Harry, you know as well as I do that you've turned that watch back two good hours, you rogue! Now, good-by!"

"Good-by, if you are so anxious to get rid of me."

"Now, Harry."

"Not without another kiss."

"Oh, you funny, old, foolish fellow, you!"

"Bye-bye, darling.—darling!"

"Bye-bye, dearest."

"Good-bye."

"Good-bye."

"You darling!"—Zenas Dane, in Puck.

A Great Girl.

"I love that girl."

"Why?"

"What do you suppose she sent me for a valentine?"

"I don't know."

"The receipted bill for all the flowers I sent her last year. It's taken a load off my mind, I can tell you."—Puck.

That Would Interest Her.

Mrs. Towne—How did you like the play?

Morris Towne—Don't know anything about it. Could see nothing but women's hats.

Mrs. Towne (greatly interested)—Oh, do tell me how some of them were trimmed!—Puck.

Judging by Appearances.

Landlord (suspiciously)—You are an actor, you say. What is your role?

Boothby Ham—I am playing the heavy, sir. Perhaps you took me for a supe?

Landlord—No; from the size of your wardrobe I fancied you might be doing Cleopatra.—Judge.

He Wanted Something Recent.

Countryman (in book store)—My wife wanted me to get her some good magazine to read.

Proprietor—Yes, sir; how would the Century Magazine do?

Countryman—Gosh, no! She wants a monthly magazine.—Texas Siftings.

What Had Passed.

Congress had been in session all day, and, as a member was met passing out from the hall, he was asked:

"What has passed in congress?"

"Ten hours," was the caustic reply.—N. E. Magazine.

"Nuff Said."

"I wish you wouldn't blow quite so much!" petulantly said the rain to the wind.

"Oh, dry up yourself!" retorted the wind.

"I've had enough out of you!" cried the rain-barrel to the spout.

"Yes," contemptuously returned the spout. "If you weren't so full, you wouldn't slop over the way you do at every little thing."

"Be still, all of you!" hiccoughed the whisky bottle.

"Cork him!" shrieked the baby-wagon, holding its tongue. And the meeting adjourned.—Light.

WE'VE GOT HIM NOW.

The latest deadly weapon drawn on poor Lo.—N. Y. Herald.

His Chances Jeopardised.

"My son," said a kind father, "what have you decided to be when you grow up?"

"I think, father," said the young lad, a gleam lighting up his eye, "that I should like to be a member of congress."

"I am afraid," replied the father, sadly, "that it is even now too late. You have been going to school too long."—Harper's Bazar.

An Apt Illustration.

She (who is a belle)—Pray tell me, Mr. DeRondeau, what do they mean by poetical license?

Mr. DeRondeau (who is a poet)—What! Do you not know? (Suddenly kisses her.)

She (haughtily)—Sir!

Mr. DeRondeau—Well, that was only poetical license.—West Shore.

A Knocked-Out Rival.

Miss Blossom—Whar in d' world 'a yo' been since Chris'mus, Miss Pettigrew?

Miss Pettigrew—I done got 'xploded at d' pahty.

Miss Blossom—Sho!

Miss Pettigrew—Yas-sa. Dat low-down Peters gal gub me a chew ob gum, an' when I bit on to it I foun' hit wuz a torpeeto.—Judge.

Feminine Intuition.

Mr. DeBlank (10 p. m.)—If you don't want Clara to see that thing you are making for her, you'd better put it out of sight, for she'll be up prétty soon. I hear her in the front hall.

Mrs. DeBlank—She won't be up for an hour at least. She's bidding good-night to Mr. Nicefello.—N. Y. Weekly.

Hand and Foot.

"Papa, what is a chirosophist?"

"He's a man who reads character from your fist."

"And what is a chiropodist?"

"He is a man who studies your feet in order to improve your understanding."—Jury.

Saw Him and Called Him.

Mrs. Dogood—Did you see the elephant while you were in New York?

Mrs. Tyger—I didn't; but my husband did. At least when we got home he said one had stepped on his pocketbook.—Puck.

A Case of "Dude Drop."

Gus Snobberly—I suppose you gave up horseback riding on account of your health.

Dudley Canesucker—Yes, I fell off more and more every day.—Texas Siftings.

Couldn't Hear Himself Think.

"Oi can't hear mesilf think," said Pat to his romping children, "an' it's moighty lucky for yez all that Oi can't, fer Oi was jist thinkin' of killin' yez if yes didn't make less noise."—West Shore.

By a Squeeze.

At a social gathering in Harlem, a young lady who was an accomplished vocalist was asked several times to sing, but refused.

"You remind me of a singing doll," remarked Gus De Smith; "you must be pressed to sing."—Texas Siftings.

The Autocrat of the Game.

Mamma—What's the matter with my two little boys?

Jimmie (fretfully)—He wants to play jackstraws, and I say it's just mean for him to always call 'em after hisself, and I play jackstraws to-day or nothing."—Judge.

An Object.

She—So you are just from Minneapolis. How did the people out there receive your lecture on the "Supreme Qualities of Shakespeare?"

He—Well, when I finished the audience gave three cheers for Bacon.—Life.

Real Humor.

"Is that new play you saw last night funny?"

"Oh, immensely funny! One of the characters falls off a chair and gets kicked by a mule, and another one wears some one else's hat."—West Shore.

Seemed Big to Him.

"That fisherman cheats outrageously in his weight."

"Well, I suppose that's because he catches his own fish."—Puck.

Strained Relations.

Archibald—You are related to her by marriage, are you not?

Frigiday—No; I'm her brother by refusal.—Puck.

THREE WERE KILLED

Horrible Accident by the Explosion of an Oil Pipe.

THE VICTIMS TERRIBLY BURNED.

Workmen Knocked Senseless and at the Mercy of the Flames.

Rescuing Parties Unable to Get the Unfortunate Men Out Until the Fire Was Extinguished—Placing the Responsibility—Members of the Oil Company Summoned Before the Coroner.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., March 24.—An explosion occurred about 1:40 p. m. in the yard of the Tidewater Oil Refining Company at Constable Hook, by which three men were burned to death and two others fatally burned.

There are about 25 stills in the yard, all of which are numbered. Running above the chain of stills is a large pipe, which is used to pump the oil from one still into another. A gang of men were at work raising still No. 16 by placing a block under it, when the big pipe connecting the chain of stills on top suddenly exploded. The oil became ignited and poured down on the men who were caught between stills No. 15 and 16.

Rescuing parties were at once set to work to get the men out, but this could not be done until the flames were extinguished. John Hayes, aged 45 years, married, and Michael Haley, 29 years old, married, were dead when taken out. Foreman George Gregory was alive when taken out, but was so badly burned that he died at the hospital shortly after. John Gallagher and John Anderson were taken to the Bayonne Hospital. The physicians at the hospital say they cannot recover.

County Physician Converse notified Coroner Parslew of Hudson County to hold an inquest. An earnest effort will be made to place the responsibility of the accident. The Bayonne police say that some one was surely to blame. It is said that the responsible heads of the oil company will be summoned before the Coroner to tell why the men were allowed to undertake such a dangerous piece of work as raising the oil still and disconnecting the pipe, which resulted in the explosion.

HIS SERVANT DISAPPEARS.

The Abduction of Mr. Perrien Brings to Light Another Case.

DETROIT, Mich., March 24.—The excitement over the abduction of Joseph Perrien last week has brought out the particulars of another mysterious disappearance from Perrien's residence.

The missing person is a former servant of Perrien's, Carolina Beck. Her brother has called at the Perrien residence from time to time to try to get an interview with his sister but without avail, as the family have always put him off with excuses that the girl was ill or away from home.

A reporter got hold of the story yesterday and secured an interview with Perrien, who admitted having knowledge of the girl's whereabouts, saying she was in one of the city institutions, and adding that the police had the particulars of the case. The circumstance is regarded as peculiar, in view of last week's events.

Racing at Monmouth Park.

PHILADELPHIA, March 24.—A. J. Cassatt, president of the Monmouth Park Racing Association, was seen in regard to the rumor that the association would not race at Monmouth Park this season, and said that the subject had been discussed, but that no decision had been arrived at. Mr. Cassatt said that two acts for the purpose of legalizing betting had been passed by the New Jersey Legislature. One of these has been declared unconstitutional, while a case that will settle the constitutionality of the other is now pending in the highest court of that State. If the court decided against this act there will be no racing at Monmouth Park this summer, as neither Mr. Cassatt nor the gentlemen associated with him wished to figure as law-breakers.

ANOTHER BANK CLOSED.

A New York Institution that Lent Money on Worthless Collateral.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The Washington National Bank, at No. 1 Broadway has closed its doors, as it had been discovered that its capital had been impaired. The bank examiner took charge this morning, and the bank's affairs will probably be wound up.

Sidell Tilghman, a director of the bank, said the irregularities in the bank's affairs were first discovered about a week ago. After a cursory examination on Saturday last it was found that the impairment was in the neighborhood of $75,000.

This was to have been made good by the directors yesterday, but President Sherman informed the directors that the impairment was larger than had been discovered and would aggregate about $80,000 more than it was thought to be, it was then decided to discontinue business.

The bank began business last June with a paid up capital of $300,000. The net deposits are only about $600,000, and Director Tilghman declares that the depositors will be paid in full.

It was learned that the bank's money had been loaned out by the president to friends on poor and worthless collateral. President Sherman had the full confidence of the directors. When the complete announcement of the bank's affairs had been made, he had disappeared, no one knew where.

THE HARRIS-POTTS CASE.

The Whole Matter Will be Laid Before the Grand Jury.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Mrs. Potts, the mother of Helen Potts-Harris, called at the district-attorney's office and made a full and complete statement of the case from her point of view. In this statement she repeated the charges that young Harris was implicated in, and responsible for, the death of her daughter, as has already been stated.

The exact nature of these charges, as placed before the district-attorney, could not be learned, as Mr. Nicholls contented himself by merely stating that the mother had called and preferred the charges. He says it will be some days before the matter will go before the grand jury.

STRANGLED TO DEATH.

A Belief that the Tobin Tragedy Was the Work of Tramps.

FRANKLIN, Pa., March 24.—The autopsy of N. P. Tobin, the tailor of this city, showed that he was strangled to death.

The story that the person who caused the mysterious drowning of his daughter two years ago also planned the murder of the father receives some credence from the fact that detectives were always at work on the case and Tobin frequently declared that the chain of evidence would soon be complete.

The most plausible theory is that Tobin was killed by tramps. Five tramps have been arrested, and two are identified as having been seen near Tobin's residence on Saturday.

Gen. Sherman's Home to be Sold.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The house where General Sherman died is to pass out of the hands of the Sherman family. P. Tecumseh Sherman, the veteran warrior's younger son, has been invested with full authority by the heirs of General to dispose of the house No. 75 West 71st street. The instrument giving the authority for the sale has been filed in the register's office.

Collapse of the Wool Hat Trust.

DANBURY, CONN., March 24.—Circulars have been received here by a number of hatters stating that the big wool hat trust recently formed in New York had collapsed. The reason given for the failure of the trust was that it was impossible to harmonize all the existing interests in the hatting trade. Manufacturers will handle their product independently as heretofore.

Consecration of Bishops.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Brooklyn's firebug has been captured. He is Henry G. Miller, aged 32, of No. 159 Sands street. The prisoner made a full confession of his crimes to Fire Marshal Lewis. It was he who set fire to No. 146 High street on Saturday night. Miller's father, who is a retired merchant, says his son is insane. He attributes the insanity to cigarettes.

New Warden of Sing Sing Prison.

BOSTON, March 24.—The Governor sent to the House a message directing attention to the mismanagement of the State prison. He recommends that the office of superintendent of prisons be abolished and that its powers be transferred to a board of prison commissioners.

FOLLOWED BY A MOB

Timothy Healy Savagely Assaulted in Cork.

BLINDED FROM HIS INJURIES.

Great Excitement Over the Affair and a General Fight Expected.

Parnell Speaks at Sligo and Endorses the Candidacy of Valentine Dillon—Queen Victoria's Trip to Grasse—Dillon and O'Brien Transferred to Cork Jail—Newfoundlanders Crying for Annexation.

DUBLIN, March 24.—Timothy Healy, who made a bitter speech yesterday about Mr. Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea, was the object at noon of a fierce and possibly serious attack in Cork.

Healy was leaving the court room where his brother Maurice had just won a libel suit against a Cork adherent of Parnell, when an angry mob followed and tried to assault him, calling him a "woman-hitter," etc.

Healy took refuge in the dressing-room of the Victoria Hotel. A man rushed in and blew out the light, crying: "Fight a man, if you dare, instead of reviling a woman."

Healy tried to escape, but the assailant struck him, smashing his eye-glasses, and cutting his eyes and face. The intruder then fled.

Healy was blinded from his injuries, and cried for help. Three doctors were summoned, who, upon examination, expressed a fear that the eye-sight was in danger.

Healy's assailant proves to be O'Brien Dalton, one of the defendants in the Tipperary conspiracy trial. The broken glasses injured the corner of the left eye and inflammation is threatened.

There is great excitement over the assault and a general fight between the Parnellites and Healyites is expected.

DISORDER IN IRELAND.

Parnell Speaks at Sligo and Endorses the Candidacy of Dillon.

DUBLIN, March 24.—In his speech at Sligo, Mr. Parnell held that landlords should be bought out by compulsory expropriation, the tenants to occupy their holdings in perfect security and practically rent-free. Eight or ten millions of pounds would be more than ample, he thought, to compensate the landlords, and would accomplish a nobler work than the emancipation of the American slaves.

As to candidates, he preferred Valentine Dillon to traitors who had deserted their party, as Dillon would not run if Gladstone made faces at him.

Dillon's election agent has applied for protection against organized mobs.

Several Parnell meetings required the interference of the police to preserve order.

PARNELL AND HEALY.

They May Try Conclusions in Cork When All the Arrangements Are Made.

DUBLIN, March 24.—The Freeman's Journal publishes a letter from Mr. Parnell, addressed to the Cork Leadership committee, informing them that he has placed his application for the Chiltern Hundreds in the hands of Mr. Nolan, the whip, with the request that it be forwarded to the Chancellor of the Exchequer the moment Mr. Healy presents himself before his Cork constituents for re-election.

Mr. Parnell says that the tone of studied insult, and the untruthful character of the statements comprised in Mr. Maurice Healy's letter with regard to the matter of contesting that constituency are such as debar him from communicating directly with either Mr. Healy or the friends of that gentleman.

Maurice Healy declares that if Parnell's letter is genuinely tendered he will at once meet it.

To Meet Coercion by Annexation.

HALIFAX, N. S., March 24.—The people of Newfoundland are greatly excited over the attempt to pass an act to coerce them into carrying out the hated modus vivendi. Mass meetings have been called all over the State, and in the Legislature party lines are obliterated and the most violent speeches have been made denouncing "the cowardly and treacherous conduct of the British government." The majority of the legislators have undoubtedly determined to go in for annexation to the United States.

Dillon and O'Brien Taken to Cork Jail.

CORK, March 24.—Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon, the Nationalist members of the House of Commons, who have been recently confined in Galway Jail, were during the day transferred here where they were again jailed. As they passed through the city on jaunting cars they were recognized and enthusiastically cheered by the people.

Queen Victoria's Trip to Grasse.

LONDON, March 24.—The Queen has arrived at Cherbourg and taken the train for Grasse. The French railway company ordered that no strangers should be admitted to the royal train, and a number of local trains have been laid over for the journey. But few stoppages are made and there are special guards at every junction.

NO KNIGHTS NEED APPLY.

The Clothing Manufacturers State How They Will End the Lockout.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 24.—The following notice to their late employes has been issued signed by the 21 firms of clothing manufacturers of this city engaged in the lockout:

"It is unnecessary for us to rehearse to you the unpleasant events which led to the closing of our respective cutting rooms on the 7th of March. We are now ready to resume work, and any of you who wish to re-engage yourselves are requested to make formal application to your late employers on or before the 28th day of March, 1891, after which date we shall fill any and all vacancies with other applicants.

"We shall at all times insist upon our unrestricted right to hire and discharge employes.

"The hours of labor will be the same as those before the 7th of March, and those whose applications are favorably considered will be paid the same rate of wages as were paid them on the last mentioned date.

"We will, however, employ no person who is a member of an assembly of the Knights of Labor."

THE CONNECTICUT PUZZLE.

Senator Fox Will Offer a Bill To-day to Settle the Vexed Question.

HARTFORD, CONN., March 24.—Senator Timothy Fox, of the New Haven district, will offer another bill in the Senate to-day, which has in view a settlement of the Gubernatorial controversy on lines which call for a compromise on both sides.

The bill was drafted by Lawyer Henry T. Blake and it will be presented to the Senate at Mr. Blake's request. In his reasons for drafting the bill Mr. Blake points out the danger and evils to the Commonwealth under the present state of affairs.

His bill differs slightly from those already presented by the Democrats in the Senate, in that it provides that the General Assembly shall recognize Morgan G. Bulkeley as Governor until his successor shall be sworn in. It is believed that the bill will meet the fate of its predecessors.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

The Plans for the Overland Journey Somewhat Disarranged.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—President Harrison's California trip has been disarranged. He had intended to take Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. McKee and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harrison with him. Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Russell Harrison, however, are preparing to sail for Europe about May 15. This will necessitate, it is thought, leaving Master Benjamin Harrison and Mary Lodge McKee in the care of Mrs. Harrison, and she may not wish to be separated from them for the six weeks contemplated in the overland journey.

Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Russell Harrison propose going direct to London, where they are to be the guests of Minister and Mrs. Lincoln. Minister and Mrs. Phelps will look out for their comfort in Berlin, and Minister and Mrs. Reid will perform a like courtesy on their arrival in Paris.

Found in a Boiling Salt Vat.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 24.—Last Thursday Henry Reddy, whose home was on Beaver avenue, Allegheny, entered the salt works of Haller, Beck & Co., on Rebecca street, in an intoxicated condition. After a struggle the watchman succeeded in putting Reddy out of the building. He sat down in an open window and had not been seen since. Yesterday his body was found at the bottom of one of the boiling salt vats. It is supposed he went to sleep on the windowsill and fell backward into the vat.

Lingo's Friends to the Rescue.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 24.—Prominent colored men men met here in the office of ex-Judge Wescott to take steps in behalf of Francis Lingo, the convicted murderer of Mrs. Annie Miller. They will raise a fund to carry his case to the higher courts. They all believe him innocent of the crime. Lingo's counsel now has the name of the negro that was seen in the bush lot on the fatal day, and claims to have evidence that the man was not Lingo.

To Bridge the St. Lawrence.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 24.—It is rumored in railway circles that the New York Central Railroad intends to bridge the St. Lawrence at a point between Kingston and Well's Island. It is also said that this company intends to build a bridge across the river from Covington, N. Y., to Cornwall and from there to build a road to Sault Ste. Marie, and that they have been promised a bonus to enable them to build this road.

Death from a Poisonous Root.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 24.—Three young men named Henry Conrad, Nicholas Miller and Charles Higgs, partook of a root supposed to be artichoke. It was some poisonous growth, however, and Conrad died within an hour after eating of it. Miller is in a critical condition and the doctors say he will die. Higgs took but a mouthful of the root and will recover.

McKinley Speaks in Worcester.

WORCESTER, Mass., March 24.—Congressman McKinley was given a hearty reception here last night. Many prominent Republicans were on the platform. Congressman Walker presided and introduced Mr. McKinley who spoke at length upon the tariff issue. His remarks were greeted with applause.

Chilian Rebels Protest.

BERLIN, March 24.—A protest has been received here from the agents of the Chilian insurgents against permitting the departure to Chili of vessels bought by Balmaceda for warlike purposes.

RETALIATION URGED

Senator Paddock Talks About Germany's Action.

PROMPT MEASURES ADVOCATED.

The President May Issue an Order Excluding German Beet Sugar.

A Statement that Senator Edmunds Will Resign—The Surplus in the Treasury—A Bulletin About Fugitives from Great Britain—No Gold Bars for Shipment—Circular to Customs Collectors.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Senator Paddock, who has been spending several days in New York, has returned to Washington. In response to an inquiry regarding the report that the government was contemplating retaliation upon Germany as a result of the refusal of the German Empire to remove the prohibition on American meat products, the Senator said:

"The reports that President Harrison has stated to me the intention of the administration to retaliate upon Germany for the cause named is not true. However, I have good reason to believe that if the senseless and unjust discrimination against American pork and other meat products is not at once removed our government will take prompt measures to retaliate by excluding certain German importations from this country.

"I urged upon the President that under the provisions of the act of August 30, 1890, German beet sugar, of which $16,000,000 worth were imported into this country last year, should be excluded under the provisions of such a law. I have reason to believe that President Harrison is seriously considering the issuance of such a proclamation, and that if the restriction which Germany places upon our meat products is not promptly removed an order prohibiting the acceptance of German beet sugar at the ports of the United States will soon be issued."

WILL EDMUNDS RESIGN?

Ex-Senator Pierce Publishes a Statement to that Effect.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—It develops that the evidently inspired statement in a Minneapolis paper in regard to Secretary Proctor's resignation, which says that Senator Edmunds expects to resign before the next meeting of the Senate, owing to the health of his daughter and other considerations, and that Mr. Proctor will doubtless succeed him, comes from ex-Senator Pierce, whose friendly relations with Mr. Edmunds gives it color.

Mr. Pierce says this is why Mr. Edmunds at the last session of the Senate surprised the Senators with the remark that it might be the last time he might meet with them or words to that effect.

Rumors About Commissioner Morgan.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The report that the President had demanded the resignation of Indian Commissioner Morgan is denied at the Interior Department. It is stated, however, that charges have been preferred against the Commissioner on account of his alleged discrimination against Roman Catholic Indian teachers. Mr. Morgan says the present trouble originated solely because of the failure of a Catholic Indian named Jennings to secure reappointment at Green Bay, Wis. Also that a Catholic sister was insubordinate and remained away from her school for several days without giving an explanation. She was dismissed.

Fugitives from Great Britain.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The Department of State has issued a bulletin, stating that it is necessary, in order to secure the detention of fugitives from justice in Great Britain, that the request should be made by the Governor of the State, through the State Department. An exception is made in favor of the city and county of New York, where the District-Attorney is allowed to apply directly to the department without the interposition of the Governor.

Circular to Collectors of Customs.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Secretary Foster issued an important circular to Collectors of Customs, which says: "To insure the necessary identification of refined sugars which may be exported on or after April 1 for benefit of draw-back, the exporter will be required to file preliminary entry before that date, and the sugars covered thereby shall remain in the custody of a customs officer at the expense of the exporter until duly shipped for transportation."

No Gold Bars for Shipment.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Secretary Foster decides that the policy of the department in exercising the discretion invested in the Secretary of the Treasury by the Act of March 3, 1891, in declining to furnish gold bars in exchange for gold coin for shipment, would be adhered to, and the necessary instructions to that effect were issued by the director of the mint.

The Surplus in the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The surplus in the Treasury to-day is about $13,000,000. Although the internal revenue receipts for February showed a falling off from the previous month, the custom receipts continue to roll up and the heavy drain on the Treasury from the direct tax, about $8,000,000 so far, does not seem to materially affect it.

The Keystone Bank May Resume.

PHILADELPHIA, March 24.—An effort is being made to establish the Keystone National Bank with new capital. The bank was placed in the hands of a receiver last week.

EX-GOV. ROBINSON DEAD.

He Expired at His Elmira Home After a Lingering Illness.

ELMIRA, N. Y., March 24.—There is general regret in this city over the death of ex-Governor Robinson. His son, Colonel D. C. Robinson, and daughter Nellie and Colonel Robinson's family were at his bedside when he passed away.

The funeral will take place Thursday afternoon. Rev. T. K. Beecher will officiate.

Colonel Robinson is in receipt of hundreds of telegrams of condolence on the death of his father. One of the first dispatches received was a long one from Gov. Hill. It was largely of a personal character.

[Lucius Robinson was born in Windham, Greene County, N. Y., Nov 4, 1810. He was educated at the academy at Delhi, studied law, and in 1832 was admitted to the Bar. He became District Attorney, and was appointed Master in Chancery in 1843, and reappointed two years later.

When the Republican party was formed he left the Democratic organization. As a Republican he was elected a member of the Assembly in 1859 and State Comptroller in 1865 and 1868. In 1865 he was nominated by the Democrats for the latter office but was not elected.

He was a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1871 and 1872. He was elected Comptroller in 1876 by the Democrats. He was elected Governor in 1876, but failed of re election when renominated in 1879.]

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic A. Pollock, whose marriage was recorded in these columns of last Saturday, have gone on an extended tour through the South. Upon their return they will make their home at 70 West Seventh street. The groom is the son of Thomas C. Pollock, of this city, general freight agent of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Progress in Water-Works Matters.

At the special meeting of the City Common Council last evening a resolution was adopted that a committee of three be appointed to confer with the Corporation Counsel and take such further action in the water-works litigation as in his best judgment should be proper. President Smith appointed the present Water Committee, Councilmen Moffett, Hetfield and Spangenberg.

Councilman Moffett stated, and Councilman Ackerman corroborated him, that there is nothing of mystery or secrecy concerning the bids and specifications for water-works and sewerage in the Water Committee's hands, as had been intimated by irresponsible parties, but that it would be unfair to disclose the details of the bids until later. The Committee reported that they were compelled to defer their final report till the Governor should sign the new sewerage law under which it is proposed to act. The report was accepted.

He Thinks It a Fight on the Facts.

In conversation with a PRESS reporter regarding the statement twice made in these columns to the effect that the Hyde-French dam case was entirely a battle between City Counsel Marsh and Borough Attorney Reed, a prominent lawyer said: It would seem to me that the case was something more than a "fight between counsel" after all, inasmuch as there were over one hundred witnesses sworn in the case and Mr. Hyde and his witnesses swore that the dam had been raised, while Mr. French and his witnesses swore that it had not been raised. The Vice Chancellor who tried the case declared on the argument that it was purely a question of fact. To decide the facts, the Court is required to weigh evidence spreading over about twelve hundred pages of type-written testimony in which honest men flatly contradict one another over and over again. The Court will pay much attention to counsel, but a good deal more to the witnesses.

MORE ABOUT THE TROLLEY.

Those Who Oppose It, Writes a Citizen, Are Blind to Plainfield's Interests.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It is entirely natural that many citizens of Plainfield should be easily misled by misrepresentations concerning the overhead electric wire trolley system for street railway car propulsion. A large proportion of our people remain at home, and many have never seen a railway of the kind, except the primitive road at Asbury Park. At Baltimore, and at Meriden, Conn., two similar failures have been extensively and dishonestly used, to mislead uninformed people into believing that these exceptions are proofs that the electric trolley system is a failure. It is a magnificent success. The development of the electric railway motors into an absolutely safe, reliable, and economical power for street-car propulsion has been so recent AND SO RAPID that many intelligent and generally well-informed people are amazed to discover, on investigation, how far behind the times they are in holding opinions concerning electric motor railways based on experiences of roads built 2, 3 or 4 years ago. The poorest electric railway ever yet built has given better accommodations than the best horse car service, and is cleaner, swifter and safer. The Meriden case is no exception, and it will be seen that a modern electric trolley railway system will soon take the place of the rejected system which was built subject to certain guarantees (not fulfilled, I am informed), and no doubt condemned to enable a perfected trolley system to be substituted. Either the Thomson-Houston or the Sprague (Edison) will probably be adopted. Horse cars won't long be tolerated by that enterprising Yankee community. Opinions formed a year ago, or based on electric roads constructed before 1890, are worthless to-day.

The poles and wire as now constructed are not "unsightly"; they are in fact not noticeable at all. The ugly fences and uncurbed mud-banks along Broadway are unsightly and are noticeable. No man, woman or child in the United States has ever been killed or injured by the electric current from the trolley system wires. The maximum voltage of 500 is abundantly proved to be harmless to human life, while there is practically no danger at all that persons will receive the current. Every day millions of passengers are being carried in safety and comfort on more than 250 such railways in the United States, without any electric injuries or fatalities to human being. What rank nonsense, then, is this hue and cry about "danger" that does not exist!

The overhead wire construction is practically free from all these objections, yet the opposition is not removed, hence we must conclude that all this trolley clamor is merely a convenient pretext, handy for those who are in fact striving to debar the citizens of Plainfield from those transportation conveniences which the public comfort and health demand.

These men profess to be public-spirited, while displaying the most unreasonable and uncharitable opposition to the well-being of their fellow-citizens. It is truly a humiliating exhibition of mistaken selfishness and narrowness. I doubt whether men so blind to their own welfare, and to that of their city, can see a trolley at all, and they are certainly too tough-skinned to be liable to injury from 500 volts in the trolley wire, whereas on our level streets not over 250 volts will be necessary to run the palace cars. The "Jersey Lightning" some are popularly supposed to take at the "Country Club House" is far more dangerous and shocking.

"Upon what meat do these our little would-be Caesars feed" that they should consider themselves superior to those who live on other streets less direct and not so perfectly adapted to the public pleasure? The electric cars must run on some street; they cannot be operated underground; nor can the railway be put on top of their houses. Broadway is the natural and direct pathway to Short Hills. When the railway is put there those "mud-banks" can be curbed, and the street can be handsomely graded and stoned from curb to curb and their "diabolical" fences can be taken down. It will thus become a beautiful highway, for they will be stimulated to adorn their more valuable plots because hundreds and thousands will then pass by to admire and applaud, and the right and left driveways will then ensure safety against collisions, and each be wider than the centre part used now. But, better still, they will themselves have been made, like their street, broader and more admirable. Away with this narrow, shallow, unmanly provincialism! Be quick to undo the harm these boomerang protests are doing, both to the city and to yourselves!—for if persisted in, the inevitable consequence of obstructing or defeating the natural right of our people to have these public palace cars run on our main and direct arteries of travel, must be popular derision and contempt. It is a feudal power, dangerous and unprofitable to exercise unreasonably. PRO BONO PUBLICO.

QUEER SUPERSTITIONS.

IN Yorkshire the English peasant if he happens to see the new moon without having a piece of silver money in his pocket immediately turns heels over head to change his luck.

IN parts of Scotland if a pedestrian, on first seeing a new moon, will stop instantly, kiss his hand three times and bow he is quite sure to find something of value within the next thirty days.

THE coasters of the Fiji islands will not eat until they can sit flat upon the ground directly over a triangle made of three small fishbones; then they only handle the food with the left hand.

THE first visitor in a shop or market of Paris is believed by many to determine the fortunes for the day. In some cases the tradesman crosses himself with the money received and says: "God bless the hand who pays it."

THE jettatura, or evil eye, is one of the most common superstitions of Italy. To guard against this charms are worn almost universally, as they also are in Spain, Portugal, Austria, Russia and other countries to prevent disaster and bring good luck.

IN Cornwall a piece of money is exhibited to the new moon when first beheld; if this money is "the first taken on market day," is duly spit on and turned three times toward the person who shows it, good luck is almost sure to follow.

THE inhabitants of the interior of the Fiji islands will not partake of food while a cloud is in sight, especially if the cloud lies in the west, fearing that the "Great Air Whale," whose bellowing (thunder) is often heard in that country, will pounce on and utterly annihilate them for such irreverence.

They Hooted and Derided the System at First. But Now They Deem It "The Poetry of Motion", and Whoever Tried to Take It Away Would Be Mobbed.

THE PRESS publishes below a copy of a highly interesting letter from the Richmond Union Passenger Railway Company of Richmond, Va.:

DEAR SIR:—The Richmond Union Passenger Railway was built on a route which excited the derision of every business man in this city; the unanimous opinion was, "it will not pay". Later on, this was succeeded by the cry "it is a dangerous experiment", our papers teemed with cards from "Citizen", "Taxpayer" and other queer people who like their compositions in the newspapers, calling it "a land-jobbing scheme". Eminent (?) electricians said that the cars could never run over the route, etc., but now three years have passed; 30 and 40 cars have been run daily, carrying thousands of people, without injury of any kind from the electric equipment, or wires, or current; and it is better in every respect now than when the first car was run. So successful has this line been that the City Railway, which runs on the best and most frequented business streets of this city, and a street from which poles and wires had been prohibited by an ordinance previously, was equipped, last July, with the same system, and is and has been running since the first day of July, 1890, carrying during that period (from July 1, 1890, to January 1, 1891,) 1,239,490 passengers, without any electric accident whatsoever. No accident has happened here since the introduction of electricity for lights or motive power; from the current, wires or machinery, and we have been using it now nearly ten years. It is the merest child play to urge danger as an argument. I venture to assert that there was fifty times more danger in inhaling the odors which arise in summer from the droppings of horses on a car route, than from the use of electric power, when the lines are properly built and equipped.

The cars make a little noise, and sparks are sometimes given out by the wheels and trolley, but neither to any objectionable extent. If anything should happen which would cause our lines to think of abandoning the electric power, I believe it would cause a riot here. It would depreciate property by a hundred per cent. When we started it appreciated property fully to that extent. Our people would never consent to go back to the old slow method of propulsion. Electric power for street car propulsion has come to stay, and a man might as well try to turn the sun back in its course, or to doubt that the earth is a globe, as to fight against it. Our roads run along residential streets, mostly occupied by houses of a cost within say $5,000, and cross the fashionable streets at right angles, in the most fashionable suburbs.

A few croakers or chronic objectors say that their property has been injured; but when asked to name the figures at which they are now willing to dispose of their holdings they invariably name a price (if they can be induced to name any at all) at about 50 per cent. higher than before the electric railway was built. The advance in price of land along which our roads run has been enormous, being in some sections four to five hundred per cent; it seems incredible, but it is true. I can cite an instance where I had a mortgage on a house and a large lot, which was foreclosed two years before our road was built in that section, and it failed to sell for enough to pay out the mortgage. It is now held, and can be sold for four times the amount of the mortgage. It has changed hands several times and has actually sold for more than three times the amount of the mortgage.

I cannot name any property in this city on any street on which our roads run, except one block in the residential portions, which can be bought for less than twice the amount it was held for before an electric road was here. Some property has not advanced as much as others, owing to the changes of a fashionable nature, but the heaviest depreciation in property (residential) has been in that section which is most remote from a street railway of any kind here. It lies in that section which during the war, was the residence of Jefferson Davis, the late lamented ex-President of the Confederacy, and before that period was the place of the costly homes of our richest tobacconists and slave owners. Of course there are persons here who contend, just as the Fifth avenue land-owners do, that a street railway of any kind along a residential street is highly injurious, but it is equally true that there are some persons who contend that railroads generally have ruined the country.

There are people who think a street is injured by having working people walk along the walk way; they will not ride in a street car, "as it smells bad", and they would rather a city or place be kept where it was a hundred years ago, "if society is to be injured"; but those kind of people are very good in their place, and the place is the grave, and the sooner they occupy the one place where street railways and other improvements will not trouble the occupants, the better it will be for the go-ahead people of this progressive country. The testimony of our city engineer would be valuable to you, and I suggest that you write to him and ask categorical replies to such questions as you may want answered. You will find from him that the assessment for city taxes of the entire city real estate has increased in the past five years, during which the electric light and railways have been in existence; the amount of this increase has been about $10,000,000, or say one-fourth more than the entire assessment five years ago. That the finest and most costly residences which have ever been built in this city are within a block or two of our electric line, and they have been built during the year 1890. That the most expensive lots lie along and about the line of our roads. That with the latest improved sidegear used by electric railways, thus reducing the wear to a minimum and causing the cars to run noiselessly, the electric railway is the "poetry of motion", and the acme of street railway propulsion. That the streets are now cleaner and in better condition along the railways than in other sections of the city. That it is the safest, quickest and best transit that any city can have, and, finally, that more new houses have been constructed along the lines of our roads, and along the streets which they run, than in any other locality or streets in this very scattered city, and that now there is scarcely an unoccupied lot along the line of the electric road in the city limits, or in the immediate suburbs.

Very truly yours,
A. PIZZINI, JR.,
Vice President and Treasurer.

I HAVE been a great sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breathe. Some nights I could not sleep and had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and am using it freely; it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it and with happy results in every case. It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety, and does all that is claimed for it. It is curing my deafness.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

Section 3. Said company shall keep in repair to the satisfaction of the committee on streets, the paving or other surface material of the portion of streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, and in addition shall so keep in repair eighteen inches on each side of the portion of said streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks; or, if not so kept and maintained, the repairs thereto may be made by or under the direction of said Committee on Streets and to their satisfaction, and the expense thereof shall be paid, on demand by said company to said city; provided that the said committee on streets, or a majority of them, shall give at least ten days' notice, in writing, of their intention to make such repairs; the said notice to be served upon any officer or employe of said company who may be found at their office or depot.

Section 4. The said company and its officers, servants, agents or employes shall not, nor shall any or either of them, be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice or slush alongside the said track or tracks, in any street or streets, in such manner as to obstruct other public travel therein; but, when removing such snow, ice or slush from said track or tracks, the said company or its said officers, servants, agents or employes, shall cause the same to be immediately leveled between said track or tracks and the gutter line on each side thereof; under a penalty of twenty dollars to be paid by said company, or by any of its said officers, servants, agents or employes so offending to said city, for each and every offense.

Section 6. The company shall, in laying its tracks, switches and turn-outs, conform in all cases, to the grade lines of the streets, as now established, or as they may be hereafter changed or established by the Common Council; and said company shall in case of any such change of grade, conform thereto, and alter such tracks, switches and turn-outs at their own expense, and without unnecessary delay, and under the direction of said committee on streets; or, in case of default, the said committee on streets shall make such a change, or cause the same to be made, and the expense thereof shall be paid, on demand, by said company to said city; provided ten days' notice of the committee's intention to make such change shall be given, and served in the same manner as in case of repairs as aforesaid.

Section 7. In passing over the gutters of any cross street where the bottom of such gutters is or may be below the grade line of such railroad, the rails shall be securely laid and fastened upon iron bridges of the most approved pattern; and such bridges shall be extended on each side of the track or tracks to the gutter line of the street in which said track or tracks is or are laid; the bridges and work to be subject to the inspection and approval of said Committee on Streets, in every particular.

Section 9. Section 10. The said city reserves the right to dig or excavate in or upon any such street in which said railroad shall be so constructed for the purpose of laying, examining, repairing or replacing any water or sewer pipe or pipes or making or shutting off any connection therewith, or for the purpose of making any other public improvement, or of doing any other public work of any kind whatsoever; and the said company shall not have any recourse against said city therefor, for damages or otherwise, because of any detention or obstruction to the travel upon said railroad arising therefrom.

Section 12. That the cars shall be of the pattern known as the vestibule cars, they shall be lighted by electricity and properly heated in winter, and shall be similar in construction and design to the cars of the Rapid Transit Street Railway Company of the city of Newark, N. J. The company shall use upon its cars the Climax or other noiseless gearing, and shall have proper bells or gongs, and shall be run at a speed of not more than twelve miles an hour.

Section 13. That the cars to be used on said railroad shall be propelled by electricity supplied by overhead wires; that the poles necessary for the overhead electric construction shall be of steel or iron, or wood when desired by property owners, they shall be placed between curb lines and sidewalk, opposite each other and shall be located as nearly as may be one hundred and twenty-five feet apart. The trolley wire shall be properly guarded so as to prevent other wires coming into contact therewith. The current used by said company to propel its cars shall not exceed five hundred volts.

Section 15. That the fares charged for the transportation of passengers over the said railway within the city of Plainfield, shall be as follows: Children under four years of age, free; children over four and under ten years of age not occupying seats required by other passengers, three cents; all others, five cents. That said company shall maintain a system of transfers for a continuous ride within the city limits for a single fare on all lines now or hereafter owned or operated by said company, and also to give and receive like transfers to and from all the lines of other street railways upon any equitable basis that can be agreed upon by said companies, and in case of failure of any two of said companies to agree upon any such equitable basis of transfer, the question shall be submitted to three arbitrators, to be appointed by the Supreme Court judge holding the circuit for the county of Union, the decision of a majority of such arbitrators to be final and conclusive, and binding upon each of the companies.

Section 16. That no license fee shall be charged for the running of the cars of the said company for the period of five years from the date of the adoption of this ordinance; that for each and every year next following said first term of five years there shall be paid to the city a license fee of twenty dollars per annum for every car operated by said company.

Section 17. That the cars of the said company shall be run under the following minimum headway, between six A. M. and six A. M. fifteen minutes; between ten A. M. and three P. M. thirty minutes; between three P. M. and eight P. M. fifteen minutes; between eight P. M. and midnight thirty minutes. The said headway to be reduced as the service requires. Said company shall run its cars in both directions along all portions of its route so that there shall be an equal number of trips each way daily.

Section 18. That when any other method of furnishing the power of the propulsion of cars by electricity shall have been determined to be a practical success, by a commission consisting of three electrical engineers, one to be selected by the mayor, one by the said company, and the third by the two so chosen, such company shall within six months after the passage of a resolution by the Common Council requiring the same to be done, and notice thereof given take down their overhead construction and substitute therefor such new methods of propulsion; provided such commission may be appointed at any time the Mayor and Common Council may by resolution require, and the said company shall appoint its representative within thirty days after the approval of such resolution, or forfeit the permission hereby given; and if such commission shall report in favor of the method of propulsion of cars by electricity hereby permitted, another commission or commissions may be appointed as often as the Mayor and Common Common Council may require in the same manner and subject to the same conditions.

Section 19. In case such substitution is made, or the said company shall forfeit the permission hereby given by refusal to appoint a member of the commission as in the last section provided for, the Common Council may order the poles and overhead construction of the said company taken down, and the said company shall within ninety days from the service of such order upon the President or any director of said company take down and remove such poles and overhead construction, and restore the pavement of the street or streets to its original condition within that time. In case the poles and overhead construction are not removed or the street restored to its original condition by any company within ninety days from the service of such order, the same shall be done by the Street Commissioner, at the expense of said company, and the company shall in that case pay all expenses connected therewith on demand, and in case the city shall remove such poles and overhead construction, the same shall thereupon become and be the property of the city.

Section 20. That said company upon the final adoption of this Ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges granted hereby shall agree as a condition precedent to file with the City Clerk of the city of Plainfield a contract to be executed by said company and duly approved by the Corporation Counsel wherein said company covenant and agree with the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield to abide by and perform all the matters and things herein on the part of said company to be observed, kept and performed; that it will, at any and all times hereafter fully indemnify and protect the city of Plainfield or and from any and all suits, actions and proceedings that may be brought and maintained or sought to be brought and maintained, by any person or corporation, on account of or by reason of, the adoption or maintenance by said company, its successors or assigns of said electric system aforesaid, or the construction or maintenance of said electric system, or anything connected therewith, or any act of omission or commission by said company, its successors or assigns or any of its agents or servants, at any time or times, and will whenever requested by said city, fully defend any and every such action, suit or proceeding.

Section 21. That said company shall also at the same time herein above specified for filing said contract file a bond to the city in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the committee of streets and corporation counsel of said city; conditioned for the full and faithful keeping, observance and performance of the terms and conditions in this ordinance contained on part of said company to be kept, observed and performed. And in case the conditions or terms upon which said company is granted permission to locate its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the city reserves the right to revoke the permission herein granted, to remove the tracks of the said company and all the constructions made in the streets of the city by the said company, its successors or assigns.

AUSTRIAN census takers have discovered a score or more persons in the empire who have passed their one-hundredth birthday. The eldest was the widow of Peter Hanel. She has a certificate of birth dated December 24, 1776. Of her four living sons, the youngest is seventy years old. In Szegedin a man named Isak showed a birth certificate one hundred and five years old.

LUCY TINCKER (colored), of Trigg county, Ky., aged one hundred and five years, has cut a full set of new teeth, the old ones having decayed and disappeared about forty years ago. She had also been nearly blind for many years, but recently her sight began to improve, and she can now see as well as when a young woman. She is the mother of fifteen children and has ninety-odd grandchildren now living.

MISERY—HAPPINESS.

A Story Which Will Interest Thousands.

NO APPETITE—DISGUST FOR FOOD.

Happiness and misery are measured by the stomach.

Did you ever think of this?

The happy person is the one who eats well.

The miserable person is the one who cannot eat, has no appetite, or is unable to digest his food well.

Did you ever know a good-natured dyspeptic?

On the contrary, are they not always irritable, nervous, cross, blue, discouraged, depressed in mind, always looking upon the dark side of everything, and allowing trifles to irritate and annoy them?

For good, wholesome geniality, for good-natured enjoyment of the world, for exalted aims and high ambitions, for all that makes life worth living, look to the person who eats well and has a good digestion and assimilation.

The human body, notwithstanding its intricacy, is a machine, and if any of its organs are out of order, the system languishes. GOOD HEALTH MEANS GOOD DIGESTION.

"Good digestion waits on appetite,
And health on both."

You, therefore, who suffer from Spring debility, loss of appetite, indigestion and dyspepsia, who cannot eat because food distresses you, who have risings of gas, faintness, sinking and gnawing at the pit of the stomach, swelling or bloating, who have malaria and are bilious, with dizzy, dull-feeling head, bad taste in the mouth mornings, and feel dispirited, lack your old-time energy, are depressed in mind and miserable in body, remember that it is your stomach and weakened nerves which cause all your difficulties.

If there is one thing written above another in the world's happiness, if there is one gift without which life is a wretchedness of blackest misery, and with which all the blessings of life teeming with its million joys and pleasures, are at command, that gift is good digestion.

How to get it is the great question—so many things have been tried without avail. But there is one remedy which never fails, and that is that greatest of all stomach medicines Dr. Greene's Nervura. If you have not tried this wonderful remedy which so quickly and completely tones up the condition and regulates the action of the stomach and bowels, assists digestion and aids assimilation, do so at once, and good appetite, perfect digestion and sound health Perfect Digestion by will be yours. It is Dr. Greene's Nervura, purely vegetable and harmless, and is for sale by all druggists at $1 per bottle.

How Any One Can Have Good Digestion.

Close attention to business and excessive use of tobacco made my nerves very weak, and badly deranged my stomach. I had an extreme tired feeling, and could not eat or sleep naturally. I take pleasure in stating that Dr. Greene's Nervura has completely cured me.

AT EVENING.

Eastward the hilltops show
Still where his wheels have run,
All golden in the glow
Of the departing sun;
Burns now a single spar
In the last crimson light—
Fades—and, above, one star
Blooms in the night.

As 'twere a jewel flower
Set in this garden blue,
Telling the twilight hour
When falls the silent dew;
As 'twere a lantern there
Lighting Diana's way
Through the dim realms of air,
With its pale ray.

Over you purple line
See, her white face appears!
Breathe once the air divine
Steeped in her fragrant tears!
Out of this silver bath
Flowers shall emerge at dawn
Gracing the narrow path
Across the lawn.

Far in the tranquil deep,
Tremble a million eyes,
Guarding the world asleep
Under the summer skies.
Night, like a mother mild,
Tenderly to her breast
Takes up her weary child
And gives it rest.

FIGHTING THE DUMPS.

The Old Settler Tells of a Boyhood Experience.

Twenty-Nine Wolves and Four Bears. Two Alive, a Pretty Good Haul for a Boy—He Modestly Disclaims All Credit, However.

"How many boys d'ye s'pose tha is nowadays, squire, who'd go out w'en they was only twelve years old, git lost in the snow in the dep's of ol' Squawkee Hill, lay ther for a week 'n' better, 'n' then buckle in 'n' fetch up on their own h'arthstun luggin' with 'em twenty-nine wolfs 'n' four b'ar, two on 'em alive? How many twelve-year-old boys d'ye think tha is nowadays ez k'd do that?" said the old settler.

"'Bout ez many ez tha ever were," replied the squire, "'n' that's not a dum one!"

"Squire," exclaimed the old settler, sternly. "Y' fergit th't I were a twelve-year-ol' wunst, don't y'?"

"No," replied the squire.

"D'ye mean to siniwate, then, th't I'm a liar, consurn ye?" roared the old settler.

"Wull, major, de's see," said the squire, provokingly. "Did you know this here twelve-year-ol' boy?"

"Gosht'lmighty!" exclaimed the old settler. "Wa'n't I him?"

"Thar I be ag'in!" said the squire. "Seems ez if I can't see the p'int to nothin' no more. 'Course! I mowt ha' know'd it if I'd unly thunk! But seems to me, major, th't I allus heerd you was unly nine year ol' w'en y' made that big getherin' o' wolfs 'n' b'ar. Sure y' hain't put it too old, major?"

"I hain't so consarned sure, now th't y' mention it," said the old settler, mollified, "ch't I wa'n't nine year ol' 'stid o' twelve. But I said I were a twelve-year-ol' 'n' I'll stick to it. But it wa'n't the luggin' in o' the twenty-nine wolfs 'n' the four b'ar, two of 'em alive, th't I keered for, or th't I'm a braggin' of now. Tha were sumpin' else went along with them wolfs 'n' b'ars th't made the mere getherin' o' 'em in a small 'n' triflin' sarcumstance. Y' member, squire, how y' k'd stan' on one side o' th' Squawkee an' look right down inter the sugar swamp clearin's, not more'n a miled away, but if y' wanted to git thar y' had to go around more'n nine miled, 'cause that side o' Squawkee were so durn steep y' couldn't git down it 'less y' jumped down 'n' rolled, 'n' fetched up at the bottom like sassage meat? Y' member that don't ye?"

The squire nodded.

"Wall, the winter I were twelve year ol', or nine year, jist ez ver min' ter her it," continued the old settler, "my pap were way down in the dumps. I know'd w'at were the matter, 'n' the futur' looked blue. The prospec's was setch th't pap got lower 'n' lower ev'y day, 'n' I usety hef to spen' most o' my time in the woods to keep my own sperrits up. So this partic'ler day I shouldered the gun 'n' struck fer ol' Squawkee. I tramped 'way around to the fur side o' the big hill 'n' clim to the top. I got to the edge o' Skull Swamp, whar I spected to run again some wolfs, w'en the snow begun to fall ez if it were bein' dumped all in a heap outen more'n fifty thous'n' four-horse wagons. I started back fer home, but I hadn't fit my way ag'in that tumblin' snow more'n fifteen minutes 'fore I lost my bearin's, 'n didn't know no more whar I were th'n if I'd ben trampin' 'crost kentry on the moon. W'ile I were flounderin' about, I run up again a ledge o' rock, 'n' right at the foot of it I see a hole. Inter the hole I crep', 'n' I foun' myself, ez nigh ez I k'd figger out, the place bein' darker'n a tar bucket, ockypyin' pooty tol'able roomy quarters in the bosom o' that wall o' stun. I hadn't ben in thar more'n five minutes, though, 'fore I diskivered th't I wasn't the only lodger in the hole. The openin' whar I'd crep' in wa'n't more'n two foot squar', 'n, consekently the light th't kim in were skeerce, but bimeby I got used to the dark, 'n off on one side o' the hole I see one big b'ar, 'n off on t'other side I see another big b'ar. They was both snoozin' away fer the winter, 'n suckin' their paws. I was right betwixt the two. I know'd tha wa'n't much danger o' the b'ars wakin' up fer a few weeks yit, 'nless sumpin' more'n common kim along to 'sturb 'em, 'n' so I stretched out fer to take a nap till the snow quit a-dumpin', 'n' I k'd crawl out 'n' dig my way home.

"I d'know how long I slept, but w'en I woke up I see the sun a' shinin' a little in the openin'. I crep' outen the hole, 'n' the sight I see were amazin'. Right in front o' the ledge were a bare spot 'bout twenty foot squar'. On the right o' it 'n' on the left o' it the snow were drifted up more'n thirty foot. From the fur edge o' the spot the snow shot down in one straight stritch more'n a mile. It must have been fifty foot deep, 'n' had a pitch to it like the roof o' a barn. The hull long 'n' short of it were, squire, I were standin' on the steep side o' ol' Squawkee, with one eend o' that long snowbank at my feet 'n' t'other eend lyin' right 'mong the clearin's o' Sugar swamp! I were unly a mile fum home, but I mowt jist ez well ha' ben four hundred. I stood 'n' looked down inter Sugar swamp with a wishful eye.

"'Home o' my merry childhood!' says I, 'unless tha comes a rain soon 'n' melts these onpitying banks o' snow,' says I, 'these here two slumberin' b'ars 'll chaw my bones w'en the spring time comes,' says I, 'n' nobody won't never hef to put flowers on my grave,' says I.

"Sayin' w'ich, the weather bein' colder 'n Greenlan', I crep' back in the rocks 'n' snuggled down 'twixt the snorin' b'ars to git warm. A week passed away. I hadn't had nothin' to eat, 'n' natur' were gettin' her dander up. The two b'ars hadn't never winked nor moved sence I j'ined 'em. I hated to disturb either of 'em, but I had to hev meat, 'n' so, on the seventh day I took out my knife, felt ez gentle as a passin' zephyr fer the biggest b'ar's wizzen, 'n' with one gouge slit it from chin to gullet. The b'ar opened his eyes, looked up ez if he'd a notion to see w'at were goin' on, then closed 'em 'n' winched 'n' shivered a little, then gave an all-pervadin' sigh, 'n' his companion on t'other side were a widder 'n' didn't know it. Slicin' a ch'ice cut from the dead b'ar, I took it out in front o' the ledge, built a fire, cooked the b'ar meat, 'n' soon put natur' in a good humor wunst mo'e.

"Goin' back inter the hole I noticed th't fer the fust time t'other bar seemed to be gettin' oneasy. She kinder moved about 'n' grunted, 'n' seemed disturbed in her dreams.

"'Smelt her ol' man a cookin,' mebbe,' says I, turnin' over 'n' going to sleep.

"I'd know how long I were asleep, but I were woke up kinder suddent like, 'n' openin' my eyes I see t'other b'ar standin' over me, her eyes a-glarin' 'n' the giner'l expression o' her countenance givin' me the idee th't she were consid'able het up. Fum w'at I could gather fum the looks o' things I sh'd think th't the old lady had been takin' in the hull sitiwation, 'n' th't she had concluded not to wait till the spring time kim 'fore she chawed my bones. I began to reach fer my knife, w'en I heard the howl o' wolfs on the outside. The b'ar heerd it, too, 'n' jumped fer the openin'. Setch a yoopin' 'n' yellin' 'n' a gnashin' 'n' a smashin', 'n' a munchin' 'n' a crunchin' ez follered I never heerd afore or sence. I crep' to the openin' 'n' peeked out. The ol' b'ar stood with her back agin the ledge, w'ile a pack o' ga'nt 'n' hungry wolfs was pitchin' inter her tryin' to gether her in. She hed swotted 'em right 'n' left till the open space were kivered with dead wolfs, 'n' still they piled up agin her. I found my gun 'n' took a hand in to help the b'ar. 'Twixt us we soon had ev'ry one o' the pack stretched dead in front o' the ledge. Then the old b'ar 'membered her grudge agin me, 'n' turned to end up the fight by finishin' me; but I put a load o' buckshot through her head, 'n' she tumbled on top o' the wolfs.

"I counted the wolfs. Tha was twenty-nine of 'em. I figgered it up quick, 'n' found th't they was worth jist two hundred and thirty-two dollars, the bounty on 'em bein' eight dollars a wolf.

"'That's enough!' I hollers, jumpin' fer joy. 'It's enough 'n' thirty-two dollars over, 'sides the two b'ar!' I hollers, jumpin' fer joy ag'in. Jis then I heerd a noise ahind me, 'n' lookin' 'round, w'at sh'd come tumblin' outen the hole but two b'ar cubs, th't I hadn't see at all! 'Jeewhizz!' I hollers, jumpin' fer some more joy. 'Sides two live b'ar that I didn't see!' I hollers. 'No more dumps fer pap!' says I.

"I took off my moc'sins 'n' cut 'em up inter thongs. 'N' I cut my powder horn straps inter thongs. Fer w'ile me 'n the old b'ar was fightin' the wolfs I had noticed sumpin'. I had noticed th't that snowbank th't pitched off twixt me 'n' Sugar swamp was kivered with a thick crust of glarin' ice. I tied the two dead b'ars and the twenty-nine dead wolfs together by the legs, stiff 'n' snug. I drug 'em to the edge o' the glarin' 'n' flarin' field o' snow. I took the two b'ar cubs one under each arm. Then I laid down amongst the b'ars 'n' the wolf, 'n' pushed 'em onter the pitchin' glare o' snow. I 'member tha was a whizz 'n' a whoo 'n' a skwush. The nex' thing I know'd I were settin' in our kitchen in Sugar swamp. They had found me in the back yard, mixed up with the b'ars 'n' the wolfs. The house were full o' neighbors, 'n' my pap, low in the dumps ez he were, were braggin' on me a standin' up 'n' getherin' in twenty-nine big wolfs 'n' four b'ar, two on 'em alive.

"'Pap,' I says, 'I never thort nothin' 'bout wolfs or b'ars,' says I. 'Wolfs 'n' b'ars wa'n't nuthin' to me,' I says. 'I wa'n't fightin' wolfs 'n' b'ars,' I says. 'I were fightin' your dumps,' I says. 'I were fightin' the mortgage,' I says. 'N' thar she lays, b'gosh!' I says. 'She's riz,' I says, 'n' thirty-two dollars over, 'sides the four b'ar,' I says, 'two on 'em alive!'

"Sayin' w'ich I went out to chop wood, leavin' pap 'n' mam to rej'ice 'cause the mortgage were riz, 'n' the dumps was druv outen that corner o' the Sugar swamp deestric'."—Ed Mott, in N. Y. Sun.

JOHNNIE AND TEENIE.

Story of a Little Coquette and How She Was Conquered.

My latest experience is to be caught in the delicate filaments of a genuine Texas idyl.

I had heard of my heroine long before I saw her, as undisputed belle of the whole Dry Fork country, where she held regal state, like the cruel princess in the fairy tale, sending away suitor after suitor and champion after champion despoiled, not of his head, but of his heart, and with several inches taken off the stature of his conceit.

The family name was Drake; Teenie was affectionately known among her admirers as "the duck;" the ranch was "the duck pond," and whenever another unfortunate went down to worship at her shrine, he was facetiously referred to as having gone duck-hunting.

She was as a rule engaged to three or four of the best-looking and most promising young sheepmen of the region, and carried things in general with a high hand. All this had predisposed me to think slightly of the girl as a poor, shallow creature, trifling with and rejecting men who were too good for her only to gratify her vanity and love of conquest.

But perhaps the thing that prejudiced me most against her was her failure to fall a victim to the charms of Johnnie Sherwood.

Johnnie and I are great friends. I met him at balls, where he was the best dancer; at round-ups, where he was the finest rider and roper, and he camped with our party many a night. A handsome, black-eyed boy of twenty-four, just six feet, with fine, square shoulders and well-knit figure, beautiful black hair, curling flat against his round, comely head, glowing eyes, a satiny cheek, fresh and warm; a nice, well-cut chin, with a dimple set a little to one side of it; a good mouth, with a youthful mustache above it, and the finest white teeth possible.

Face and figure were quite handsome ordinarily; but when the eyes shone, the dimple deepened, and the white teeth flashed in the bubbling, mellow, spontaneous laugh that came so naturally from the fine deep chest, you hastily laid aside all judgment and surrendered your heart.

I never heard so captivating a laugh.

There was virtue, there was piety in it. It was sweeter than reason, better than wisdom. You felt a sense of personal and affectionate gratitude to him, as though he had made you a special gift of it.

And these two were sweethearts once; indeed, Johnnie had been engaged to Teenie, "all by himself," when no one else was, and the matter was regarded as quite serious.

There was, as might have been expected between two such heart-breakers, a smash; mutual recriminations were indulged in. At the hottest of the quarrel, smarting beneath a sense of injustice, tingling at remembrances of the affronts she had put upon him, Johnnie came one day upon a maverick and made so innocent a thing as a yearling calf the vehicle of his resentment. It was a delicate bit of cowboy repartee, an example of pure Texas wit, to catch it up and brand it all over its helpless bovine side in great, sprawling letters: "DUCK."

When the capering bonmot presented itself before Teenie's indignant eyes she waxed very wroth indeed, and told her big brothers, but on the ready offer to "wipe up the ground" with the author she weakened, and advised the whole family that they treat him with silent contempt—which they were doing when I went there.

When I came to spend a week at the Three Cedars ranch and see her daily with her mother and her little brothers and sisters, I found her quite different from what I had imagined, and was constrained to like the girl despite my disapproval of some of her methods. She was a good daughter, a kind sister, and the blithest, most irrepressibly joyous creature, with a frank, engaging boyishness of manner that I never found in any other girl, and I soon came to the conclusion that if she was vain and fickle it was the fault of the foolish men who hung about her and ministered to her vanity.

She rode finely, and was as passionately fond of it as I.

She appeared unaware of the six or eight years' difference in our ages, the wide dissimilarity of our history, training, environments, and probable aims and ambitions, and made of me a regular chum and confidante, seeming to think it no fault of mine that I had been city born and bred; that at heart, and given a fair show, I was "as good a man" as herself.

I used to talk to Teenie a good deal about Johnnie, dwelling warmly on his good qualities and his winning ways.

She was always ready to argue with me on the subject, professing to find him the most hideous and disagreeable of mortals. When I ceased she would go on at some length herself, applying to him all her small feminine epithets of derogation, sneering especially at his conceit.

Perhaps a more masculine bat might have been deceived by the appearance of frank sincerity with which she "slanged" him, but, as Sister Peacock says, I am a female myself, and will at the proper time acknowledge it; and it convinced me—if it convinced me of anything—that Teenie was no more indifferent to Johnnie than he was to her; that, indeed, she carried as sore a heart as he did.

"Let's go and get some of those resurrection plants you want, Miss Alice," she said to me one day. "I know where it grows by the bushel, over on the Escondido arroyo, near the Pecos."

Two of her slaves were about the house at the time. They immediately rushed out, saddled our ponies, and humbly petitioned to be allowed to "go along;" but she refused with the utmost asperity and we went alone.

"I just despise 'em all, sometimes," said she, as we cantered westward. "I like to play 'em awhile, just for fun, but when they get so they hang around all the time there's no more fun in 'em. Now, ain't this a heap nicer, just us girls, than to have a lot of fool fellows taggin' along in the way?"

I assured her it was and we rode ahead, whistling and singing by turns, for very lightness of heart.

She began whistling an air and I struck in with the alto. She stopped dissatisfied with my performance. "No, you lead, I'll trail," and when I took the air she made of it a mere frame, upon which she hung and draped the most beautiful and fanciful minor accompaniment then turned to me and said: "Pretty, ain't it? I wouldn't have a fellow that couldn't whistle nice and ride anything that goes—would you?"

She had a rich, pathetic contralto, with a note of hoarse tenderness in it that went right to your heart, and so flexible that she could follow freely any air I sang with her own irregular, sobbing alto.

After we had ridden ten or twelve miles, across divides and through draws and hollows that all looked alike to my eyes, she turned abruptly to me, on the heels of a closing minor cadence, checked her pony, pushed back her hat and exclaimed: "By George, I'm lost."

Here was a bad state of affairs. I was utterly helpless, and she had only been over to the place on the Escondido arroyo once before, she admitted.

But it was only three o'clock by my watch; our ponies were good ones and we were not more than two or three hours from the ranch; so we kept moving ahead, she scanning the surrounding country anxiously from the top of every divide.

Suddenly, as we were loping across a level, she laughed out loud and pointed in front of us.

"Why, here's the arroyo; we've come to it further north than I was before. All we've got to do is to follow down."

We followed down, got our saddle pockets full of resurrection plants, and then started homeward.

"We can cross Turkey Roost and go down Lost Mule and it'll only be eighteen miles," said Teenie. "It's a sort of blind trail, but I can find it, and we want to get mighty near home before dark."

It was 4:30; there remained but an hour of daylight, and our ponies had already come some twenty-four or twenty-five miles at a brisk gait since noon.

We went ahead at an easy lope, checking up every mile or so to walk for a breathing space. As the sun declined I saw Teenie look anxious. Finally she said: "We crossed Turkey Roost all right, and I was sure we struck into Lost Mule on this side, but I declare it don't look like it now."

We rode up on the divide beside which we had been traveling and looked around. "Good land!" said Teenie, "I don't see a thing I know. We're lost sure enough this time—and night coming. We'll freeze."

While we looked and hesitated the day visibly withdrew and night dropped down upon us like a presence. All landmarks by which to steer our course were obliterated, but we pushed ahead with feverish haste.

On and on we sped through the darkness, while over us wheeled the constellations.

Presently Teenie pulled up and said: "It's no use; we're like as not going away from home instead of toward it."

We got down, staked the ponies, wrapped ourselves as best we could and sat down to face the situation.

Have you never been alone on the prairie at night? Then you have never known how small a mote you are. As we sat hushed under the great, white stars, amid the boundless darkness, I fancied we could hear the moving of the vast machinery of the universe, the hum of the planets as they spun through the void, and the creaking of the earth as it turned on its axis and shot forward into vacancy.

Our surroundings were obliterated; nothing was present but a great, soft darkness and an immensity of star-gemmed space. And we ourselves—infinity of littleness amid this spacious gloom—we seemed but unremembered atoms.

I had resolved myself to my original components, doffed this gross corporeal body, and was wandering about in my spirit, seeking to blend once more with the oversoul; too ignorant and inexperienced to realize any danger in our positions, I reveled only in its beauty and strangeness.

Suddenly the little prefatory whimpering giggle of a coyote sounded out of the night, and Teenie, who had been huddled beside me in a dismayed heap, clutched my arm.

"Oh, Miss Alice! Can't you holler? Listen to that coyote! There's timber wolves and panthers out there, too. We ain't got a match, nor a thing to shoot with. I never wanted to see a man so bad in my life—do holler!"

I took one moment to say: "Would you even like to see Johnnie Sherwood?" and then gathered up my forces and sent forth a powerful soprano yell that was the effort of my life.

But no answer came back, and then ensued a bad quarter of an hour for Teenie and me. The coyotes snickered on the hillside and howled fearfully in the nearer valley.

All at once our ponies neighed out joyfully. I gave a last scream; there was an answering shout, a clatter of hoofs, and somebody rode down the slope and almost over us.

How should I know it was Johnnie Sherwood? But Teenie rose up, and crying: "Oh, Johnnie! Johnnie! Johnnie!" cast herself at him anyway as he jumped off his horse.

I could see nothing of them but two moving shadows—then one, stationary; but presently a big voice that tried to whisper murmured in an abandon of tenderness:

"I'll shoot that fool calf, darling, quick as I can find him!"—Alice MacGowan, in St. Louis Republic.

—Fair Shopper—"What is the difference between these two pieces of goods?" Clerk—"One is marked higher than the other." "Yes; but what is the real difference between them?" "I just told you—a marked difference."—Buffalo Express.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

A Perfect Success. 7

The Rev. A. Antoine of Refugio, Tex., writes: As far as I am able to judge, I think Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is a perfect success, for any one who suffered from a most painful nervousness as I did. I feel now like myself again after taking the Tonic.

A Strong Proof.

ORILLIA, ONT., CANADA, June, '88.

I was first attacked by epilepsy in November 1878; residing in New York I consulted the best physicians, but they could only arrest the disease, the honest ones told me that in them there was no cure for it—I was compelled to give up my occupation and return to Canada in 1878; since then I tried innumerable remedies and consulted some of the best physicians, but nothing benefited me until I began to use Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in September '88, since then I had not a single attack.

THE GRIP IS RAGING

Chicago's Death Rate Frightfully Increased.

ALL THE HOSPITALS CROWDED.

Physicians and Nurses Prostrated and the Undertakers Are Busy.

Drug Stores Compelled to Increase Their Force of Clerks—No Improvement Expected Until There is a Change in the Weather—Policemen and Postoffice Employes Suffering in New York.

CHICAGO, March 25.—The grip epidemic is unabated in this city, and the mortality continues appalling. Up to midnight the deaths for two weeks aggregated 1,540 or 35 per 1,000, which is unprecedented in the history of Chicago. Nearly all died from climatic complaints.

Drug stores have been compelled to increase their force of clerks. Undertakers are crowded with work, and many funerals are taking place as early as 7 a. m. and as late as twilight. The hospitals of the Alexian Brothers, the German Brothers, the Augustana hospital, St. Joseph's hospital and the Presbyterian hospital, which usually take only accidents or paid patients, have opened their doors to the victims of the grip and are crowded.

Eight physicians of the German Hospital were taken down yesterday, and 72 nurses of the Illinois Training School for Nurses who have been ministering to the sick have succumbed since Saturday, and some are in a critical condition. At the Womens and Children's Hospital out of a staff of 40 physicians, nurses and attendants all but five are unfit for duty.

The physicians are in hopes that the disease will wear itself out, but all say that until there is a change in the weather no great improvement can be expected.

NEW YORK'S VICTIMS.

Policemen and Postoffice Employes Suffering from the Disease.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The grip in this city continues to secure new victims, and while the disease has not yet reached the alarming prevalence which has terrorized Chicago, it is giving the health Board much food for reflection.

Throughout the city there is scarcely a block on which at least one case is not to be found, and it has largely attacked the public offices and judges on the local bench.

At the General Postoffice a large number, including several heads of divisions, are to-day absent from duty in consequence of the disease. One-tenth of the attaches in the Sub-Treasury are suffering from the epidemic, and the Custom House force has been somewhat reduced from the same cause. On the exchanges great complaints of sickness from the epidemic are made, and many operators are absent from the floors.

The number of policemen reported on the sick list from the grip is 176.

Dr. Cyrus Edson of the Health Department says that the outlook for the spread of the grip is decidedly favorable; that the functional activity and epidemic spread of the disease is favored by the present humid atmosphere and the alternating warm and cold waves.

DESOLATION IN PITTSBURG.

The Grip's Terrible March in the Smoky City and Suburbs.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 25.—The grip continues to spread desolation through the homes of this city and its suburbs. Physicians, hospitals and directors of funerals are taxed as they probably have never been before. At the Pittsburg Department of Health this morning the records show 443 deaths during the month of March, the larger proportion due to the ravages of the grip.

In Allegheny City there have been 149 deaths. The districts in this city most seriously afflicted are the 12th, 15th, 16th and 17th wards.

All the leading hotel bars and saloons are dispensing quinine with their drinks.

Many of the most prominent citizens are among the sufferers. The ailment is almost as prevalent in the outlying towns as in the city. One Sewickley physician reports having 110 cases.

The health office books show that the death average of the past few months far exceeds that of the corresponding period in previous years.

At the Home of the Little Sisters of the Poor in this city four of the inmates died from the effects of the grip within the past 24 hours. There are in the institution over 100 patients in charge of 11 Sisters. Three of the Sisters were stricken down yesterday with the ailment, leaving the care of the institution and patients to only eight persons.

A Shoemaker to Oppose Bismarck.

BERLIN, March 25.—The only real rival to Prince Bismarck's candidacy for the Reichstag is a poor shoemaker named Smallfield, the Socialist nominee.

To Stop Emigration to America.

ROME, March 25.—The Italian government proposes to take steps to stop emigration to America.

SCANDAL IN PRISON.

A Night Watchman an Easy Victim for a Bold Adventuress.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., March 25.—A bold adventuress caught a prison official of Schuylkill County in a compromising position during the day and he has lost his situation in consequence.

George Schneider, night watchman, has been requested to tender his resignation for an alleged attempt to assault one of the female prisoners, and also to blackmail the warden.

Annie Reis, who has an unsavory reputation and is serving a term for larceny, inveigled Schneider into her cell, when he attempted to assault her. The girl escaped and with the keys locked the night watchman in the cell alone and attempted to gain her liberty. Schneider commanded her to release him, but the girl did not accede to his demand until he had fired several shots from his revolver through the cracks of the door.

Annie says that she and Schneider had arranged to lure Warden Zeigler into the cell with her and refuse to let him out until he had paid $200 to keep the affair quiet. The scandal has caused a great deal of excitement throughout the county.

The county commissioners have appointed a new night watchman.

REDSKINS RESTLESS.

War Department Advices Indicate that the Indians Want War.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The reports received at the War Department in reference to the probability of another outbreak at Pine Ridge in the spring are not altogether reassuring.

The officials say that it depends a great deal upon the Administration itself. If the Indians are promptly paid their full dues there will be peace, otherwise war will result.

One advantage that the government has is that most of the best fighters among the Indians are with Buffalo Bill's show and will be at a safe distance at the time when a war might be imminent.

CONTRACT LABORERS CAUGHT.

A System Uncovered that Has Been in Vogue for Some Time.

NEW YORK, March 25.—A number of Italian contract laborers were captured during the day by customs inspectors on the steamer California. The inspectors saw the men standing about the decks dressed as sailors, but doing no work. Their suspicions were aroused and they determined to watch the vessel.

Shortly afterwards the officers saw the supposed sailors leaving the vessel and arrested them. The Italians said they came here to work in the lumber yard of George Ulling at New Haven, Conn.

It is believed that the inspectors who effected the capture have uncovered a system of smuggling contract laborers into the country that has been in vogue for some time.

Wrecked in a Fog.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., March 25.—In a thick fog at 4:30 a. m. the English brig Joseph Banigan, Captain Henry L. Lyons, from Manatee Bay, Jamaica to Havre, France, was wrecked just south of Hoey's bathing pavilion, West End. The captain says the vessel's rudder was lost, and he was making for New York to have repairs made. Thomas Lawrence, one of the seamen, jumped overboard and tried to swim ashore, but was drowned. His body was not recovered. The crew of life saving station No. 5 rescued the rest of the crew. The rescued persons numbered ten in all.

Manifesto from the Knights.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 25.—The National Trades' Assembly, K. of L., executive board, comprising the clothing cutters of this city, have issued a manifesto to the locked out members of the Knights of Labor of Rochester in reply to the one issued by the clothing manufacturers. From the contents of the manifesto it is evident that the cutters will in all probability try to maintain their rights as a body and not to submit to the manufacturers' ultimatum.

Says She Caused Her Mother's Death.

CANTON, O., March 25.—Katie Detwiler, a highly respected young lady of this city, who committed suicide at her former home near Louisville, O., left a letter in which she states that she had caused her mother's death and knew her death was necessary. Sickness and trouble arising from a division of her parents' property among other heirs, it is thought, caused temporary insanity.

MISS SMITH'S STORY

An End to the Sensational West Roxbury Scandal.

ALL THE SMITHS EXONERATED.

Miss Helen Says There Was No Marriage Between Her and French.

She Claims that the Lecturer Sought Her Money Only—Her Mother Admits that She Was Indiscreet and Foolish—French Makes a Statement and Attacks the Church Committee.

BOSTON, March 25.—West Roxbury's social volcano had another eruption last night, when the mem and women of the Congregational Church went to hear the report of their standing committee, which has been more than a month investigating the morals of the wife and daughter of Deacon D. Smith, the chief pillar of society. The fact that charges were pending against the mother was not generally known outside the community, but pretty nearly the whole world knows of the scandalous reports which have been circulated concerning the daughter Helen and the lecturer and author, Harry W. French.

Mr. French, herculean and handsome as ever, occupied a seat alone. Three seats behind him sat the Smith trio. In the pulpit was Dr. Beckwith, stern and knife-like. In the front seat sat the Rev. Dr. Clark, Rector of the American Board and chairman of the standing committee.

Helen Tells Her Story.

Miss Helen's statement was read by Mr. Beckwith. It narrated her courtship and separation, attributing French's infatuation to his greed for her fortune and avowing that her love for him was only a fascination. On October 1, 1890, after the engagement had been broken, French wrote his "Dear Little Polly" an affectionate letter of farewell, which, she said, proved that he had not then concocted his scheme to claim a secret marriage. In this letter he hinted at suicide. French's revenge, she said, began when, about November 1, she wrote him from London absolutely cutting him off from her regard. Miss Smith solemnly asserted that the story of the marriage was a fiction.

But that was not the only interesting feature of the meeting. Mrs. Smith, the mother of Helen, also made a statement before the church committee. She said:

"While I emphatically add indignantly denounce any desertion or insinuation that in thought, word, or act my conduct has been criminal, I freely admit that it has been indiscreet and foolish."

There have been some half-whispered hints that the mother had been fully as intimate with French as the daughter had been. That might mean much or little.

French Talks.

Mr. French denies that he was or had been jealous, and eulogized Miss Helen, who languidly rested her head on her hand and appeared indifferent. But he didn't eulogize the Standing Committee. On the contrary, he showed that they hadn't tried to do anything except to prove him a liar. Even Dr. Clark had declined his invitation to see Mrs. Smith's signals from the window, but had sent her word to stop them. Deacon Smith nudged one of his friends to choke French off, and the friend tried it, but the meeting wouldn't have it, and French went on with his calm statement of affairs from his own standpoint, apparently winning friends with every sentence.

Shortly after midnight Dr. Clark's motion exonerating the Smith family was adopted.

Gen. Johnston's Grave.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 25.—The remains of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston were placed in the mausoleum in Green Mount. Subsequently they will be buried in a grave which the general himself superintended the construction of a year ago. There was some talk of the Confederate Societies properly marking the grave of Gen. Johnston with a handsome memorial, but a meeting with that purposes in view was attended by but little encouragement.

Postal Subsidies.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The bulk of the postal subsidy authorized by the late Congress will probably be employed for the next year at least in developing communications with South America. Postmaster-General Wanamaker has invited a conference of the representatives of the South American countries in regard to the best way of carrying out this programme, and there will be a meeting this afternoon at the Postoffice Department.

Allowance for World's Fair Expenses.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Secretary Foster has ordered that the World's Fair Commission be allowed an additional $10,000 for expenses for the fiscal year ending in June. This is in addition to the $150,000 already allowed, and is needed to pay the expenses of the April meeting, which has been called for April 1.

Judge Groff's Successor.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—It can now be stated as certain that ex-Representative Carter, of Montana, has been offered the commissionership of the General Land Office to succeed Judge Groff. Thus far Mr. Carter has declined to say whether he will accept the office, or, indeed, to discuss the matter in any way whatever.

Republican League Convention.

BOSTON, March 25.—The Republican State League convention is being held in this city to-day. Major Gould called the convention to order, and Hon. Elijah Morse, of Canton, is presiding. Hon. John M. Thurston and Hon. William McKinley will deliver addresses at the meeting.

Mrs. Jenks Granted a Divorce.

NEWPORT, R. I., March 25.—Mrs. Maud E. Jenks has been granted a divorce from Almer F. Jenks, corporation counsel of Brooklyn, N. Y., by the Supreme Court.

THE LYNCHING AFFAIR.

Ten of the Men Killed Were Fugitives from Justice.

NEW ORLEANS, March 25.—The grand jury will to-morrow, under direction of Attorney-General Rogers, begin an investigation of the lynching of the Italians at the parish prison. When the question of taking up the subject was submitted to the grand jury, the "ayes" were unanimous.

Judge Rogers has been in communication with Signor Corte, the Italian consul, and has several letters from that gentleman, one of which shows that ten of the men killed went under assumed names, and from this the authorities infer that they were either fugitives from Italian justice or ex-convicts. Corte has requested that the leaders of the uprising be brought to justice.

The grand jury is nearly through with its inquiry into the jury bribing charges. One of the two indictments they reported last night was against the missing detective, D. C. O'Malley, who is charged with having been an accessory before the fact. It is understood that indictments will also be returned against Juror Sellers and three of his colleagues in the Hennessy trial. District Attorney Sugarg said that there will be a number of sensational developments in the matter before the end of the week.

ON TRIAL FOR HER LIFE.

Mrs. Caroline Schmidt Accused of Murdering Her Sister.

MEDIA, Pa., March 25.—The third day of the trial of Mrs. Caroline Schmidt, accused of murdering her sister, Emma Pfitzenmeyer, resulted in giving a most entirely the basis upon which the Commonwealth expects to send the woman to the gallows. From the witnesses, outside of the experts, the evidence advanced against her was weak. Expert testimony of the physicians, however, clearly proved that Emma Pfitzenmeyer did not die by her own hands, as will be contended by the defense. Either the girl's sister is her murderer, or some one else is.

The prosecution up to this time has failed to connect either Mrs. Schmidt or her husband with the crime. This they hope to do by a number of witnesses who will attempt to prove criminal intimacy between the dead girl and Mr. Schmidt. It is expected that an effort will also be made to prove that another sister has suffered by the dead girl's conduct.

TORTURED A CHILD.

An Inhuman Wretch Arrested for Forcing a Boy on a Red-Hot Stove.

ALTOONA, Pa., March 25.—Saturday last Christian Leiberg, a middle-aged German went to the house of John Schmidthuber on Fourth avenue, this city, and after playing with the children while caught up a 5-year-old son and seated him on top of a red-hot stove.

The child's screams brought the mother to its rescue, but it was badly burned, pieces of flesh sticking to the stove. Leiberg escaped and was not seen until last evening when he slipped into the house and again caught the child and attempted to repeat the cruel act of Saturday. A neighbor came to the rescue and Leiberg was captured.

Murderer Morrissey Declared Insane.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 25.—James Morrissey, indicted for murder in the first degree, has been declared insane by a commission and taken to the Middletown asylum. Last October, while crazed from drink, Morrissey went to his home at Hurley, and, finding his younger brother Joseph in bed in an intoxicated condition, he saturated the bed clothes with kerosene oil and set them on fire, burning his brother to death. His object in thus killing his brother was revenge for some family troubles.

To See if Bulkeley is Governor.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 25.—A general Republican caucus is being held this afternoon. Austin Brainard, executive secretary of Gov. Bulkeley, will institute proceedings against Comptroller Staub for the payment of his salary. The writ will be returable in the Superior Court on the first Tuesday of April. This will bring the question of Gov. Bulkeley's title clearly before the courts.

Harris Not Yet Indicted.

NEW YORK, March 25.—No action has yet been taken by the Grand Jury on the charges against young Carlisle S. Harris alleging criminal responsibility for the death of his wife, Helen Neilson Potts. There is said to be some doubt as to the jurisdiction of the New York authorities in the matter if Harris is to be prosecuted for malpractice, for it is alleged that the acts were committed in New Jersey.

Dastardly Attempt to Wreck a Train.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 25.—A dastardly attempt was made last night to wreck a passenger train on the Lebanon Valley Railroad near Palmyra. A tie was placed on the track by some unknown culprit but the locomotive did not strike it fairly and a terrible accident was thus averted.

DEATH OF A TYRANT

The Belanona Massacre in Madagascar Avenged.

EXECUTION OF GOV. RAMIASATRA

He Dies on the Spot Where He Butchered 278 Persons.

Desperate State of Affairs in Chili—Italy to Stop Emigration to America—Parnell's Predictions in His Sligo Speech. Morley Has an Interview With Dillon and O'Brien—Smallpox at Grasse.

PARIS, March 25.—Prompt vengeance has fallen upon Ramiasatra, governor of the province of Belanona, Madagascar, who massacred 278 persons, including men, women and children, belonging to the leading families. Dispatches just received here say that Ramiasatra, together with his brother, who is supposed to have instigated the massacre, has been executed on the spot where the wholesale killing took place under the cruel governor's directions.

The cause of Ramiasatra's sanguinary conduct originated in the fact that he fiercely resented a petition from the populace addressed to the government asking protection from his repeated acts of cruelty. This so enraged him that he commenced to slaughter men, women and children, and continued doing so for several days.

In many cases the agonies of the victims were protracted by the Governor's causing their heads to be gradually dismembered, their heads to be slowly sawed off, and by subjecting them to other acts of torture. During the course of the massacre many of the women who were put to death were first assaulted. In the case of all the victims their bodies were thrown to the dogs.

In addition to these atrocities, the survivors were compelled to erect a tropy composed of the heads of the murdered people upon a spot near the scene of the butchery.

THE CRISIS IN CHILI.

The Condition of Affairs There Has Become Intolerable.

BUENOS AYRES March 25.—The latest advices concerning the situation in Chili state that the situation of affairs there has become intolerable and the end of the contest cannot be far off.

The Governors of Tultal and Caldera have gone over to the revolutionists, and it is stated that the Balmaceda government, in order to avoid the bombardment and destruction of Antofagasta by vessels in possession of the rebels, have withdrawn the Government troops from Antofagasta Railroad to Coloma, a stragetic point between Antofagasta and Iquique.

Both parties to the struggle are massacring every prisoner taken in the most cold-blooded manner.

Healy Will Not Prosecute His Assailant.

CORK, March 25.—Mr. Timothy D. Healy is still confined to his room an account of the injuries received at the hands of O'Brien Dalton. Healy says he will not prosecute Dalton for the attack and he freely forgives him, for he has done good work for his country. Besides, he is going to be tried by the government. The injury to Healy's eyes excites little sympathy, even among the McCarthyites, who consider that he has courted danger by the vindictive and malignant tone of his remarks on all public occasions, and especially his reflections on Mrs. O'Shea.

Parnell's Sligo Speech.

DUBLIN, March 25.—In his speech at Sligo Parnell predicted strife between Timothy Healy and Sexton for the McCarthyite leadership. Maurice Healy, he said, had fled at the first sight of the steel. He (Parnell) was himself ready to fight the seceders, but would not allow the Healys to make a deal with the Tories of Cork, and by combining with them show that the voice of rebel Cork was different from what it was in 1880.

Honduras in Revolt.

LONDON, March 25.—The Foreign Office has just received from British Honduras advices that would be alarming if the colonial population were more formidable. The people there are tired of being governed from Great Britain, and the colonists have sent a petition to the home government demanding an elective assembly, with control of taxation. The English Cabinet has refused the petition.

Gallant Rescue of Fifty People.

LONDON, March 25.—The steamer Kongvald Lerwick of Aberdeen stranded at the entrance of Kirkwall Harbor, Scotland, last night in a blinding snowstorm. The steamer Arcadia, with great difficulty and at much risk, succeeded in taking off the passengers of the stranded vessel, fifty in number, and landed them safely at Kirkwall.

Parnell Waiting for Healy.

DUBLIN, March 24.—The Cork Parnell Leadership Committees, in whose hands Mr. Parnell placed the matter of his resignation, announces that Mr. Parnell will not resign until Maurice Healy seeks re-election.

Morley Calls on Dillon and O'Brien.

The Banks May Right Themselves.

GOV. NICHOLLS' REPLY.

He Sends a Non-Communicative Letter to Secretary Blaine.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The answer of Governor Nicholls of Louisiana to Secretary Blaine's telegram of March 15, in reference to the New Orleans affair, has been received by the Secretary and has been given by him to the press.

The full text of the letter is as follows:

"EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
STATE OF LOUISIANA,
BATON ROUGE, March 21, 1891.

Hon. JAMES G. BLAINE, Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

SIR—At a late hour on the fifteenth inst. I received a despatch from you, having reference to the forcible breaking, on the 14th of this month, of the jail in this city, and the killing of eleven persons confined therein, under indictments found in the Criminal District Court for the Parish of Orleans.

You stated to me, that it had been represented to the President, by the Minister of Italy, accredited to the Government of the United States, that among the killed, on that occasion, were three or four subjects of the King of Italy. The telegram disclosed an apprehension, on the part of the Minister, evidently shared in by the President, that the disturbance was a contiuous and swelling disturbance, which might involve the Italian subjects in New Orleans.

I have reason to believe that the hope expressed by the President, that I would co-operate with him in maintaining the obligations of the United States toward Italian subjects, who might be within the perils of the excitement, and that further violence and bloodshed might be prevented, was based upon that belief. The President further expressed the hope that all offenders might be promptly brought to justice.

On the 16th I telegraphed you that there was no excitement in the city at that time, and that I knew no reason to anticipate further trouble. I also stated that the action taken was directed against particular individuals, and that the race or nationality of the parties did not enter as a factor into the disturbance. A week has passed since the date of my despatch, and the opinion then entertained as to the termination of the trouble has proved to have been well founded.

The men killed as I have stated, were confined in prison, under indictments found in the Criminal District Court for the Parish of Orleans; the Sheriff has made his return of the fact to that court; the Judge thereof has charged the Grand Jury, now in session in regard to the matter, and the whole subject is, I assume, now under investigation by that body.

I am satisfied that most of the persons were American citizens, but it is probable that two or three were Italian subjects.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

FRANCIS T. NICHOLLS.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, . . Managing Editor.

OBJECTORS PARTICULARLY WELCOME.

A Free Ride for all Plainfield to Inspect the Proposed Electric Railway.

A special train will leave Plainfield Friday afternoon for Newark, and everybody is invited to go to that city and personally inspect the electric road there that is proposed for this city.

There will be no expense attached to the trip. It is free to all. The Plainfield Street Railway company is thoroughly satisfied that no one would object to the road and the system if they knew anything about it. Consequently this opportunity has been arranged at the Company's own expense, and they are especially desirous that the principal objectors will be present.

Mayor Gilbert confessed in a speech to the Council, last week, that he had gone to Newark prejudiced against the proposed road and convinced that it was something the people of Plainfield did not want. He was agreeably disappointed and now honestly believes the people would like it.

That experience of Mayor Gilbert was also the experience of THE PRESS and others who went to Newark first and talked afterwards. It is safe to say that not an objector who has spoken in public or signed a remonstrance against the road in this city, knew what he was talking about.

The time the special train will leave here Friday afternoon, will be announced in THE PRESS to-morrow. Every citizen along the proposed route should go. They are vitally interested, and can thus see and and judge for themselves whether such a railway passing their homes would be distasteful or desirable.

A Foreign View of Manager Schermerhorn.

[From The New York World.]

Night telegraphers may come and night telegraphers may go, but Manager Schermerhorn stays there forever. This remark is brought out by the rapidity with which the Jersey Central bustles successive night telegraphers into and out of the telegraph office at Plainfield, yet steadfastly refuses to dispense with the services of Manager Schermerhorn. It is a tradition in Plainfield that the manager was born several years before the Quakers settled there. At some unknown time the manager stopped growing, thus escaping old age. The manager has a face in which strength and kindness are combined. The short beard is only tinged with gray, the nervous-looking fingers are steady and true as they ever were, whether they press a man's hand or a telegraph key. It is not known that the trim boots were ever lifted more than three inches from the floor, for the manager has plenty of the soft syllables which turn away wrath, and he likes to use them. The only time he was ever known to be angry was when a new messenger boy, in his eagerness to read a message, climbed over the manager's slight frame and knocked the spectacles off his nose. Mr. Schermerhorn rose, took the boy by the right ear, put his head in the copying press and screwed the press tight. The Coroner did not think an inquest necessary, as Mr. Schermerhorn discovered when the press was unscrewed that the boy was alive.

SUICIDE AT THE HOSPITAL.

CONTRACTOR WOOD KILLS HIMSELF WITH A PENKNIFE.

His Nurse Deserted Him When His Delirium Raged Most Violent; and to Foil the Schemes of Others Whom He Fancied Were Seeking His Life, He Stabbed Himself and Cut His Throat.

Henry G. Wood, at one time quite a prominent contractor in New Jersey, committed suicide at the Muhlenberg Hospital last night.

When construction of the new Union county roads was about to be begun Wood succeeded in getting the contract for some of the work. Subsequently he found himself unable to fulfill the agreement.

The contract was then taken off his hands and was completed by the Board of Freeholders themselves. Since that time, Wood, who had been living at Elizabeth, made his home in this city.

As the result of his forfeiture of his county roads contract, Wood found himself unable to recover all the money he had expended, and in the hope that he might retrieve to some extent his losses he brought suit for damages against the Board of Freeholders.

Other financial difficulties harassed him continually, and Wood worried so much over his troubles that for the past four weeks he slept scarcely any, and could not eat. In addition to this he sought to drown his sorrows in strong drink, and the result was the unbalancing of his reason.

Yesterday morning he was wild with delirium, and was possessed of the mania that the people in the hotel where he was stopping were seeking his blood.

In the afternoon he rushed up to Police Captain Grant on the street and exclaimed that a mob was after him, trying to kill him. He asked if the Captain hadn't a cell strong enough to hold him safely against their attack.

Mr. Grant conducted the sufferer to the office of Dr. Boone, who sent Wood to the Hospital, where the man was registered as a private patient of Dr. Boone's.

A nurse by the name of Price, a man from Short Hills, was put in charge of Wood. The patient grew rapidly worse, and imagined that everybody was seeking to slay him. Price told Mrs. Walrod, the matron, that he couldn't stay with so violent a fellow. Mrs. Walrod said that if that was the case she would send at once for some one else, and left the room to secure another nurse. Before the party sent for arrived, Price slipped quietly out, without a word to the matron, and left Wood alone on his cot. This was at about eight o'clock. Fifteen minutes later Mrs. Walrod went into the isolated room where Price had been left guarding Wood, and was surprised to find that the nurse had gone. Going to the bedside of Wood, who was lying strangely still, she made the horrifying discovery that the clothing was saturated with blood. Wood seems to have been sitting on the edge of the bed, clad scantily in underclothing, when he took a small penknife from the pocket of his trousers, which were lying near, and stabbed himself repeatedly in the breast, in the region of the heart. The blade was only an inch and a half long, and was very dull, so that the wounds there inflicted were but trivial. Wood had then, however, attacked his throat with the steel, and had succeeded in covering it with gashes and in severing a jugular vein in each side of the neck.

When discovered, his body was lying in a lifeless heap on the bed. He had lost nearly all the blood in his body. The crimson torrent had gushed forth with frightful rapidity.

Mrs. Walrod called in physicians from another part of the Hospital, but the man was beyond all human aid. County Physician Westcott was summoned, and under his direction the corpse was removed to the undertaking establishment of A. M. Runyon & Son.

County Physician Westcott decided that no inquest was necessary, and turned the remains over to friends who arrived this afternoon.

Wood's real home is not definitely known, but he is said to have come from Oneonta, Otsego county, N. Y. His wife, Mrs Etta A. Wood, who is supposed to be living, was last heard from at the address 304 West 138th street, New York city, to which place Police Captain Grant has gone in search of her.

Wood was about 52 years of age, was a veteran of the war, and a Freemason. He will probably be given a Masonic and Grand Army burial.

An Exhibition of Electric Cars in Operation.

L. W. Serrell, Jr., a graduate of Stevens Institute of Technology, will speak on the subject of electricity at the Y. M. C. A rooms to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock. The history of electricity and the infinite uses to which it can be put, will be illustrated by lantern slides.

A number of views will be exhibited of electric cars in operation. This will be a particularly interesting talk at this time in the affairs of the city, when the project on of electric cars is taking so much of the attention of the citizens. The admission will be free.

I HAVE been a great sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breathe. Some nights I could not sleep and had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm, and am using it freely; it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it, and with happy results in every case. It is the med cine above all others for catarrh and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety, and does all that is claimed for it. It is curing my deafness.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

B. F. Coriell, on behalf of the Auditing Committee, reported that the accounts and securities had been minutely examined, and all found to be correct as stated.

The meeting then went into the nomination and election of twelve Directors, to serve for the ensuing year. Vincent L. Frazee and James Clawson acted as tellers, and declared, after the balloting, that the following had been unanimously elected:

Lewis E. Barkalew, Wm. R. Codington, B. Frank Coriell, John Chandler, Edward D. Fluck, John Hickey, Nathan Harper, Henry Liefke, Joseph F. Sheppard, E. W. Titsworth, Jacob Voehl, Wm. A. Woodruff.

After passing a vote of thanks to the Treasurer and Secretary for the manner in which they had discharged the duties of their respective offices, the meeting adjourned.

Its Most Successful Anniversary.

The anniversary exercises of the Young Ladies' Mission Band, brought a large audience to the First Baptist church last evening. Mrs. L. H. Bigelow, Jr., the President of the Society, presided, and in a neat and graceful speech described the wonderful work which had been accomplished during the past year.

Dr. R. M. Luther, a returned missionary, was introduced and made a most eloquent address. The whole congregation was then invited to the church parlors below, where after a reception refreshments were liberally served. A young men's auxiliary was formed of about 70 members, who will contribute two cents a week to missionary work.

The musical part of the programme was under the direction of Wm. E. MacClymont, who rendered an excellent "Fantasie Allegro," of his own composition. Miss Florence Randolph gave a piano selection of Beethoven's which was loudly applauded. Miss Edith Harold sang with much effect, DeCoven's "A Winter Lullaby." A quartette assisted in several selections, and thus closed the most successful anniversary the Society has ever held.

No Sick Firemen in the Borough.

The North Plainfield Firemen's Relief Association held their final meeting for the year last evening. The Treasurer's report shows the amount of receipts for the year ending April 1, 1891, to be $285.71; disbursements, $47.10; leaving a balance on hand of $238.61. There has been no demand for sick benefits since the Association was organized about a year and a half ago. All members of the Fire Department of the borough are members of the Association and entitled to all the benefits derived therefrom.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Frederick R. Martin is very ill.

The sad news has reached THE PRESS of the death of the wife of Albert Winter, late of the firm of Scheidin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co. She died at their home in New York city. One of the twin babies born at the time of her death, survives her.

PERTINENT PARAGRAPHS.

NUGGETS OF LOCAL NEWS, WITH GRAINS OF FREE-LANCE COMMENT.

Some Casual Observations Concerning the Police Force, the Fire Department, and Other Matters of Interest Gleaned About Town.

A man with a note-book can have a highly interesting time in Plainfield; and if all the things that come to the knowledge of a newspaper man were published, many a proud head would be bowed in vexation and shame, and many a fair face would be bedewed with tears.

The newspaper man of to-day, however, is an individual of discretion and heart. He is a poem that was as yet unwritten when Burns penned the lines warning the people that a thief was among them taking notes and faith would print the m. The information that a newspaper man of this enlightened day and country holds sacred within his breast by far outweighs the information that he publishes. There may be things, however, that it is his duty to disclose, and as a faithful follower of the craft the Paragrapher will from time to time make through THE PRESS his report to the public.

First impressions are in a measure lasting, and the Paragrapher does not wish to start off by causing reason for the opinion that he is inclined to scold. But in light of the existing abuse of that most excellent thing known as bicycling, he cannot refrain from observing that certain callow youths who happen to possess bicycles seem not yet to have learned that there is a law against riding the wheels on the sidewalks. Their violations of the ordinance are inexcusable, and if persisted in will probably result in summary arrest and disagreeable punishment.

Changing the subject from offenders against the law to those who are popularly supposed to be defenders of it, the Paragrapher would remark that not all of the policemen on Plainfield's force of blue coats seem to have profited by the lesson of Lynch's suspension and Carey's dismissal. Some of them have yet to learn that they are servants of the public instead of monarchs of the municipality.

THE PRESS of Monday night stated that policeman Cooney was being criticized for refusing to guard against injury from heavy wagon wheels a length of hose that was stretched across the street. Because that fact was frankly stated, every policeman on the force waxed mightily wroth, and it was freely muttered about, among the people whose cheerful and lucrative occupation is to lounge on the corners and flood the pavements with tobacco-tinted saliva, that "the people would see!"

This dire threat, when investigated by that tireless and ubiquitous individual known as the newspaper reporter, was found to mean that the police are on their dignity, and have decided that never again will they condescend to help the firemen, no matter how great the conflagration, or how urgent the need.

As nearly as can be ascertained by a Paragrapher who desires to be just to all parties concerned, the facts in the case of policeman Cooney do not show that gentleman to be possessed of a very obliging spirit. According to the story of one of the firemen, which is corroborated by very reliable people, policeman Cooney was not engaged in any more pressing business than silent meditation when the fireman requested him to keep an eye on the hose, and prevent it from getting run over.

One of the duties of a Plainfield policeman, according to the popular impression among Plainfield people, is to see that humble citizens whose buttons are of a hue dimmer than brass do not trespass against the ordinances which the City Common Council, ably assisted by a learned Counselor, have set up to govern the inhabitants of the place. And one of these sacred ordinances provides that no person shall during a fire drive a wagon, cart, or other vehicle, over any hose or other fire apparatus, under a penalty sufficiently severe, and usually amounting to a fine of $10 for each offense.

Another ordinance says that each of the regular policemen shall devote all his time to the duties of his office, and shall be vigilant in detecting and arresting all offenders against any city ordinance or any law of the State within the city, and in preserving the public peace and protecting the rights of person and property.

It is hardly probable, as a layman views it, that policeman Cooney had these ordinances in mind when he said, in response to the fireman's polite and reasonable request, "Go mind your own business!"

To a human being nervous with the excitement sometimes attendant to the duties of a fireman, such an invitation to get himself hence was hardly calculated to have a soothing effect, and who can wonder that the irascible fireman retorted to the irascible policeman "You'd better mind yours"?

What further interesting conversation took place is not quite clear, and the Paragrapher refrains from attempting to quote it. The fact remains, however, that the policeman gave to the fireman the equivalent of a refusal to guard the hose.

Here was a chance for the man of brass buttons to distinguish himself by a faithful guardianship of the city property, and to compel the people to obey the behest of the City Council, "Do not drive over our hose!". But the policeman was scornful of the fireman's suggestion, and the unprotected hose had to go on mutely suffering the ravages of ruthless tires.

The case of policeman Kiely, if the charges against him are true, is more serious. Two firemen, Harry Bush and John Albert, say that while they were on duty at the Weigman fire Kiely roughly ordered them to move back with the crowd. "But we are firemen!"—they are reported to have stated.

Evidently firemen, in the estimation of a haughty police official, are very much beneath the blue coats in the social scale; and as a fine show of the standing and power of the police, Mr. Kiely, according to the story of the spectators, courteously replied that he didn't give a damn who they were. And when the firemen insisted on remaining within the fire line where they belonged, he is said to have violently shoved them away and whacked them with his club. Albert says that his legs were bruised by the weighty locust stick, and Bush says that he was lamed in the shoulder.

Inasmuch as policeman Kiely emphatically denies the story of his two accusers, and as the officer seems to possess a reputation for veracity, the Paragrapher makes no attempt at this stage of the case to pass judgment. But Mr. Kiely will not be permitted to follow the serene advice of our excellent Mayor, who is quoted as having counseled him not to mind, but to ignore the charges; for Mr. Bush's dander is up, and he wants ointment for the alleged ache in his shoulder, while Mr. Albert clamors for balm for his sore shins.

Both men have made formal charges against the policeman, to their superior officers, and the case will, it is promised, be fully investigated and ventilated.

If the policeman be adjudged guilty of wrong-doing, the aggrieved parties may trust to the disciplinarians of the City Council to administer proper punishment; if the policeman succeed in proving that the charges are false, and that he has not been guilty of a violation of the laws of duty and justice, he will have complete vindication accorded unto him.

At the risk of making an odious comparison, the Paragrapher would remark that as the two cases stand, policeman Kiely seems to have indulged in a bigger show of zeal than has policeman Cooney. But though zealousness is always commendable, it ought never to be carried too far.

While the cohorts of the blue coats and their allies are muttering that police aid in fire matters is to be altogether suspended, the firemen and their factions are planning quietly for the organization of an efficient fire patrol of their own. If they carry out their idea the near future will find at every fire a cordon of helmeted men whose long night sticks shall keep even disobliging and officious blue coats at a respectful distance.

It is not the desire of the Paragrapher to spread contention between these two branches of municipal service. There ought to be harmony instead of discord between the police force and the fire department; and the existence of ill-feeling lessens the excellence of the service. But one whose duty is to record facts cannot always avoid jotting down some very ugly, as well as some very pleasant, actualities.

No matter how much bitterness, stubbornness, injustice, there may be on either side, one of the parties to the quarrel is bound to be more in the right than the other. The Paragrapher would like to see the warring elements cool down, calmly ascertain just what is right and proper, rectify the error over which they have stumbled, and go on their way rejoicing, hand in hand. But when public servants who have been vested with an external air of authority come together there is bound to be obstinate clashing, and war instead of peace.

All this strife and bitterness of feeling seems especially inappropriate to this season of the year.

Aside from the fact that the chill, bleak Winter is being supplanted by the gentle Spring, and nature is gushing forth in her kindliest style, an observant mortal cannot escape the knowledge that this is Holy Week. Earthly pleasures into which at other times the people of the world plunge headlong without a thought of their recklessness and questionableness are for the nonce relegated to the melancholy caverns where is written above the door, in big black letters, "Here is the Cage of Sin!" To the churches move the penitential throngs, and gaiety is subdued, and giddiness is abandoned,—for a time.

Old Mother Earth will soon be fully awakened from her long sleep. Already the song-birds, which find so lovely a summer home in the luxuriant foliage of Plainfield's shade trees, are returning from their hibernal quarters, and already the musical greeting of the advance agents of robins and blue-birds is heard at one's window at dawn. The days are much longer than they were, and the people who furnish electric lights for the Plainfield streets, nominally from sunset to sunrise, are correspondingly glad. The grass of the handsome city lawns is rapidly assuming its most brilliant vernal emerald hue. The hand-organ man and his festive monkey are beginning to give representations of the Mafia at ease, with orchestral accompaniments, upon the streets. From the waters of Stony, Green and Cedar brooks, wells the voice of the frog, in numerous chorus, practicing the new Easter croak.

NATHANIEL FAIRFIELD.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., March 25.—The suit of the 72d Pennsylvania Volunteer Regiment against the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association and the State Monument Commission has been decided in favor of the regiment, and decrees that the monument of the regiment shall be erected near the stone fence at the place known as "Bloody Angle" and midway between the monuments of the 69th and 71st Pennsylvania volunteers. The case is likely to be appealed.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 25.—Apportionment bills have been introduced in both Houses. It is estimated that 16 of the districts proposed are Republican, 10 Democratic and 4 doubtful.

An affidavit has been prepared by some of his friends which will be presented to the Governor to-day, and a respite asked for until the case can be reviewed by the Supreme Court. The time for the execution of Moss is between 10 and 3 to-morrow. Moss is indifferent as to his fate and says he will face death with a smile.

THE LATE GEN. SHERMAN.

SHERMAN received the degree of LL.D. from Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Dartmouth.

SHERMAN was as light a sleeper when in the field as the great Napoleon. He rarely took more than five hours of rest when the enemy was near by.

SHERMAN was so overwhelmed with social engagements that on one occasion, taking out his engagement book, he gave a friend an evening six weeks in advance.

GEN. SHERMAN had four daughters. The eldest, Eleanor, is the wife of Lieut. Thackara, of the United States navy, and another is the wife of Mr. T. W. Fitch, of Pittsburgh. The two younger daughters, Lizzie and Rachel, are unmarried.

GEN. SHERMAN used to tell that while traveling in Ireland he was once serenaded by a local band in Cork. To his surprise and delight the musicians played "Marching Through Georgia." He inquired where they had heard the tune, and was further surprised to hear that it was a very old Irish air, the origin of which was lost in the mists of antiquity.

He Told the Truth.

President Board of Police Commissioners—We are sorry to say, O'Hoolohan, that you are discharged from the force.

O'Hoolahan—An' fer wphat cause, yer honor?

President—A jewelry store was burglarized in your district last night? Did you meet anyone on your beat last night?

O'Hoolahan—Yis, your honor. I met a man an' he said, said he, he was going to open a jewelry store.

President—He did open a jewelry store and stole $5,000 worth of goods.

O'Hoolahan—The man may have been a thafe, but he was no liar.—Jewelers' Circular.

MIRTH GENERATORS.

EVES a long lane will turn if it is trod upon often enough.

YOUNG LADY (to young man who kissed her)—"That's very singular, sir." Young Man—"Ah, well, allow me to make it plural!"

"WHAT brought the wrinkles in that man's face, papa?" "Care." "Oh! What brought the wrinkles in his coat, papa?" "Want of care." "Oh!"

AN Irishman charged with an assault was asked whether he was guilty. "How can I tell, your honor, till I have heard the evidence?" was his reply.

GUS—"What makes them call these things Manilla cigars?" Harry—"Don't know; I suspect it's because they make a man ill er than the domestic kind do."

"RASTAS, you are charged with stealing Mr. Brown's lawn mower. Have you a lawyer?" "No, sah. I didn't realize 'nuff on de sale ob dat mower, jedge, to hiah counsel."

"THAT is a cross section of a sleeping car," explained the mechanical draughtsman, as the irate passenger shot some pyrotechnic vituperatives at the offending porter.

A DOUBTFUL Compliment—He—"May I take the liberty of calling on you this afternoon, or do you prefer other company?" She—"As far as that goes, no company is as desirable as yours."

DYING UNCLE—"I intended bestowing my property upon you while I lived, but death has cut my purpose short." Nephew—"Don't mention it, uncle. I'll gladly accept the will for the deed."

"JOHN," said Mr. Steingy's wife, "I wouldn't buy any more cheap trousers if I were you." "Why not?" "This last pair you bought are the identical ones I sold the ragman six weeks ago for fifteen cents."

"IT does beat all," said Mrs. Bently, "the things that girls get on their bonnets these days. This paper speaks of a hat with a novel brim. The idea of cutting up good books for such nonsense!"

A NEW YORK street vender of little paper-covered pamphlets was calling out his wares the other day as follows: "Here y'are! Here y'are! Book o' jokes. One hundred jokes, five cents. One hundred jokes, all comic jokes, warranted all comic jokes."

MRS. A—"What a pleasant person Mrs. Green is to visit. She always receives one so courteously, you know." Mrs. B—"Why, that's the only reason that I do not call upon her. It is a sign of vulgarity, don't you know, to appear so pleased to see visitors. It looks as though you were not in the habit of receiving company."

COURT DECISIONS.

AN actress in Edinburgh brought suit against a Scotch newspaper for alleged unfair criticism, claiming $5,000 damages. The judge would not permit the case to go to the jury, claiming that the right of criticism belonged to the public and the press.

AN Indianapolis church member who subscribed to a church building fund attempted to wriggle out of it by claiming that the contract was illegal as it was made on Sunday, but the court has decided that he must pay up.

AN Iowa justice of the peace didn't actually fine a man $11 for declaring that the world was flat, but because he knocked the postmaster down for insisting that it was round. It was a narrow escape, though, and the defendant was cautioned to look out next time.

CORPORATION COUNSEL CLARK, of New York, decided that the coroner has the right to investigate all deaths resulting from or in any way attributable to the use of Koch's lymph under section 1,773 of the consolidation act, where the words "unusual manner" give the power to the coroner.

THE court of queen's bench in Dublin has just passed upon the rights of an unborn child. A Mme. Walker was in a railroad wreck at Armagh, and the child to which she subsequently gave birth was deformed in consequence. She brought an action in the name of the child to recover damages. The court decided against her.

THE New York court of appeals has decided that a lady, who lost a cloak while trying on suits in a cloak store, is entitled to recover the value of the garment and $50 damages for the trouble and irritation to which she has been put. She laid the cloak on the counter in sight of the clerks, but when she needed it it was gone. The court ruled that the garment was temporarily in care of the clerk.

MANY USES FOR SALT.

FOR weak eyes, a wash of weak salt and water will prove of much benefit.

SALT and water, quite strong, and used persistently for a time, will prevent the hair from falling out.

A TEASPOONFUL of salt dissolved in one-half glassful of water is excellent to allay nausea in sick-headaches.

TO relieve heart-burn drink a half-tumblerful of cold water in which has been dissolved a tablespoonful of salt.

SALT as a tooth-powder is better than almost any other dentifrice. It keeps the teeth very white, the gums hard and rosy, and breath fresh.

IF the throat is very sore, wring a cloth out of cold salt and water, and bind it on the throat tightly when going to bed; cover it with a dry towel. This is excellent.

FOR neuralgia make a small muslin bag, fill it with salt, heat it very hot and lay it against the aching place. It will prove a great relief, as salt retains the heat a long time.

IF ink is spilled on the carpet, throw a quantity of salt on it, which will quickly absorb the ink; take this up and put on more salt. Keep repeating this, rubbing it well into the ink spot, until the ink is all taken up by the salt; then brush the salt out of the carpet.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

A GOOD CUSTOMER.

An Illustration of the Evil Effects of Down-Town Associates.

When Rodney came into the club the other evening, one of the boys remarked:

"Ah, Rod,' you're looking pretty slick!"

"Yes, and I am feeling pretty slick, as you term it. My eye teeth have come through since the last time I was around here. One evening, not long ago, I dropped in at Brack's to get a few bowls; and while I was sitting at a table drinking, Brack, after shaking hands withseveral convivial friends and bidding them good-bye, chanced to come near my table. The old fellow that was waiting on me—the one we call Bismarck—thought to pay me a high compliment by giving me an introduction to his master, and, turning to Brack, said:

"'This is Mr. Rodney, a good customer of ours.'

"Brack sat down and ordered the drinks. He was exceedingly jestful, and laughed immoderately at some little pleasantry uttered by himself, and I attempted to be of good cheer, but if I smiled at all it must have been in a constrained way, for certain words lay with shudder-inspiring clamminess on my mind:

"'Mr. Rodney is a good customer of ours.'

"Many a time had I sat at that table, studying the faces of the clamorous crowd about me, and many an ill-spent dollar had I left there, but never before had it struck me that I had been picked out as a 'good customer of ours.' I went out with the words still ringing in my ears, and meditatively strolled along Michigan avenue. Hundreds of resplendent equipages whirled past. A man gayly waved his hand at me. He was driving a handsome span of horses. I recognized Brack. 'A good customer of ours.' Good customers of ours had provided him with that striking turnout. But where was my team?

"I went home. My wife was cooking supper. We could not afford to keep a girl. My wife had said so, and I had agreed with her. She had often declared that I was working too hard, and that it was no more than right that she should attempt to cut down expenses. I had agreed to all this, for I knew that I did work hard, and I prided myself that I had never been intoxicated, and yet—I was 'a good customer of ours.' We sat down to supper. My wife—and how weary she did look—sat with her arms resting on the table. 'Aren't you going to eat any thing?' I asked.

"'Not now,' she answered; 'I'm so tired that I haven't any appetite.'

"'Mr. Rodney is a good customer of ours,' the tea-kettle hummed; and a cat, purring at the leg of my chair, seemed to repeat the words. A chill crept over me.

"'What have you learned at school to-day?' I asked my little daughter.

"'I didn't go to school to-day,' she answered.

"'Why?'

"My wife looked up wearily and said: 'Her shoes are worn out. She'll have to wait until we can get her a new pair.'

"'Great God! 'A good customer of ours.'

"I went into the sitting-room and lay on the sofa. A troop of reproachful thoughts skurried through my brain. And then, old, villainous human nature tried to sooth me: 'You were never drunk,' it said, 'you have always been kind to your family. You drink of an evening when your work is done, but you need some sort of recreation. You spend money, it is true, but why does a man care to live if he can not enjoy himself occasionally.' Ah, how easy it would have been to yield, but truth, in a sad tone of reproval, waved aside the tempting scoundrel and said: 'The money you spend for beer would make your home a rest-inspiring and happy place. You say that you must have recreation. What recreation has your wife? Whose good customer is she?'

"My wife came into the room and sat down near me.

"'Are you very tired?' she asked, in a voice low and sweet with sympathy's music.

"'No!' I could not help exclaim, 'I am not tired,' but a good customer of—I mean that I am a brute.'

"'Why, what do you mean?' she asked in surprise.

"'I mean exactly what I say—that I am simply a brute. I have wasted many a dollar that I should have brought home; my selfishness has kept you hard at work when you should have been reading some entertaining book. In truth, I am a good customer at a beer hall and you are a slave!'

"'Oh, don't say that, dear,' she implored, gently smoothing back my hair. 'I am sure that your position demands the spending of some money. You must not be made to appear selfish.'

"'Oh, no,' I replied bitterly, 'I must throw money away—I must be a thoughtless brute at home so that I may not appear thoughtfully selfish among my down-town associates. We'll not discuss it, but we shall see.'

"We have seen," Rodney continued after a short pause. "We have seen a girl in the kitchen; we have seen my daughter, bright and well clothed, going to school—have seen my wife rested and cheerful, and especially have we seen that I am no longer 'a good customer of ours.'"—Opie P. Read, in Arkansaw Traveler.

BREWERY AGENCIES.

A System by Which the Saloon Business Is Increased.

It is to be hoped the recent report will prove true that the Chicago brewers have decided to abandon the practice of paying for the licenses of saloon-keepers. The system began in the strong competition between rival brewers. In order to increase the sale of his beer the breweryman would find a room in a locality which seemed promising, would supply fixtures and pay the license and make himself responsible for the rent and other running expenses; the nominal proprietor bound himself to sell only his patron's make of beer and paid for the license fee and other advances made by the latter by the increased price he paid for each keg of beer—an account being kept—and when the debt was canceled he obtained his beer at the regular rate.

This system, which is common to all large cities, seems to have been largely overdone in Chicago. These brewery agencies have multiplied until they are now greater in number than the drinking habits of the people can maintain. Hence they have ceased to be sources of profit to the breweries, and the system is an expense instead. Feeling this, the brewers of the city recently got together and decided to abandon the plan and to furnish their beer only to those men who are able to pay their own licenses and expenses. The high-license law of Illinois is proving too heavy a tax on the saloons. They must be diminished in number if their keepers are to make a good profit on their trade.

It is estimated that this contemplated withdrawal of the brewers' support will result in the closing up of between fifteen and sixteen hundred of the drinking-places in Chicago. And, what is still better, those that will thus be shut up are largely those run by improper characters and whose patrons are largely among the lowest and most dissolute class. While every saloon is an unmixed evil these low dens, which are practically gathering-places for the idle, the dissipated, the vicious and criminal elements, are by far the worst, for they afford centers around which these elements gather and are thus a menace to good order and the public peace. They are the kindergartens of crime, the training-schools of vice, and their closing will be a distinct gain to the city.

The practice of brewers and wholesale liquor dealers in furnishing the means of starting saloons in order to extend their own trade, is a most pernicious one. It is in effect an effort to increase the number of drinking men and drunkards. A man who has a newly-established place of this sort in charge desires, of course, to make it profitable, so that he can discharge his debt to his patron and make money for himself. To do this he must have custom, and therefore he sets himself to work to obtain it. All is fish that comes to his net. He will take the boy's pennies, the wages of the poor, the money that should buy food and clothing for the wives and children of the working-men. He cares not where it comes from; it may be stained with the tears of a despairing mother or wife, blackened by fraud or vice, or red with the blood of crime. What he wants is money, and it matters not how it is obtained, so that it passes over his counter in exchange for the liquid poisons in which he deals.

He endeavors, therefore, to increase the number of visitors to his saloon in every possible way. He scrapes acquaintance with young men, in order to invite them to come; he is hail-fellow-well-met with every one he meets, with the same selfish end in view—the increase of his patronage, and hence of his profits. So it follows that such a saloon becomes a plague-spot in its locality. It is a direct agency for the manufacture of drunkards, and its proprietor does the devil's missionary work in laboring to induce men to make it their resort. These brewers' agencies are largely responsible for the increasing percentage of drinking men among the masses of our cities.

That the system has been overdone to so great a degree that it is no longer profitable to its promoters, and that therefore those of Chicago are to abandon it is a good thing. It will shut up the worst of these rum-holes and purify the city to that degree. A large gain to law and order may be expected when some fifteen hundred of these places are shut up through the withdrawal of their backing. Our cities are the stronghold of the rum power, and it is there that the most active work needs to be done in the education of the masses of the people—first in personal sobriety and self-control, and second in a knowledge of the evils that are inevitable as a result of the rum traffic.—Toledo Blade.

NOTES IN GENERAL.

The Russian Duchy of Finland has a Temperance League, a Blue Ribbon movement, a form of Good Templars molded by Government orders, and a coffee-house movement.—Christian Inquirer.

The King of Samoa seems determined that his subjects shall be sober if not free. The following order is his own proclamation, any breach of which is to be visited by heavy penalties: "No spirituous, vinous or fermented liquors or intoxicating drinks whatever shall be sold, given or offered to be bought, or bartered by any native Samoan or Pacific Islander resident in Samoa."—Union Signal.

Another fond delusion has been shattered by the relentless data of science. Whisky has long been regarded as of value in the treatment of pneumonia, but a comparison of the results attained in different hospitals by its use in this capacity shows that its employment is not desirable. It is found that in the New York hospitals sixty-five per cent. of the pneumonia patients die under alcoholic treatment, while in London, at the Object Lesson Temperance Hospital, only five per cent. die.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

There are, it is stated, in round numbers, fourteen thousand drink-shops in London, and every year twenty thousand persons are arrested for drunkenness. In the United Kingdom there are one hundred and ninety thousand public houses, and every year there are two hundred thousand arrests for drunkenness. It is estimated that there is a huge standing army of half a million men who are more or less always besotted, men whose intemperance impairs their working power, consumes their earnings and renders their homes wretched.—National Temperance Advocate.

A Woman Best Understands a Woman's Ills.

The experiments of Lydia E. Pinkham that years ago gave to the world that blessing, the Vegetable Compound, were made through a feeling of sympathy for the afflicted of her sex. She discovered that nearly all the diseases of woman have a common origin, and therefore may have a common cure. As a result, thousands of women in all parts of the civilized world cherish grateful remembrance of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and everything its discoverer.

"My Work Shall Be Perpetuated."

The perpetuation of Mrs. Pinkham's work was guarded by her foresight from the start. Every suffering woman applying to her received personal attention, and the details of every case were recorded. These records are to-day the largest in the world, contain facts not to be found elsewhere, and are now available to the women of the world.

A Savior of Her Sex.

When pain becomes a constant companion; when there is no repose for the sufferer by day or night; when life itself seems to be a calamity; and when all this is reversed by a woman, whose only ambition is to do good to others, has she not won the above title? Suffering women who seek Mrs. Pinkham find both a helper and friend.

A Record of a Life's Work.

The entire facts connected with every case ever treated by Lydia E. Pinkham are on record. With the assistance of lady clerks writing at her dictation, over one hundred letters per day have been disposed of, the answers going to ladies in all parts of the world, and the facts compiled in a library of reference for the benefit of suffering women. Here is a life's practice of a woman among women, and represents the largest collection of facts the world has ever known.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S Vegetable Compound

A STARTLING REPORT

Sensational Disclosures Are Made in New Orleans.

THE GRAND JURY STILL PROBING

A Discovery that Detective O'Malley Was a Record Tamperer.

The Batch of Indictments to be Handed In by Saturday—A Man of Prominence Connected With the Perjury Case. Leader Parkerson Denies that He Wrote a Letter for Publication.

NEW ORLEANS, March 26.—The Grand Jury by Saturday will bring in a batch of indictments, handing in its findings all together. Among them will be one against a man of more prominence than any yet mentioned in connection with the perjury case.

It will bring in a special report giving a full history of the Hennessy case and the attempts to prevent a fair trial and an honest verdict. It will pay its respects to a number of people, against whom there is not enough direct evidence to justify indictments.

After that the prison affair will be taken up, and it will depend upon whether any parties are positively identified as breaking into the prison whether there will be any indictments found or not. It is more than likely that the course already outlined will be pursued, and that the Grand Jury will announce that it cannot indict the people.

Some sensational disclosures are made in connection with the Grand Jury investigation. It is learned that the defense in the Hennessy case made an effort to doctor the records of the electric light company, in order to show that the light at the corner of Girod and Basin streets was burning dimly when the assassination occurred. The defense laid particular stress on the light.

An employe of the company who kept the records says unknown persons tampered with them and changed them to show that the lights were poor between certain hours. This employe and two others were summoned by the defense, but were not put upon the stand. A subpœna duces tecum was issued for the records, but for some reason unknown the books were not offered.

The report of the grand jury promises to be startling, as Detective O'Malley is said to have participated in having the records altered.

PARKERSON DENIES IT.

The Mob Leader Repudiates a Letter Published in New York.

NEW ORLEANS, March 26.—The morning dispatches state that a New York newspaper contained a letter purporting to come from Mr. Parkerson, leader in the recent massacre, in which, among other things, Mr. Parkerson is made to say that the people have nothing to apologize for and will repeat what they have done, if the occasion ever arises.

Mr. Parkerson was shown the letter, and he pronounced it a positive forgery. It is full of braggadocio, he said, and he would have to have been either drunk or crazy to have penned such a note. He has never written a line to any paper concerning the tragedy and has not accepted an offer to write an article on the lynching for a syndicate, nor does he intend to write a single word to any one touching the late troubles.

Wasted His Millions and Poor Now.

NEW YORK, March 26.—Alcede Vadoro, a Greek, 23 years old, told a weird story at the Barge Office. He arrived on the Aurania yesterday. He says he inherited $2,125,000 in 1885 upon the death of his mother. His father, he said, was chief engineer of the Suez Canal. To-day Alcede has not a cent of the two millions of money he inherited, and is in America looking for work. Speculations in cotton futures and "plunging" on the race tracks of England and France is the cause attributed by Vadoro for the complete disappearance of his fortune in six short years.

Judge Sylvester Dead.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., March 26.—Hon. Andrew Sylvester, Associate Judge of the Circuit Court of Washington county, died here during the morning after a lingering illness. Judge Sylvester was formerly Attorney General of Maryland, and while in that office he conducted the prosecution of the notable case of Mrs. Mary E. Wharton, tried for poisoning General Ketchum. He was also connected with other famous Maryland cases.

The Elliotts to be Arraigned This Week.

COLUMBUS, O., March 26.—Judge Duncan overruled the demurrers to the indictments in the Elliott murder case and the prisoners will be arraigned this week.

CRUELLY BEAT A PUPIL.

Professor Dumbart Must Answer for His Act in Court.

NORWALK, Conn., March 26.—Prof. E. H. Dumbart, of the East Norwalk School, severely whipped Richard Hendricks, one of his pupils, and will have to answer for it in court.

The boy has been absent sick for a week, and when he appeared in school during the morning he gave the professor a note from his mother explaining his absence. The professor said it was a forgery and ordered the boy to go to his private room. There the professor beat him severely about the body with a ruler.

The boy was carried to his home by his classmates. The lower part of his body was beaten to a pulpy mass of jelly, from which upon the slightest touch the blood oozed. The boy was placed in bed and medical aid summoned. He is at present in a precarious condition. The mother of the boy swore out a warrant for the arrest of the teacher. She has also complained to the Connecticut Humane Society, and the society will take action in the matter. She also intends to bring a civil suit against Professor Dumbart for damages.

The action of the professor is harshly criticised here, and a number of parents of children who attend the school have taken their children away. Professor Dumbart came to this city from Brooklyn, where, it is claimed, he lost a lucrative position in the schools on account of his treatment of the scholars.

NEARLY KILLED BY WHISKEY.

A Baltimore Citizen Falls Unconscious After Winning a Wager.

BALTIMORE, March 26.—Henry Buckheister made a bet last night that for every stroke of the bell announcing the hour of ten he would drink a glass of whiskey. When the bell ceased tolling he had swallowed thirteen good sized drinks of whiskey and four schooners of beer. As he swallowed the last drop he fell unconscious to the floor.

A policeman was called in who had the man taken to the City Hospital, where, after working on him some time, he became conscious. In the morning he paid a fine for being drunk and went before a magistrate and made oath that he would never drink another drop. He said he had had enough.

BIG MASS MEETING.

Ten Thousand Coke Workers to Assemble on Saturday.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., March 26.—President John B. Rae has been here for four days in close touch with the labor leaders. A general mass meeting of the strikers of the entire region will be held on Saturday and 10,000 men are expected to be present.

At a mass meeting at Trotter and Leisenring resolutions were passed that any miner who would venture to return to work before the trouble was settled would be looked upon as a thief.

Will Publish a Paper in London.

NEW YORK, March 26.—The Sun Publishing Company, of London, England, was incorporated in Jersey City, with a capital of $150,000. The incorporators are George E. Barrett, of Newark, N. J., Carey Taylor, of North Bergen Township, N. J., and John P. O'Connor, of Jersey City. The object of the company is the publication of a Sunday newspaper in London and to carry on the business of general publishers. There will be three directors, subject to removal by T. P. O'Connor, M. P., of Chelsea, England.

Social Sensation.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., March 26.—A sensation was created in this city by the announcement that the young widow of the late millionaire Christopher Meyer had gone to Montana and there married Clifford Bartlett, of New York, the latter having secured a divorce from his wife in order to marry Mrs. Meyer. Bartlett is Judge Advocate General of the State of New York on Governor Hill's staff, and is a son of the late William O. Bartlett, the well known lawyer and litterateur.

Burned to Death.

DANBURY, Conn., March 26.—John Langdon, an employe of the Danbury Gas Company, was burned to death at the works last night. He accidentally upset a pail of condensation, a combustible material composed of tar and water, and the flame of a lantern which he carried ignited this. His clothing caught fire and he was so frightfully burned that he died a few hours later in terrible agony. He was single.

Wanted for Many Robberies.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 26.—It is believed that John Mooney, arrested at Wheeling, is one of the burglars who broke into the Freeport Bank. One of the bonds stolen there was found on his person. Inspector McAllese states that Mooney is wanted in almost every State in the Union. He says he is classed as a burglar, thief and safe blower away above the average.

THE RACE QUESTION

An Address to the Negro Voters of the North.

THEY ARE URGED TO ORGANIZE.

The Anglo-Saxon May Fight His Political Battles Alone.

A Newspaper Article Severely Condemned—Malone and Langston Bury the Hatchet—Minister Fava Waiting for Instructions from Italy—Petitioning the President for a Priest.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—The Interstate Civil and Political Rights Association of the United States, an organization of colored men, has issued an address to the negro voters of the North, in which they say that the President has done all that he "could do to influence such action" in Congress as would result in the holding of fair elections in the South," but that some few Senators "have seen fit to vote in such a way as to restrict the political chains upon our brethren in the South and negative the influence of the negro voters in the North."

Important elections, the address says, "are to be held this autumn in Northern States where the negro vote is the balance of power, and each negro in the north is urged to "constitute himself a committee of one to see some other voter and urge upon him the importance of refusing to vote for any candidate upon any ticket unless he is known to be a firm friend of the negro, and the casting of a free ballot and having it fairly counted."

The negroes are urged to organize for offensive and defensive purposes, and allow the Anglo-Saxon to fight his political battles alone whenever he is one of those men who have said that the negroes are an inferior class of people to the Anglo-Saxon race.

MRS. DIMMICK'S POSITION.

A Groundless Publication that Has Annoyed the President and His Family.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—A great deal of indignation is expressed here at the way the ladies of the President's family have had their names dragged through the press in connection with a recent newspaper sensation.

A story, which has been widely published, represented Mrs. Harrison as keeping a female relative of hers on the public payroll as housekeeper of the White House and giving her in this way a sinecure, and the report went so far as to say that the society leaders in Washington had snubbed the lady on finding out her position.

This is wholly untrue. The lady referred to is Mrs. Harrison's niece, Mrs. Dimmick, who has at various times been an inmate of the family. The same story was quietly started some time ago, but did not then get into print.

The President and his family are naturally very much annoyed at the groundless publication, and if the authors of it can be identified it is possible that an order will be issued excluding them from the Executive mansion.

Petitioned the President.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—A numerously signed petition has been presented to the President by Secretary Blaine asking that the Rev. Father William Joseph Larkin, formerly a chaplain in the army and doing duty in the Indian country, be placed on the permanent retired list. Among the signers are Bishop Keane, president of the Catholic University of America; Senators Morgan, Cullom, Paddock, Mitchell, Hansbrough, Gorman and Kenna, and a number of others.

Great Britain Will Exhibit.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—The State Department has been formally notified that the Government of Great Britain accepts the invitation extended by President Harrison to take part in the World's Columbian Exposition Fair to be held in Chicago in 1893. Lord Salisbury writes the President that a royal commission would be appointed to assist in forwarding the interests of British exhibitors.

Edmunds and Proctor Will Not Resign.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—There is no truth in the rumor that Senator Edmunds will be appointed to one of the new Circuit Court judgeships. The rumors about Mr. Edmunds' probable resignation arise chiefly from the published statement that Secretary Proctor is to resign in order to be a Senatorial candidate. This Mr. Proctor has denied.

Waiting for Instructions from Italy.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Nothing new has occurred in the negotiations concerning the New Orleans affair between Secretary Blaine and the Italian government. Baron Fava, the Italian Minister, did not call on Mr. Blaine, but he will do so when he receives instructions from his government.

Minister Blair Will Go to China.

WASHINGTON, March. 26.—Secretary Blaine says that ex-Senator Blair would go to China as United States Minister. The Secretary declined to say what instructions, or if any at all, had been given to Mr. Blair, but simply repeated the statement that he would go to China as United States Minister.

No News from Chili at Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—The State and Navy Departments are still ignorant of the state of affairs in Chili. It is believed at the departments that the telegraph and cable lines are cut, or else the party in control has established a strict telegraphic censorship.

Kincaid's Trial Goes on.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—The trial of Charles E. Kincaid for killing ex-Congressman Taulbee, of Kentucky, in the Capitol was continued in the Criminal Court here. Samuel Donaldson, formerly doorkeeper of the House, Harry E. Lovell

SURPRISED THE BURGLAR.

Three Plucky Women, Armed With Pokers, Prevent a Robbery.

BOSTON, March 26.—As Mrs. Kate D. Desmond was looking from her window on Mystic avenue, Somerville, early in the morning she saw a man remove the storm windows and enter the house of a neighbor. She ran over and told Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Kent.

The three women armed themselves with pokers, shovels and brooms, the only weapons handy, and sallied forth to the combat. Mrs. Desmond taking command, after placing her sentinels at the doors and windows, she called upon the intruder to surrender.

A full grown man jumped from the pantry window and grappled Mrs. Desmond, who made several lunges at him with the poker and dealt him an ugly wound on the cheek. The burglar, seeing he was getting the worst of the affair, beat a hasty retreat up Austin street, closely pursued by the reserve guard, Mrs. Kent, who waved a shovel, shouting "Stop thief."

Patrolman Brown appeared eventually and found a large amount of goods packed in a bag, which the burglar had to abandon upon being attacked by the plucky women. He was not arrested.

PLACING THE BLAME.

Decision of the Railroad Commissioners in the New York Tunnel Accident.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 26.—The Board of Railroad Commissioners has given a decision in the matter of the accident in the tunnel of the New York & Harlem Railroad Company, leased by the New York Central and Huson River Railroad Company on the extension of Fourth avenue, New York city, Feb. 20.

The board finds that Lewis Fowler, engineer, and Charles A. Wellington, firemen, were directly responsible for this accident in passing the distant and home signals while set at danger; from failure to see them in consequence of fog, steam and smoke.

Second, it finds that the New York New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company is directly responsible for the death of the victims of the accident in as far as such death was contributed by the burning of the cars, because of the failure of the said company to conform to the law requiring its cars to be heated other than by stove or furnace therein.

DEATH TRAP FOR GIRLS.

An Educational Institution Charged with Criminal Carelessness.

CHICAGO, March 26.—The Tribune declares editorially that no prudent parent can be justified in keeping a daughter in the female department of the Northwestern University at Evanston so long as the policy of the present management continues and warns parents of their responsibility. It says the building is unsafe and deficient in fire escapes.

There would be an awful loss of life if there should be a fire at night. Oil lamps are used instead of gas, and the building is overcrowded. Since the elevator was abolished delicate girls are compelled to climb four pairs of stairs several times daily. This condition of affairs is not due to lack of funds, as the institution clears several thousand dollars yearly by boarding the girl students. The editorial created a sensation. A large number of students are from New York, Pennsylvania and one or two other Eastern States.

Death of Dr. Wickersham.

LANCASTER, Pa., March 26.—The death of Dr. James P. Wickersham, was directly due to heart failure, superinduced by the grip. He was prominent for many years in educational matters of the country. Under President Arthur's administration he represented the United States at Denmark. He was also at one time State Superintendent of Public Instruction. He commanded a regiment throughout the Gettysburg campaign of the civil war.

The Clarks Declare Their Victory.

NEWARK, N. J., March 26.—A representative of the Clark Thread Company says: "The company has won a victory over the strikers in the present trouble, and the strike so far as the firm is concerned, is at an end. The old men will not be allowed to come back to work in the mill under any circumstances. In a few days the Jersey City police will be withdrawn, their presence no longer being considered necessary."

Arrested on Suspicion.

EAST WAKEFIELD, N.H., March 26.—The man supposed to be William Wright, who it is thought is guilty of the Buttinger murder, was arrested at the Davis House in East Wakefield, at noon, on a warrant which charges the larceny of articles of clothing, etc., the property of John P. Rickey of Rochester, N. H. The man was turned over to Rochester officers. The prisoner exhibited extreme nervousness.

Political Affairs in Connecticut.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 26.—In the House the Senate resolutions declaring the Democratic State officials elected were rejected, in accordance with the report of the Committee on Canvass of Votes, to whom the resolutions were referred. Executive Secretary Brainard again made a demand on Comptroller Staub for the salary due him for the month of February and was again refused.

Anxious to Resume Operations.

PITTSBURG, March 26.—The McClure Coke Company, one of the Frick concerns, located at Mt. Pleasant, has posted notice that it wishes to resume work. It is reported that the conditions are a three-year sliding scale, with rates equivalent to a 7 per cent. reduction, the men to receive the old rates when coke reaches $2.15.

Banquet to McKinley in Providence.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 26.—Ex-Congressman McKinley delivered an address at Infantry Hall last night before the Young Men's Republican Club. About eleven hundred persons sat down to the banquet, which preceded the speaking. Mr. McKinley's speech was the same as that delivered at Worcester.

TO DEMAND JUSTICE

Newfoundland Will Send a Delegation to England.

NO COERCION WILL BE ALLOWED.

If Great Britain Persists Armed Resistance Will Be Made.

Much Significance in the Honor Being Paid by Russia to President Carnot To-day—General Foster's Mission to Spain—Queen Victoria's Welcome at Grasse—Pope's Advice to the Irish.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., March 26.—The Governor attended the Council Chambers yesterday to assent to a certain bill. The Assembly summoned his presence by the Black Rod.

A motion was made that the members do not comply, as a protest ag inst the coercive and treacherous policy of the British government. A large majority favored the motion, only members of the Cabinet following the Speaker to the Governor's presence. A large audience cheered the protesting members, and hissed those complying, calling them traitors and spies. Intense excitement prevailed.

Meetings continue to be held all over the colony protesting against coercion. If the threatened legislation is enacted, armed resistance will be made to the enforcement of the regulations made under it. The people damand only the equitable settlement of the whole question, having regard to all undoubted French rights, but they object to the piecemeal treatment at present adopted by the British government against the protests of the colony.

The Legislature decided to send a delegation of five to England. Two opposition and three government delegates will be empowered to treat for the final arrangement of the whole subject. They will be named to-morrow and will probably leave immediately.

FRANCE AND RUSSIA.

The Presentation to President Carnot To-day Very Significant.

PARIS, March 26.—Baron de Mohrenheim, the Russian Minister here, will to-day present to President Carnot the Grand Cordon of the Order of St. Andrew, the Russian decoration which the Czar by a recent decree conferred upon him.

This ceremony according to impressions prevailing in Berlin, marks an important epoch in the history of France and Russia, and is supposed to point to the actual conclusion of a formal alliance between them. It is said that until recently the Czar had resisted all attempts to go beyond an entente cordiale.

The Pope's Advice to the Irish.

ROME, March 26.—Archbishop Walsh gave the Pope an account of the schism in the Irish parliamentary party, and His Holiness counseled the Archbishop to instruct the clergy to adhere to their present attitude. The Pope to-day gave audience to the Bishop of Chincoutini, from Quebec.

The Queen Welcomed at Grasse.

PARIS, March 26.—When Queen Victoria arrived at Grasse she was received with great enthusiasm, the people turning out with flags and banners. The prefect of the department and the Mayor of the town welcomed the Queen at the station, and thousands cheered her. The Queen bowed repeatedly and cordially.

Gen. Foster's Mission to Spain.

MADRID, March 26.—Gen. J. W. Foster, the special representative of the United States who is conducting the negotiations between the United States and Spain for a treaty of commerce, had a prolonged conference with Senor Canovas del Castillo, president of the Council of Ministers.

ROME, March 26.—King Humbert continues the late Prince Napoleon's pension to the Princess Clothilde.

Dismantling the Wrecked Brig.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., March 26.—The brig Banigan, which was wrecked at the West End, has been dismantled. Her cargo will be taken out and an attempt made to haul her off the beach. It is thought that the wreckers will not be successful, however, as the vessel lies high and dry upon the sand. The body of the seaman who was drowned has not yet been recovered.

Mass Meeting for Nine Hours.

LOWELL, Mass., March 26.—A mass meeting in favor of a nine-hour day was held at Huntington Hall last night. There was a parade of laborers before the meeting and about fifteen hundred men were in line. Addresses were made by Thomas Wisdom, of Pittsburg, Pa., organizer of the Iron Moulders' Union of the United States, and Henry Lloyd, of Boston.

NINETEEN WERE DROWNED.

A British Steamer Wrecked on the North Carolina Coast.

NORFOLK, March 26.—The Larn line steamship Strathairly went ashore at 4:40 a. m. during a heavy northeaster, one and a quarter miles south of Chicamicomico life-saving station, on the North Carolina coast, twenty-one miles north of Hatteras.

The crew consisted of twenty-six men, and only seven remain to tell the tale of the terrible trip through the breakers in a raging storm. Among those lost are all the officers of the steamship except the second mate.

Those who were saved owe their lives to the brave life savers, and it is thought that all could have been rescued if they could have remained on the wreck, but the heavy sea washed them away before the rescuing crew arrived. The vessel is fast going to pieces, and little will remain of her when the weather clears away.

She is a wooden vessel and was built in Newcastle, England. She is a schooner rigged and was engaged in the trade between Baltimore and the West Indies.

She was bound on this trip from Santiago, Cuba. This is the most serious wreck on the coast since the German ship Elizabeth and her crew were lost about four years ago.

A more desolate coast than that upon which the vessel was cast it would be difficult to imagine. It is a strip of land cast up from the sea and separated from the main land by many miles of broad sais sounds.

There are but few inhabitants, and their only means of communication with the outside world is had through an occasional oyster sloop or fishing boat that may cruise along the sounds. They obtain their livelihood from the sea. On the sea side long sandbars run out and reefs abound, and a vessel that happens to be wrecked is sure to strike a long distance out, where she is speedily smashed to pieces by the tremendous Hatteras seas, which have been the dread of the sailor for many hundreds of years. The bones of many a ship and of their crews lie bleaching on the white sands.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The census just taken shows an increase of 2,865,138 in the population of Germany.

The firm of A. Whitney & Sons, car wheel manufacturers, is financially embarrassed.

Professor Edward P. Morris of Williams College, has been called to the chief professorship in Latin, by the corporation of Yale University.

The scheme in Minnesota to move the capital from St. Paul will likely succeed in the Senate, but will probably be defeated in the House.

General John C. Lee, Lieutenant-Governor of Ohio under Governor R. B. Hayes, and one of the most prominent lawyers of Ohio, is dead, at his home in Toledo, aged 63 years.

The morocco finishers, of Lynn, Mass., who struck about seven months ago, met last night and decided to continue the strike. Five hundred of the eleven hundred men who went out originally are still unemployed.

Lucius Doolittle, a well known and wealthy farmer, of Woodbridge, Conn., committed suicide by taking paris green. He was 86 years of age. He leaves an estate valued at $50,000 to his wife, who is only 26 years old.

The dispatch from Pittsburg stating that the discovery had been made that the B. & O. railroad proposed to parallel the Pennsylvania railroad from one end to the other, and to actually reduce the distance from Pittsburg to Chicago seven miles, does not receive confirmation from the B. & O. officials.

The police board of Troy, N. Y., have virtually given permission to have the Dixon-McCarthy contest in that city next Tuesday. It decided not to seek to dissolve the injunction and will obey the mandate of the court. An injunction will be procured restraining the sheriff from interfering.

A. G. Spaulding of Chicago has definitely decided to retire from the baseball business. He has made all arrangements to retire on the first of the month. He will also leave Chicago and make New York his home in the future. James Hast and Adrian C. Andrews will be left in charge of Spaulding's interests.

Thieves Terrorize Altoona.

ALTOONA, Pa., March 26.—The people of this city are greatly alarmed over a series of robberies which have occurred during the past two weeks. Every night there are two or three stores and dwellings entered and ransacked. All efforts to capture the thieves have so far been of Stevens of this city, is the representative in this section.

—The story of an interesting case in which well-known people of this city are implicated will appear in these columns to-morrow. THE PRESS has for weeks been in possession of the entire facts in the matter, which promises soon to be fully ventilated in the courts. The judges to whom the case will be submitted will have to review evidence of a highly sensational character, involving the reputation of various Plainfielders.

—There will be published in these columns to-morrow, a communication from Edward F. Milliken, of Central avenue, reviewing the practicability and desirability of the trolley, cable and storage battery systems of street car propulsion for Plainfield. It will prove one of the most interesting, instructive and convincing of all of the argumentative contributions to this subject of such vital importance now so generally discussed by all the citizens.

CONTRACTOR WOOD'S SUICIDE.

The Wife of the Dead Man Found.—What His Counsel Says,

The wife of Contractor Wood was found by Police Captain Grant yesterday afternoon, at the New York address published exclusively in THE PRESS, and was told of the suicide of her husband. She came to this city to-day, viewed the body, and assisted in preparations for the funeral.

Although Wood and his wife had not lived together in some time, kindly relations between them were not altogether cut off. The last letter Wood ever received from his wife was received in 1889. In it she gave him much excellent advice and wifely admonition, and expressed the hope that his future enterprises would be more successful than his former ones. This letter Wood had treasured carefully up to the day of his death, and it was found in his pocket after the suicide.

The life of the dead man seems to have had a vein of pathetic romance running through it. In earlier years he was very successful, but of late his career had been one of disappointment and sorrow.

Gen. Fay, counsel for Contractor Wood, was seen by a reporter at Elizabeth last night. He was much affected by his client's death. "The first time I met Capt. Wood"—said Gen. Fay—"was at Gen. Lee's surrender at Appomattox. Wood was then a First Lieutenant in a New York cavalry regiment, and was attached to the staff of Gen. Custer. He had served with distinction through the greater part of the war.

"That was the last seen of him until he called at my office when he got involved in trouble with the Union County Freeholders. He built the road through Fanwood, from Westfield to Plainfield, and had a dispute with the Freeholders over some money which they deducted from his final pay.

"Before coming to New Jersey he was a sub-contractor for several years in Missouri under Contractor John Cameron, of Plainfield. Capt. Wood claimed to have large property interests there. The last time I saw him he was very despondent over information which he had received that the Circuit Court in Missouri had decided adversely to him on several claims that were involved in litigation. I tried to cheer him up, but his mind seemed to be deeply affected by the news from the West. He got his title of captain from having command of an independent military company in New York State during the administration of Gov. Lucius Robinson. Capt. Wood has one child living with his wife's mother in Western New York, near Rochester. He went to Plainfield from Missouri nearly two years ago and had been a boarder at Force's Hotel since."

Gen Fay said that the suit of Mr. Wood against the Freeholders would now probably be discontinued. The Board some time ago, through its attorney, made an offer of settlement which Contractor Wood did not then feel disposed to accept.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

James F. Pendergast, formerly of this city, died at Elizabeth Saturday last in the 71st year of his age.

Edward Field, of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, is the victim of a very bad fall from his wheel. On Park avenue near Second street he passed so close to a woman's skirts that they tripped him and he was thrown violently on his face. He is badly cut.

Mrs. Cornelius Schenck has been called to Philadelphia to attend the funeral of her sister's six year-old daughter whose death was caused by an unusual accident the other day. The little one picked up a tea-pot that her mother had just filled with boiling water, and took a swallow. She was so badly burned that death resulted. It is the second death in the family within eight months.

At the Educational Conference to be held in the Friends' meeting-house, fifteenth street and Rutherford place, New York, Saturday afternoon, Miss Julia E. Bulkley, Superintendent the Plainfield Public Schools, will read a paper on "European Schools and Methods of Instruction". The Committee of Arrangements having charge of the Conference includes Aaron M. Powell of East Sixth street.

Messrs Charles and Pliny Fisk, the bankers, have a novel way of testing the intelligence of their clerks. They sent one out the other afternoon to a downtown book dealer for a copy of "The Life of Adam's Father; bound in half-calf." The clerk said, "Mr. Fisk wants it in time to catch the 4:30 train." The dealer understood the case and told the clerk he could get the book at Scribner's, for which place the latter started on a run. This clerk, by the way, lives in this city.

Crescent League Players Lose Their First Series at Whist.

The first match games in the tournament for the whist championship of the towns along the line of the Central railroad, took place last night. Each association entered is represented by three couples. Those who play for the Crescent League of this city are Messrs. Emerson & Allis, Kieb & Bates and Graham & Green.

Last night this sextette met the N. J. Athletic Club's representatives at Bergen Point. Emerson & Allis and Kieb & Bates defeated their contestants, but Graham & Green lost by enough points to wipe out all the others had won by.

A CABLE COMPANY'S TESTIMONY.

General Manager Chapman Says That Nothing but a Large Volume of Business on a Straight Line, is Profitable.

The following from the Manager of the cable railway company at Grand Rapids, Mich., is published for the instruction of the Central Times and others who know so little of what they are talking about when on the subject of street railways:

VALLEY CITY STREET AND CABLE RAILWAY CO.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., March 23, '91.

DEAR SIR:—Replying to yours of the 21st in regard to the cable system for your town. The results of the cable system in all the towns where it is now used proves conclusively that the cost per train mile on a reasonably straight alignment will be about 18 cents. To reach this result, it will be necessary to have a train passing over the road at least every four minutes. If the business will support a train only every ten minutes, the situation is hopeless. Our north and south line requires 270 horse power to drag the rope through the conduits without any car attached, and about 350 horse power with nine trains on the rope.

In the matter of alignment, it is absolutely necessary that the ropes should last one year to fifteen months or say 80,000 to 110,000 miles. This can be done on a practically straight line, but it cannot be done with a road turning two or three street corners unless the same can be handled by large wheels instead of curve pulleys. Our experience here has proved that with a curved road the life of a cable is from 125 to 150 days. Each curve in addition to wearing out the rope, is a very expensive thing to maintain. All the curve pulleys have to be oiled and adjusted and are constantly wearing out. The general verdict seems to be that nothing but a large volume of business on a practically straight line will render a cable investment fairly profitable.

JAS. R. CHAPMAN,
General Manager.

NEVER A FINER CONCERT HERE.

Mielke, Dippel and Fischer of the German Opera Company, Have Been Engaged to Sing With The Melopoia in This City.

The cost of the next concert of The Melopoia in this city, will be—according to rumor—over a thousand dollars. Frau Antonia Mielke, soprano; Herr Andreas Dippel, tenor; and Herr Emil Fischer, bass, of the great German opera company that closed last week at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, have been engaged to appear on that occasion, besides instrumentalists on the piano, harp, etc.

The date of the concert is fixed for Monday evening, May 4, as that is the only time the great artists named above are at liberty. The next evening they appear at the inaugurating of the grand Carnegie Music Hall, New York city, which is just being finished as in every respect the most complete building for the purpose intended, in the world.

The cost of each of these soloists is far beyond anything ever paid for a singer in this city since Clara Louise Kellogg appeared in a concert at what is now the Trinity Reformed church. The pews on that occasion sold at five dollars each. It will undoubtedly be necessary to hold the concert in Music Hall instead of The Casino, for as soon as this announcement is read in to-day's PRESS, scores of people, in addition to the regular patrons and subscribers of The Melopoia, will want seats.

Why not make a general society event of it—inaugurate an annual Plainfield May Music Festival—and hold it in The Crescent?

A Red Hot School Election.

A Warrenville correspondent of THE PRESS writes that the voters of Mt. Horeb School District had a "red hot" time over the election for school trustee. Though the meeting was called to order at half-past four o'clock it was not until an hour later that the disputing and wrangling ceased so that a chairman and secretary could be chosen. The brethren and sisters were out in full force. Twenty-three women were present. Many of the "old timers" distinguished themselves by eloquent oratory. Two constables were on hand to see that no heads were broken. The balloting was very close. Adrian Martin received 30 votes, and John H. Borman 26. Mr. Borman was therefore declared elected. During the progress of the meeting the woods of W. H. Codington were set on fire by some malicious person. The flames were speedily extinguished without serious damage.

In neighboring districts the following re-elections were made:

Springdale District, No. 35—Louis P. Eager.
Warrenville District, No. 35—Peter Bower.
Dead River District, No. 33—Adam Betzel.

The Rev. Mr. Schenck an Executive.

A meeting of the Union County Bible Society will be held in the Westminster church, Elizabeth, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. The society was recently reorganized at a meeting of pastors held in Westfield and officers were elected as follows: President, Rev. J. W. Teal, D. D., of Elizabeth; vice president, Judge L. S. Hyer, of Rahway; secretary, J. L. Clayton, of Westfield; treasurer, J. T. Pierson, of Westfield. Executive committee: Rev. Cornelius Schenck, of this city; Rev. T. J. Kommer, of Linden; F. P. Vogel, of Elizabeth, and Mr. Daland, of Rahway.

A Plainfielder's Distinguished Uncle.

Rufus King, one of the most eminent of Ohio's jurists, and an uncle of T. W. King of Sandford avenue, died at his residence in Cincinnati, yesterday, at the age of 73 years. He was formerly Dean of the Cincinnati Law School, and was one of the founders of the University of Cincinnati. His only public office was that of judge of the Supreme Court of the State.

Mr. King was descended from distinguished ancestry on both his father's and his mother's side. His paternal grandfather, Rufus King, LL. D., served in the Revolutionary war, was member of the Continental Convention from 1784 to 1787, took a leading part in the famous Constitutional National Convention, was elected United States Senator from New York four times, and served eight years as Minister to England. His father, Edward King, was a leading lawyer and politician of Ohio. Rufus King's maternal grandfather was Thomas Worthington, a member of the Federal Constitutional Convention of 1787 with Rufus King, and was in 1814 elected fifth Governor of Ohio, serving two terms.

News from Washingtonville.

The annual meeting of the Washingtonville Union Sunday-school was held in the Memorial chapel Tuesday evening. The President, E. L. Bonny, presided. In his report he showed that the Association and its work were in a most flourishing condition. Quite a number had been added to the membership. Several had joined the different churches in Plainfield, and others who had not yet joined the church had found their spiritual life, with new hopes and new incentives to a better life. It was also urged, that these too might find a church home in some of the churches of the neighboring city. This being an undenominational Sunday-school, each one is induced to join the church of his personal preference.

The Treasurer reported the financial condition good, the running expenses being met as fast as they matured; although the expenses were considerably increased, yet the collections met them without any special effort. The envelope system in use was very satisfactory.

The following officers were elected:
Superintendent—E. L. Bonny.
Treasurer—G. W. Winans.
Secretary—Alfred Winans.
Organist—Miss Nettie J. Beeching.
Librarian—George Howard.

W. H. Rogers was re-elected trustee for three years.

After the naming of the different committees, the first annual meeting, showing a most prosperous year's work, was adjourned.

A Christian Endeavor society was recently formed among the members of the Washingtonville Sunday-school. Andrew Wilson was chosen President, and John Bickhell, Secretary. The question of joining the local and national societies will be taken up at the first business meeting. To the efforts of the Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, of Plainfield, and Henry Wise, much of the work of organization is to be credited.

The Rev. Mr. Dwight will preach in the Memorial chapel next Sunday morning.

Conducted by Mr. St. John of This City.

The spring meeting of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union will be held in the Presbyterian church at Cranford this evening, and it promises to be one of the most interesting conferences the Union has held.

The societies in Cranford are arranging for a handsome entertainment of the delegates. The societies of this city will be represented. The programme will be as follows:

7:45 p. m.—Song service; prayer service, conducted by E. St. John, of this city; words of welcome, Rev. George F. Greene, of Cranford; paper, "Junior Societies," Miss Alice Smith, of this city; paper, "Loyalty to the Church," J. H. MacConnell, of Cranford; music; paper, "Bible Study for Personal Culture," Mrs. J. Anderson Frazer, of Elizabeth; paper, "Christian Fellowship," W. E. Haverstick, Rahway; address, "Local Unions," State Secretary Halsey W. Hammond, of Boonton; closing prayer; benediction; Christian fellowship exemplified; adjournment.

The delegates from this city will leave on the 7:03 o'clock train.

The Borough Demands Protection.

The Prospect avenue crossing over the Jersey Central railroad at Dunellen, where the recent terrible killing of Willie Cannon and Daniel Liebe occurred, is protected by gates from early morning until nearly nine at night. The gates are in charge of Michael Donahue, one of the most faithful and trustworthy employes on the road. For nearly forty years he has served them, and all who have occasion to cross have heard his well known words of caution. Notwithstanding all this, the feeling against the company is intense, because there is no night watchman to take the place of the man on duty during the day. The indignation expressed will result in a request by the Board of Borough Commissioners to the company to right these wrongs or pay the penalty. No blame is attached to the engineer of the train which killed Cannon and Liebe. He is charged with the duty of making such time as is laid down for him in the time schedule, and he must do it or lose his place.

A Town With Five Railroads, Coal, Iron, Coke and Timber.

By some the South is thought to be over estimated as the coming industrial center This may be true of some localities, but when you go to Bristol, Virginia and Tennessee, and find five railroads already built and under actual construction, and three of these roads connected with coal and coke, and two with vast deposits of Bessemer iron ore, and all within two or three hours haul of each other, with immense virgin forest of almost every variety of timber. You can make no mistake in such a place, whether it be North, South, East, or West. It must come to the front. Bristol is not on paper, she now has everything enjoyed by most large cities except high taxes, and advertises herself elsewhere in THE PRESS.

FOREIGN ARMY NOTES

THE British canteen system has been adopted in the barracks of Germany, with a view to keeping the soldiers away from the liquor shops.

THE army of the pope for 1891 is made up as follows: Two generals, two colonels, a major, two captains and four lieutenants and sixty men. This number includes the famous Swiss legion.

THE Canadian militia department has decided to increase the capacity of the cartridge factory at Quebec, so that the Martini-Henry ammunition for Canadian use can be manufactured there.

DR. CORPUT, who had been charged by the Belgian government to examine the sanitary institutions of Germany, states in his report that the annual army death rate is in Germany, 3.97; in Belgium, 4.07; in France, 6, and in Austria-Hungary, 6.94 per cent.

TURKISH soldiers are very poor marksmen. Recent target contests in the Turkish army demonstrated the fact that not one soldier in twenty could hit a man at twenty paces. A target about four feet in diameter, placed thirty rods away, was hit on an average only once out of thirty shots.

EVERY French soldier will receive shortly from the ministry of war a package containing antiseptic cotton, bandages and two safety needles. He will carry the package with him into battle, so that if wounded the materials for dressing his injuries will be at hand for the field surgeon.

URUGUAY has reduced her standing army to one-fourth its former strength. Before New Year's the Uruguayan troops consisted of two infantry regiments of one thousand each and one artillery and one cavalry regiment of one thousand each. The artillery and cavalry have been abolished, and each of the infantry regiments has been cut down to five hundred men.

PROF. MOLLER, of Carlsruhe, has made a series of observations on the height of clouds, and finds that cirrus and cirro-stratus clouds have an average height of thirty thousand feet, while cumulus clouds range from four thousand or five thousand feet at their lower surfaces to sixteen thousand feet at their upper surfaces.

GRANT ALLEN, the clever English writer, has just received the extraordinary prize of five thousand pounds for a new story.

EDGAR FAWCETT is much opposed to the use of dialect in literature, and says that if he had occasion to put a rude Maine fisherman in a novel he would make him converse in classical periods.

I HAVE been a great sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breathe. Sometimes I could not sleep and had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm, and am using it freely; it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it, and with happy results in every case. It is the medicine above all others for catarrh and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety, and does all that is claimed for it. It is curing my deafness.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

Anna Dickinson's Recovery Predicted.

PHILADELPHIA, March 26.—Miss Susan Dickinson, sister of Anna Dickinson, says she has not the slightest doubt of her sister's recovery from the attack of nervous prostration. Letters from the attending physicians bring encouraging news. Miss Dickinson estimated that Anna has not by any means given up her intention of going on the stage.

Stock Exchange Will Close To-morrow.

NEW YORK, March 26.—The New York Stock Exchange will be closed to-morrow—Good Friday.

MISERY—HAPPINESS.

A Story Which Will Interest Thousands.

Happiness and misery are measured by the stomach.

Did you ever think of this?

The happy person is the one who eats well. The miserable person is the one who cannot eat, has no appetite, or is unable to digest his food well.

NO APPETITE—DISGUST FOR FOOD.

Did you ever know a good-natured dyspeptic?

On the contrary, are they not always irritable, nervous, cross blue, discouraged depressed in mind, always looking upon the dark side of everything, and allowing trifles to irritate and annoy them?

For good, wholesome geniality, for good-natured enjoyment of the world, for exalted aims and high ambitions, for all that makes life worth living, look to the person who eats well and has a good digestion and assimilation.

The human body, notwithstanding its intricacy, is a machine, and if any of its organs are out of order, the system languishes. GOOD HEALTH MEANS GOOD DIGESTION.

"Good digestion waits on appetite,
And health on both."

You, therefore, who suffer from Spring debility, loss of appetite, indigestion and dyspepsia, who cannot eat because food distresses you, who have risings of gas, faintness, sinking and gnawing at the pit of the stomach, swelling or bloating, who have malaria and are bilious, with dizzy, dull, feeling head, bad taste in the mouth mornings, and feel dispirited, lack your old-time energy, are depressed in mind and miserable in body, remember that it is your stomach and weakened nerves which cause all your difficulties.

WOULD EAT BUT FEARS THE FOOD WILL DISTRESS HIM.

If there is one thing written above another in the world's happiness, if there is one gift without which life is a wretchedness of blacks at misery, and with which all the blessings of life teeming with its million joys and pleasures, are at command, that gift is good digestion.

How to get it is the great question—so many things have been tried without avail. But there is one remedy which never fails, and that is that greatest of all stomach medicines Dr. Greene's Nervura. If you have not tried this wonderful remedy which so quickly and completely tones up the condition and regulates the action of the stomach and bowels, assists digestion and aids assimilation, do so at once, and good appetite, perfect digestion and sound health will be yours. It is Dr. Greene's Nervura, purely vegetable and harmless, and is for sale by all druggists at $1 per bottle.

Perfect Digestion by Dr. Greene's Nervura.

How Any One Can Have Good Digestion.

Close attention to business and excessive use of tobacco made my nerves very weak, and badly deranged my stomach. I had an extreme tired feeling, and could not eat or sleep naturally. I take pleasure in stating that Dr. Greene's Nervura has completely cured me.

JAMES FOSTER,
15 Dorrance St., Providence, R. I.

Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth St., New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

N. B. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write Dr. Greene about your case, and a carefully considered letter, fully explaining your disease and giving you a perfect understanding of all its symptoms will be returned, free of charge. 18 y eod

To THE CITIZENS OF PLAINFIELD—

TAKE NOTICE:

All property owners on the line of the proposed Plainfield Street railway, who are opposed to electric railroads, are respectfully invited to go to Newark on Friday, March 27, to inspect the workings of the Rapid Transit Street Railroad of that city, which is the same system and equipment that is to be given to the City of Plainfield, should we get the franchise.

A special train will be at your service, at the expense of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, leaving Plainfield at 1:30 P. M., and returning after you have looked over the Newark line.

It is earnestly hoped that all those property owners opposed to the Railway will be on hand, that we may have an opportunity to show them that electricity is the safest, least noisy and best way for propelling street cars.

THOMAS NEVINS, President,
Plainfield Street Railway Company.

A Perfect Success. 7

The Rev. A. Antoine of Refugio, Tex., writes: As far as I am able to judge, I think Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is a perfect success, for any one who has suffered from a most painful nervousness as I did. I feel now like myself again after taking the Tonic.

A Strong Proof.

ORTEZA, ONT., CANADA, JUNE, '88.

I was first attacked by epilepsy in November 1878; residing in New York I consulted the best physicians, but they could only arrest the disease, the honest ones told me then there was no cure for it—I was compelled to give up my occupation and return to Canada in 1879; since then I tried innumerable remedies and consulted some of the best physicians, but nothing benefited me until I began to use Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in September '88, since then I had not a single attack.

THE WOMAN OF FASHION.

She Is Wearing Pearls at Morning, Afternoon and Night.

The Rage for Jewelry Has Led to the Innovation of Colored Passementerie, Upon Tailor-Made Gowns—Miniature Fruits Seen in Pins.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

To be quite fashionable now, one must wear a string of pearls morning, noon, evening and night.

At morning they are considered very becoming above a dainty breakfast gown, cut just low enough in the neck to show the fair throat of the wearer. At noon they are fashionable as a heading to the high-collared walking dress which is worn upon all street occasions, save calling and theater going. At evening nothing could be lovelier upon the skin than the beautiful pearls outlining the bodice, or drawn high around the throat. And at night when one would naturally suppose that the pearls had done their work for the day, they are taken off only while their owner arranges her tresses for the night, and are again put securely on to be worn till morning. Jewelers say that pearls are preserved by the wearing and that constant friction and exposure are necessary to keep the pure, clear, creamy tint which is the admiration of pearl lovers.

Elaborate coiffures are the rule rather than those of severe plainness. In copying the Greek and Empire styles, the coil should be always so arranged that it ends in a point at the back of the head. This is done by means of puffs and curls, so constructed that a mass of curls tops the coiffure, and from the center of the mass peeps one curl in saucy prominence.

On the forehead the curls are brought low down in the center, or if the forehead is low, the curls are massed on each side. Strings of pearls and hair pins with brilliant tops are fastened around the coil, strung through it, or stuck into its depths.

Jewelry, brilliant passementerie and colored stones are seen in what would, a year ago, have been considered vulgar profusion. Tailor-made gowns, always remarkable for their absolute simplicity, are now trimmed around the bottom of the skirt with gold or silver braiding. Metal clasps and a girdle are upon the bodice. Very deep passementerie, profusely studded with colored stones, trims the hem of many tailor-made skirts and shoulder pieces of the passementerie are brought down the sides of the bodice zouave-like to meet the passementerie girdle.

A very forest of fancy pins is seen. Two are used to fasten the high collar. One is a heart composed of three moonstones in a cut silver setting. The other is a flower, a cut silver daisy, perhaps, or a pansy in amethysts and gold. Gold and silver are frequently intercommingled. A gold pronged pin is seen with silver head. Amber and gold are still a favorite combination.

All the small vegetables, such as peas in the pod, beans, tiny lettuce leaves, small beets and miniature sprays of celery stalks with fluted gold tops are seen upon hats and at the necks of gowns.

There are many people who consider such display vulgar, and who will wear nothing of the sort even in the house, much less upon the street, but even these are yielding to the craze for brilliants to such an extent as to permit themselves to wear jeweled flowers, lily-of-the-valley roses in tinted coral and tiny forget-me-nots.

A certain headdress seen at the Astor-Willing wedding was composed of a crown of jeweled forget-me-nots. It was very high in front, towering above the front of the head at least four inches. It gradually tapered toward the back ending in a single spray of forget-me-nots back of the coiffure.

Pale green and pink make a favorite combination. A beautiful evening gown shows a pale pink ground upon which are green chestnuts outlined in their burrs. From the point of the low bodice down to the bottom of the skirt extends a panel of green velvet which tapers in at the waist, becoming scarcely more than half an inch wide. Jeweled passementerie extends down each side of the velvet panel. The sleeves are of chiffon caught into puffs with bands of passementerie.

A French evening gown lately imported is white satin in material trimmed with white feather trimming to four deep vandykes. Feather trimming is used around the neck, upon the elbow sleeves and it outlines the pointed bodice and panier draperies. The paniers and the train are in white figured armure royale. White net heavily beaded with cut silver beads is draped over the white satin bodice. The backs of the gloves are stitched with silver cord. A silver ornament is used in the coiffure.

An exquisitely pretty evening bodice is of pink satin. Heavy brocade is fastened at one shoulder, forming a puff, from whence it is brought down to make a drapery at front and back. The edge of the drapery is trimmed with sable. On the other shoulder no puffing is allowed, but, in place of it, are two white satin ribbons snugly drawn over the shoulder. Across the upper arm is a jeweled amulet and below it is a band and bow of white satin ribbon. An enormous pink feather fan with silver sticks accompanies this bodice and a silver comb with amber top. The skirt is simply made of pink satin with sable band and brocaded train.

Lace is the prevailing trimming of the day. It is seen upon toques, it forms the basis of tiny muffs, it adorns glove tops and is used for flounces upon the skirts and bodices of street dresses.

An old rose street gown had a deep flounce of black net lace around the bottom of the skirt. The flounce was cut in points in palm leaf design. Another gown, a French gray, was trimmed with narrow black lace box plaited closely around the skirt.

Chiffon and bengaline are dividing honors in wedding gowns. At the Astor-Willing wedding more than twenty toilettes were either draped or composed of the former, while bengaline was almost as poplar.

A wedding gown recently ordered is to have a train and bodice of bengaline. The front of the skirt is to be of white net embroidered in silver and pearls. The pointed bodice front will be composed of the embroidery as will also the high collar.

Crepe d' ete makes pretty soft evening gowns. It is again the fashion to wear thin materials over colored underskirts. A full crepe d' ete bodice is belted in at the waist with long, flowing ribbons. These fall over a crepe d' ete skirt trimmed with valenciennes lace. This skirt is slightly tucked up at one side, showing a heliotrope silk underskirt with silk ruching.

Old rose crepon makes a beautiful tea gown. The front of the skirt may be cut as severely plain as the skirts of our most approved walking dresses. The back must be entrain. The bodice is laid in accordion plaits from the neck to the waist. Here it is caught with an elastic, making the waist slightly blouse. An applique of passementerie trims the front of the waist and a band of it extends the full length of the sleeves, which are long and puffed to the wrist. Thick white ruching edged with pink is at the neck and sleeves.

A high Louis XIII. jacket is more appropriate for the sharp March winds than the open-necked Louis XIV. coat now so fashionable for dinner and calling gowns. A beautiful dark brown

EVENING BODICE.

Louis XIII. jacket has a high otter collar and is edged with fur down the front, upon the pockets and on the cuffs. It is lined with old gold satin, glimpses of which peep forth from beneath the long-skirted bodice as the owner walks.

Music of the Man Eaters.

The natives of the New Hebrides, who are still addicted to the practice of anthropophagy, form a curious study. Nothing is more curious than their musical instruments. These consist of hollow tree trunks, containing apertures connected by a vertical slit. These trunks are ornamented at the upper part with sculptures representing heads, feet, war clubs and ships. By striking each of them with a stick the natives produce sounds resembling those of the tom-tom. They perform their dances to the sound of these instruments, after having besmeared their faces with red and black. They have also three other musical instruments: a sort of trumpet made of a shell perforated at the side or extremity; a syrinx with six or seven or eight pipes, from which they sometimes obtain harmonious sounds; and a long flute perforated at the lower extremity and consisting of a single piece of bamboo with three holes and a mouthpiece. These instruments are used only within doors to amuse children.—N. Y. Ledger.

TOY FLYING MACHINES.

Explanations Which Will Enable Any Bright Boy to Make Them.

A feather flying machine is a very simple thing to make; but it will only fly up, as there are no wings or aeroplanes to support it when flying horizontally. The motive power is furnished by a whalebone bow, which causes the aerial screws to revolve as it unbends.

For this model you will need eight feathers. They should be carefully selected of the same size and shape. The best are good stiff wing feathers. From them form two screws by sticking them in corks, as in Fig. 1; one must be arranged to revolve to the right, the other to the left, because the bowstring turns the upper in one direction, while the reaction tends to turn the lower in the opposite way, and if both screws were right-handed or left-handed they would work against each other, and produce little or no effect.

The upper screw is fastened to the spindle, while the lower is attached to the bow. The spindle turns in a hole bored through the bow and into the cork; it moves freely because it simply rests in the hole, and is not fastened to the lower screw. The bowstring is tied to the spindle near the top.

When finished, hold the lower screw in one hand, and turn the upper with the other until the string is all wound on the spindle. Now let go the upper screw, and toss it gently into the air, when it will fly until the bow straightens.

The aerial screw (Fig. 2) is like the feather machine, but the bow is replaced by a strong rubber band tightly twisted. The backbone is made from two knitting-needles. The cross-pieces are made of thin brass brazed to the needles; that is, fastened with solder melted in a candle flame, and then allowed to cool. The main ribs of the screw blades are made from several light bamboo strips (from a broken Japanese fan) lashed together, and the cross ribs of short pieces of the strips bound to the main rib. The whole blade is covered with the Japanese paper of the kind that is used for table napkins, sewed on with a fine needle and white thread.

The manner of winding up the machine is similar to that for the feather model. This contrivance flies much higher and steadier than the latter.—Harper's Young People.

TIRED OF CHURNING.

Bose Gave Up His Home Rather Than Make a Slave of Himself.

Mr. Brown had a large, strong dog named Bose. Bose ate so much that Mrs. Brown said he ought to be made to work so as to pay for a part of what he cost them in the way of food.

Bose was a kind dog, and they all were fond of him, and at first they thought it great fun to see him churn, and they used to give him meat and bread when he was through. For Mr. Brown had fixed a tread-mill in such a way that Bose could churn the cream, and on Tuesdays he did the churning.

At last Bose grew tired of the churn. Each week when the time came for him to churn, he could not be found. He would hide; and no one could find him until the next day. Then Mrs. Brown changed the time from week to week so that he could not know on which day to keep out of sight.

One day he went to the field to see them cut the grass. At noon Mr. Brown said: "Come, Bose, come home and churn." He went on to the bars at the end of the lane, and Bose was walking near him.

When Mr. Brown was half-way up the hill, he turned round and looked. Bose had run off as fast as he could go, and now quite out of sight.

Bose has not been seen since, and we think he made up his mind that he would churn no more, though he must lose his nice home by the means. This story is true, for Mr. Brown lived in the next house to us, and Bose used to play with me.—Ellen S. Eastman, in Our Little Men and Women.

"No More Doctors for Me."

"They said I was consumptive, sent me to Florida, told me to keep quiet, no excitement, and no tennis. Just think of it. One day I found a little book called 'Guide to Health,' by Lydia E. Pinkham, and in it I found out what ailed me. So I wrote to her, got a lovely reply; she told me just what to do, and I am in splendid health now. She informed me that she likes to receive such letters of confidence, as they appeal to her as a mother, and how glad she is to have the records of her life's experience among women made available to all women. These records are the largest in the world, and contain facts that cannot be found elsewhere. Thus will her noble work be perpetuated."

"Why, Are You Sick?"

"I know precisely how you feel; it is that nervous, irritable feeling, your back troubles you, and when you try to read a little your head aches. Isn't that so? I knew it. Oh, bother the doctor! Get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and take it faithfully as I have done. I've been through this thing myself, but am never troubled now."

"I am Sure it Would Help Them."

Thousands of delicate young ladies, employed in fashionable dry goods, millinery, and other stores, others in mills, factories, workshops, etc., where through the long day they are constantly on their feet. Among this class some of the worst cases of female diseases occur, and when their ill-health becomes apparent they are at once discharged.

The society girls who are whirled along in the excitement of fashionable life, and who overlook those minor ailments, that if not checked are death to health and beauty.

Actresses, singers, and others of the profession, do not always think; they rush into the tide of popularity regardless of all save fame and fortune. How often we read of some favorite actress, "Ill in London, nervous prostration," etc.

Prudent women, who best understand their ailments, find in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a remedy for all those distressing ills that require prompt and effective treatment as a guaranty to good health.

THE GREAT MYSTERY

Student Nuss Talks About Ruttinger and Wright.

CAME WITH THEM FROM EUROPE

He Thinks an Elderly Gentleman on the Steamer Was the Murderer.

He Was a Vindictive Looking Fellow with an Evil Eye—The Student Says He Can Identify the Bodies as Well as the Mysterious Stranger if He Has an Opportunity to Do so.

PITTSBURG, March 27.—Some light is thrown upon the mysteries surrounding Carl Ruttinger, the German, and William Wright, his English brother-in-law, by Joseph Nuss, a student for the priesthood under the tutelage of the Capuchin Fathers at St. Fidelis College, in the Monastery of St. Mary, in Butler county. Nuss was a companion of Ruttinger and Wright during the voyage to America. He was interviewed in the monastery by a reporter, and he says his acquaintance with Ruttinger and Wright began and ended with the voyage. They discussed their business affairs generally in common. Ruttinger and Wright told Nuss that they intended purchasing a farm in Ohio from an elderly gentleman, who occupied a first-class passage on the vessel and spent a good deal of his time with the supposed murdered men. Nuss did not learn this gentleman's name, but describes him as a vindictive looking fellow, with an evil eye.

Nuss was terribly in earnest in his assertions and belief that this man committed the murder of both Ruttinger and Wright. He declares a willingness and ability to positively identify the bodies, as well as the mysterious stranger, if he has the opportunity.

In telling his story Nuss became greatly excited, leaving the impression that he was concealing important facts in the case. Nuss thinks that the stranger, knowing that Ruttinger and Wright expected to receive a large sum of money in New York, with which to buy his (the stranger's) Ohio farm, followed up the men and killed them.

STARTLING CONSPIRACY.

A Notorious Woman Put Forward to Obtain Possession of Millions.

NEW YORK, March 27.—An infamous conspiracy has just been exposed that baffled the keenest legal and detective minds in the metropolis.

Loring A. Robinson, a leather merchant, who had in thirty years of business life in the "Swamp" a massed a fortune variously estimated at from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000, died intestate very suddenly in Brooklyn in October last.

When the heirs applied for letters of administration their petition was blocked by the appearance on the scene of an alleged widow, who was quite a stranger in the family circle of Mr. Robertson's many sorrowing relatives.

A bombshell in an ambuscade could not have occasioned greater consternation. While there was no evidence of a ceremony having taken place, the "widow" claimed that a verbal contract and mutual agreement, which in the eye of the New York State law are binding, united them. Furthermore she bore the name of a woman with whom the millionaire merchant had been acquainted years ago—the name of a skeleton in the bachelor closet.

The identity of the woman has been established by a reporter.

Helen Brewer, alias Cassie Ellis, alias Cassie Brooks, alias Mrs. Loring A. Robertson, is now known to her friends as Lizzie, alias Florence Raymond. She lives on West 16th street under the protection, it is said, of Tom Gould. Helen or Cassie or Forence or whatever her name may be is a fair sample of the women of her class. She is a bleached blonde, with a naturally clear complexion, clear skin and good color. At home in a negligee costume, she looks 35; on the street she appears to be younger.

The woman's drunken boastfulness in a low resort furnished the clew that solved the mystery, and she admits that the "job was put up" by several of her friends. Arrests are expected.

Envoy O'Kelly's Secret Mission.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 27.—Parnellite Envoy O'Kelly held another secret conference with representatives of the Lincoln branch of the Irish National League. As was the case yesterday, President Fitzgerald declines to give any information regarding the consultation. There is a rumor current that O'Kelly will leave for New York to-night to confer with his colleagues, and that he will immediately thereafter return to Lincoln. O'Kelly still refuses to be interviewed regarding his mission to Lincoln.

Bait Licenses Free.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., March 27.—Oakes & Foster of this city have been notified by the United States Consul at St. Johns, N. F., that bait licenses will be free to American vessels this year.

RESCUED FROM THE RIVER.

A Fashionably Dressed Man Found Floating with His Throat Cut.

BOSTON, March 27.—About 6 a. m. a man of the name of Hoyt took a boat and rescued a man whom he saw floating in the Charles River. Around the throat was a towel, which covered a cut about three inches deep. He looked intelligent and well bred and was fashionably dressed, but his pockets contained nothing but 15 cents.

He was taken to the Massachusetts Hospital, where he gave his name as Martin Clancy and age as 26, and said he belonged at No. 110 Broadway, New York. His story was that he had taken a room in a Leverett street house, where an attempt was made to relieve him of over $100, and that his assailants cut his throat, and, taking him to a bridge, they threw him into the river. He refused to give the number of the Leverett street house.

Finally, he confessed that he came here looking for work, and being unable to find employment, he cut his own throat and jumped into the river, with the intention of committing suicide.

DECKER NOT EXTRADITED.

Mr. Bulkeley's Right to Act as Governor of Connecticut Brought Up.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 27.—Gov. Bulkeley referred to the State Attorney the question of signing the papers for the extradition of Ball Player Decker, for whom the Governor of Pennsylvania has made a requisition. Mr. Doolittle is South, however, so that no action has been taken.

Decker's attorney will take the case to the Supreme Court on habeas corpus proceedings. The question of Mr. Bulkeley's right to act as Governor seems certain to come into court before the case is settled.

It is reported that the papers were first offered by the Pennsylvania official to Judge Morris, but he refused to act as Governor in signing the necessary warrant.

THE SCHMIDT MURDER TRIAL.

The Neck of the Dead Woman Produced in Court.

MEDIA, Pa., March 27.—The trial of Mrs. Caroline Schmidt for the murder of her sister, Emma Pfitzenmeyer, was continued to-day.

Dr. Keen, professor of anatomy, of Philadelphia, produced the neck of the dead woman and testified that the fatal stabs could have been self-inflicted.

This contradicts the expert testimony of the prosecution, and is a strong point for the defense, as it sustains the theory of suicide.

Cheap Railroad Fares to New York.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The damage done to Manhattan Beach and the other seaside resorts in this vicinity during the winter storms have already been partially repaired, and improvement are fast being completed. The hotel managers and other interested people are counting on an early season and will be ready when the fine weather arrives. Theater managers in this city say that the attendance of out of town people at the plays this season has been greater than ever before. This they attribute to better railroad facilities, more trains and excursion fares. One road entering this city, the New York, Ontario & Western, has arranged an excursion rate, selling ten-day tickets to New York and back for the price of fare one way, a rather unique plan to induce travel in April.

Suit for $10,000,000.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Brown, Howard & Co. and other contractors have taken preliminary steps to bring suits against New York city for $10,000,000, which sum they claim was wrongfully withheld from them on false plans of poor work on the new Croton aqueduct. Colonel R. G. Ingersoll, Wheeler H. Peckham and Walston H. Brown are among the attorneys for the plaintiffs, while James C. Carter, Elihu Root and Austin C. Fox will assist the Corporation Counsel in defending the interests of the city.

Why He Shot Himself.

BORDENTOWN, N. J., March 27.—The effects of the late Samuel N. Rockhill, who committed suicide by shooting recently, were examined at the Bordentown bank and no assets whatever were to be found. Mystic Lodge, No. 46, I. O. O. F., will lose $2,000, Encampment No. 16, I. O. O. F., $500, and Mrs. Clement Rockhill, mother of the deceased, loses $1,000.

The Outrage to Be Investigated.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The Yorkville Police Court has issued a subpœna for one Meyer, an intelligence office keeper at No. 26 Greenwich street, who is said to have sent many Bohemians to Virginia, where they were treated like slaves in railroad camps. The court will endeavor to learn who is the responsible party for this alleged outrage.

No Action on Gov. Hill's Requisition.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 27.—No action has yet been taken on Gov. Hill's requisition for James Hughes, who is wanted at Rochester on a charge of extortion. John L. Butler, who went to Albany to lay before Gov. Hill the facts of the alleged conspiracy against the leaders of the strike, has returned. The result of his mission has not been learned, as Gov.

THE STRIKE BROKEN

An Unexpected Move Made by the Coke Operators.

EXCITEMENT IN THE REGION.

Labor Officials Making Strong Efforts to Hold Their Men in Line.

The Men Working at One Plant Raided and Routed—A Sheriff and His Deputies Armed with Winchesters Guarding the Works—Labor Leaders on Trial the Second Time for Conspiracy.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., March 27.—The unexpected move of the coke operators has created great excitement throughout the region. The operators state that the efforts to start are more successful than expected; that work has been resumed at 15 important plants. The reports, however, are conflicting.

The labor officials condemn the proposed scale and are making the most strenuous efforts to counteract the move made by the operators.

Last evening the men working at Leisenring No. 3 plant were raided and routed by a large number of strikers. Stones and clubs were used. One man is said to have been seriously hurt. Sheriff McCormick, with a large number of deputies armed with Winchesters, is now at the works.

A Uniontown special says the strike in the southern end of the coke region is practically broken. Work has been resumed at several of the largest plants in this district.

Labor Leaders on Trial for Conspiracy.

MONTPELIER, Vt., March 27.—The criminal action of the State vs. J. B. Dyer, Patrick Morrison, Frank Morrill and E. H. Sherburne, officers and members of the Granite Cutters' Union, indicted for conspiring to prevent Jacob McClure, a non-union granite cutter, from obtaining work, has begun here. On a former trial the jury disagreed as to these four and acquitted five others who were indicted with them. Eminent counsel are engaged, and the trial arouses great interest in labor circles all over the country.

FAVA IN SECLUSION.

The Italian Minister Is Denying Himself to All Callers.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Two men who are much sought after these days and very hard to get at are Secretary Blaine and the Italian Minister. The latter has been in hiding ever since the massacre of the Mafians in New Orleans. Many calls are made in the course of the day at the house, corner of Eighteenth and H streets, where the Minister has his rooms, but all receive this information:

"The Minister is not at home. Don't know where he could be found. Don't know when he went out and have no idea when to expect him back."

The Minister realizes that it would be difficult for him to discuss the New Orleans affair in public without running the risk of incurring the displeasure of his own or of the American government, or of that potent and independent sovereignty, the Mafia. He therefore seeks safety in seclusion and denies himself to all callers.

He sent a note to Secretary Blaine, hardly acknowledging the receipt of the copy of Gov. Nicholl's letter to the Secretary. He says nothing at all about whether the letter affords him satisfaction or the contrary. He will probably follow Gov. Nicholl's example and make a careful survey of the situation before he formulates his final specific demand for reparation.

Payment of War Claims.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Secretary Foster had issued a circular letter reciting the act of Congress providing for the payment of claims for stores and supplies taken and used by the United States army during the Civil War. "Settlement of these claims," says Secretary Foster, "will be made by the Treasury Department upon receipts of the certificates of the Attorney General or the Court of Claims, as provided in the foregoing, and drafts in payment thereof will be delivered to the respective claimants in person or to their executors or administrators, or they will be mailed to their actual postoffice address."

Returned a Lump of Gold.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—A lump of gold has been received at the Treasury Department from New York and placed to the credit of the conscience fund. Accompanying it was a note, signed "Honor," which stated that the lump of gold had been left in "Honor's" possession for some time, but as he believed the gold belonged to the government he now turned it over to the Treasury. The lump of gold will be sent to the mint, its value ascertained and "Honor" informed through the press of its value.

Sorry He Did Not Commit Murder.

NEWARK, N. J., March 27.—William S. Bellows, who shot and seriously wounded Officer William Hill, while being placed under arrest for larceny, was sentenced to 13 years in State prison. Bellows exhibited indifference to his fate and remarked in court that he was sorry that he had not killed Hill, even if he had hanged for it.

A Young Girl Kills Herself.

HAZLETON, Pa., March 27.—Millie Carpece, 16 years old, committed suicide at her home in Foundryville at noon by shooting herself. The parents of the girl wanted her to marry an aged suitor, but the girl was in love with a young man, a neighbor, and took the matter so much to heart that she killed herself.

Firebug Miller's Work.

BROOKLYN, March 27.—There is evidence tending to show that Miller, the firebug, caused the burning of the Brooklyn Institute some time ago.

INSANE THROUGH GRIEF.

A Poor Mad Woman Tries to Kill Herself in a Lockup.

PITTSBURG, March 27.—Mrs. Jonn Robbine attempted to hang herself in the lockup at Etna, across the river from Pittsburg, last night, while insane.

Her case is a peculiarly sad one. For the past month she has been nursing her husband, who is dying of cancer. She stood the strain day and night until Monday of this week, when she became a raving maniac and rushed wildly through the streets, to the terror of women and children.

In her frenzy she fancied the doctors were killing her husband. She visited the offices of two physicians, wrecked the furniture and almost set fire to one while burning Dr. Spear's silk hat. She finally brought up in a drug store and was arrested. Refused admittance to either jail or poorhouse, and failing to secure the necessary papers to send her to an insane asylum, she has been lodged in the lockup, where she she threatens to end her life at the first opportunity.

TWO DIE ON THE GALLOWS.

Murderers Moss and Stangley Executed in Pennsylvania.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 27.—George Washington Moss was hanged in the prison at 10:18. The crime for which he was executed was the brutal murder of his wife. Moss walked to the gallows with a firm step and a smiling face. He said: "God does not hold me responsible for the murder of my wife, and I do not hold myself responsible. I die like a soldier, with a smile." The fall broke Moss' neck and he died instantly.

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa., March 27.—Oliver William Stangley was hanged here at 11:04 for the murder of Mrs. Sibilla Walber, with whom he boarded. He went to the gallows with faltering steps, being very weak from the effects of disease. It was necessary to assist him up the steps. He said he was willing to die and expected to meet his brothers and sisters in Heaven. He was cut down twenty-two minutes after the drop fell.

SLAVIN'S BOLD CHALLENGE.

Coming Here Next Month and Offers to Fight Any Man in America.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Frank P. Slavin has authorized Billy Madden to match him to fight or box any man in America for any amount from $2,500 to $10,000 a side and for the championship of the world.

He also requests Madden to announce that he will give John L. Sullivan $5,000, if he fails to stop, conquer or knock him out in five rounds. He also agrees to box either Kilrain, Corbett, Jackson or Godfrey, and to forfeit a large amount of money, if he fails to stop either of them in a stipulated number of rounds.

Slavin will arrive here next month with Charley Mitchell, and he stands ready to deposit $5,000 to back up the foregoing propositions. His coming is likely to create a furore in pugilistic circles.

Slowly Crushed to Death.

ANSONIA, Conn., March 27.—Horatio A. Clark, a machinist at Farrell & Sons' foundry, was slowly crushed to death last evening by a planing machine, having been caught between the carriage and the frame. His body was terribly mangled. He had sufficient presence of mind to turn of the power when he felt the pressure, but it did not save him. He leaves a widow and two daughters.

Bishop Ryan's Friends Alarmed.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 27.—The illness of Bishop Ryan in Washington is alarming his friends here, and Vicar General Gleason and Father Cronin are preparing to go South to the Bishop's bedside. Dr. Cronin is making preparations to leave Buffalo at a moment's notice, in case his services are needed. Bishop Ryan was ill here for a long time before his departure.

A Civil Rights Fund.

PHILADELPHIA, March 27.—John Lewis, a colored lawyer of this city, who died recently leaving an estate valued at $100,000, bequeathed a portion of this as a fund for the formation of a protective bureau of civil rights, the object of which is to secure to colored citizens their civil rights as applicable to all other classes of American citizens.

Lima Oil in Place of Natural Gas.

PITTSBURG, March 27.—Lima oil is being used successfully in a number of Pittsburg mills and factories. Rolling mill owners favor it because it does not oxidize the iron, and for that reason it is thought that natural gas will soon be superseded by it. The oil is shipped from the field in tank cars, and a movement is on foot to build a pipe line to this city.

HOT WORK AT SLIGO

Trouble Expected To-Morrow and Troops in Readiness.

DANGERS OF PARNELL'S TOUR.

Groups of the Opposing Factions Hoot Him at Every Turn.

He Says If He is Deafeated in This Contest He Will Still Continue the Fight. Healy Issues Another Challenge and Denounces Parnell—Priests Active in the Campaign.

DUBLIN, March 27.—The excitement in Sligo over the election is so great that the officials have applied to the military authorities for cavalry to be held in readiness for a possible outbreak. The city officials are apprehensive that serious rioting will occur to-morrow and Sunday.

The annoyances and dangers of Mr. Parnell's tour of the Sligo Parliamentary district are increasing. Groups of the opposing faction hoot him at every turn, and wrangles and fights are the outcome of these demonstrations are frequent. The greater part of the anti-Parnell feeling is incited by the priesthood, who are especially active in the outlying districts and have personally led the opposing crowds.

Incidents of the Campaign.

DUBLIN, March 27.—Parnell, speaking from a hotel window at Sligo, said that if defeated there he would never abandon the fight.

Some McCarthyites procured a fire escape and wheeled it through the streets to the hotel window, indulging in considerable merriment and broad allusions to the O'Shea case.

The police did not interfere except to prevent disorder, and some of them laughed at the spectacle, to which Parnell paid no attention. The fire escape was then wheeled back amid jeering.

Maurice Healy, speaking at Sligo, again challenged Parnell to resign. He said that Parnell's recent statements on the subject of his resignation were mere excuses, and that he had proved himself a coward and a sneak, as well as a libertine and liar.

A DISAPPOINTED MAIDEN.

She Went West to Get Married But Returned Home Crestfallen.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., March 27.—An advertisement inserted in a Chicago matrimonial publication by Harry F. Fleming, a banker of Spokane Falls, caught the eye of Miss Grace Glasgow, of Marklesburg. She is a petite and comely brunette, of 20 summers, and is the eldest daughter of Professor Samuel L. Glasgow, a leading educator and prominent figure in Huntingdon county politics.

A correspondence ensued, photographs were exchanged and Miss Glasgow finally accepted a proposal of marriage from her Western wooer. The gallant Fleming furnished her with a through ticket and an abundance of money for traveling expenses, and Miss Glasgow left quietly several days ago for Spokane Falls.

Last night she returned unexpectedly to her parents' home, still unmarried and weary and dejected over her fruitless journey. She had met her fiance, but his material and physical charms were not in accordance with his written and pictured representations of himself, and so the disappointed damsel nullified the engagement and returned home.

Canadian Liberal Premier and His Efforts Corrupt and Scandalous.

OTTAWA, March 27.—It is announced that when Parliament meets the Liberals will introduce a resolution denouncing the conduct of Sir Charles Tupper, High Commissioner, during the recent election campaign, particular reference being made to his attempt to purchase the support of the Grand Trunk Railroad as discreditable, corrupt and scandalous.

UNDERTAKERS RUSHED.

The Death Roll in Chicago Will Reach 1,000 This Week.

CHICAGO, March 27.—The grip and the pulmonary diseases which follow in its train are doing terrible work in Chicago. The death rate this week will be much heavier than even the startling record of last.

Up to midnight last night Register Tomlinson, at the City Hall, had received 700 certificates of death for the first five days. The work of recording in the Bureau of Vital Statistics has increased so much that an extra force of clerks has been put on.

Undertakers are rushed from dawn till dark, and the supply of coffins is giving out, although the manufacturers are overtaxing their resources to keep up with the increased demand.

The death rate last week was 804, which was about 100 more than any one week during the grip epidemic a year ago. If the rate for the last few days continues until Saturday night, nearly 1,000 persons will have perished.

ELECTRICITY ATTRACTS PATRONS.

Figures and Facts Presented by Mr. Milliken That Prove the Trolley Street Railway is the Most Popular, Economical and Safest in the World.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It was my privilege recently to listen to the careful and conservative advice of His Honor, Mayor Gilbert, to the Council in respect to their intended action on the trolley ordinance, and I doubt not every reasonable man in our city will heartily agree with him that owing to the importance of the subject, the wisest course in the matter of granting any franchise is first, to see that the community is fully informed of the merits and demerits of the proposed system, to ascertain carefully the drift of such opinion so formed, and then to see that the people's will is carried out to the letter.

It is not my purpose or province to draw conclusions or express opinions, but citing certain general facts bearing on the subject, leaving the people to draw their own inferences, and thus securing a more correct conclusion by them, is simply fulfilling a duty which any citizen owes his neighbors.

It is admittedly an open question whether today the traffic in our city would support an ordinary horse car line, even were the service rendered acceptable to the people.

I have here the annual report for 1890 of the largest horse car company of one of the largest cities in our State. The cost of their enterprise amounts to over $180,000. Last year their running expenses exceeded their receipts $5,770.64. Their balance sheets for a term of years show even in their city, which is very much larger than our own, they cannot conduct their business at a profit. They are now considering the use of the trolley system to enable them to cut down expenses sufficiently at least to prevent actual annual loss.

From a recent annual report of the general manager of an extensive system of street car lines, including both horse and trolley lines, it is shown that the proportion of total operating expenses to the earnings was for horse roads 89.3 per cent. and for trolley roads 85.35 per cent.; the average cost per passenger on the horse lines being 4.48 cents and on the trolley line 4.28 cents. It is a curious fact often noted in connection with the trolley system that the introduction of electricity increases in a surprising amount the number of passengers carried. It is possible to run the cars on less headway, that is more frequently, at less expense, and it would seem also that the electric roads are quite popular in the general sense of the term. Be the reasons for the increase of traffic on the same lines what they may, the experience of roads having made the change is in this particular uncontroverted. This, of course, is not only some testimony in favor of the electric car, but also a very considerable factor in the question of profits to the company.

The experience of other cities is, of course, the most valuable data obtainable. Within the last three years, starting at Richmond, Va., some 256 different lines of trolley road are now in operation, and were there not very weighty advantages in favor of this system, it is hardly reasonable to suppose that the substitution, (as it is in most of the above cases,) would have been so enormus; in fact, the growth of the system is one of the most remarkable industrial features at the present time, and instances are rare where practically a new department of enterprise has grown in such a short time to such enormous proportions.

Cities much larger than our own and municipalities presumably as careful in these matters as our own, have granted trolley franchises for literally thousands of miles of streets; trolley franchises having been granted, exclusive of many other towns of less size, in cities as follows: St. Louis, Pittsburg, Denver, San Francisco, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Buffalo, Rochester, Cleveland, Syracuse, Boston, Washington, Baltimore, (granted last night) Philadelphia, New York city, (annexed district) Springfield, Albany, not to mention others. In St. Paul and Minneapolis there are over 80 miles and in Buffalo 110 miles alone of overhead trolley lines now in process of construction and operation.

It is a matter of note that in New England, and in those parts of the country long settled, where franchises are more jealously guarded, the trolley system shows even a larger percentage of adoption than in the newer and presumably less careful localities.

The danger elements in overhead electric traction are being rapidly dissipated along with increasing familiarity and experience. There is no instance of a person being killed or seriously injured by a 500 volt current, which is the voltage adopted as standard on all traction lines. As stated by Capt. Griffin recently in an address at Boston, "of the 1,467 deaths from violence in New York city last year only nine were due to electricity." If electricity is dangerous what shall we say of cars and engines, stair-ways, wagons or gas, responsible for the great bulk of the above total. In like manner in Boston, as shown by the Board of Health reports, the total deaths from casualities aggregated 399. Not a single death was recorded due to electricity. In New England there are 175 central lighting stations having been in operation from one to ten years. Since their establishment the total number of deaths have been but five.

A great deal has been said regarding the unsightliness of poles and overhead wires. It would be idle to deny the force of this argument up to a certain degree and beyond this not much is gained in the discussion of matters purely of taste. It is proper to point out, however, that if light and ornamental metal poles are used, painted a dark green, as in Buffalo, they are at least less conspicuous than the ordinary wooden poles now placed in our streets, and it is hardly a question of adding to the present disfigurement as such poles could be readily arranged to carry many of the wires now up, thus practically abating in a measure the source of present complaint.

It has been recently suggested that perhaps it would be better for our city to adopt the cable system, which was so much in vogue four or five years ago, and which at one time promised to be the coming system. You published yesterday a letter written by a friend of mine who has had the charge of a cable road for some years past in the city of Grand Rapids. It is proper to state that his company is before the councils at Grand Rapids for an ordinance allowing them to use the trolley system, and if obtained they will abandon their cable road, which has cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. The chief reason for the use of cable traction is found in the existence of heavy grades of which we have none on the route in question. I have not got time to get last year's census, but in 1880 Grand Rapids was credited with a population of 32,016. You can draw your own inferences from this fact and his letter which speak better than I can as to what prospect there would be for a paying cable road in our city. The cable road in their city is practically straight as compared with the many turns and loops laid out in the ordinance now before our council.

Very much the same objections as to original cost have been shown to exist with the conduit system for electric roads. There have been three laid in this country up to date: one of which has never been run, another is abandoned and the third is running in a desultory sort of way, neither satisfactory nor economical. The first cost is something that would put it out of reach of our city in any event as the conduit is very expensive to build and when built proves impracticable to run, owing to the questions of drainage and insulation.

But one system remains to consider: that of the storage or secondary battery system, which is admittedly an ideal road with the grave disadvantages of many other ideals, i. e. that it is out of present reach, so far as human knowledge can compass the question. It is an axiom in electrical circles that the man who can invent a practical storage battery, free from the vital objections which obtain with those so-called batteries now on the market, will make his everlasting fortune. The best evidence in regard to the practicability of this system at the present time of invention if found in the acknowledged fact that no one single storage battery car has ever been sold to any street railway company in this country. Briefly, the paramount objections to this system are three: First, the great weight of the batteries; second, the lack of reserve power in emergencies, and third, the cost of operation. A storage battery car weighs from seven tons upwards. The ordinary motor car will weigh seven to eight thousand pounds, or say one-half the above. These heavy cars are totally helpless with snow or ice on the tracks, even in New York city, where a few are being run in an intermittent way at the expense of the battery people as an experiment. What they will do, or rather what they would fail to do after a heavy snow storm in our city can be readily imagined. The representative of one storage battery motor advised me to-day that the best they could say at present in favor of any motor storage battery car was that it would cost two to two-and-a-half times the expense of horse traction on lines with the most favorable conditions of traffic for economical operation. In general, the best authorities all seem to concur in the opinion that it requires, roughly speaking, nearly twice as much power per unit of useful work done with the storage battery system than it does with the direct distribution system, the dead weight of the battery plates alone being nearly equal to that of a paying load of thirty passengers, i. e. say 3,800 pounds. This load must be "toted" whether there are passengers or not, and always in addition to the live load. The increased weight on the rails adds to the first cost of track; also to the cost of renewals and repairs to track and cars.

Trusting that some of the above facts may prove of interest to your readers, I remain, Very respectfully,

EDWARD F. MILLIKEN.

TIED A ROPE AROUND HIS NECK

THEN KISSED THE KNOTTED NOOSE AND JUMPED TO DEATH.

Villagers in the Mountains Excited Over the Suicide of a Mysterious Stranger on Jeptha Wagner's Farm.—A Coroner's Inquest to be Held to Identify the Corpse.

People in the neighborhood of Mt. Bethel, one of the mountain villages just back of North Plainfield, are greatly excited over the suicide of a mysterious stranger on the farm of Jeptha Wagner, near that place.

Two or three days ago an unknown man appeared in Mt. Bethel, seeking employment. He was well dressed, and the refinement of his manner indicated that he was a man of good breeding, and his white hands were not those of a common farm laborer.

Yesterday morning, however, he eagerly accepted work on the farm of John Redmond, and worked steadily until noon. His mind seemed to be greatly burdened with sorrow, but he was very uncommunicative.

At noon he slipped away from his work, and went over to the adjoining farm of Jeptha Wagner. Climbing to the roof of a cow shed, he tied the end of a short rope about a beam, slipped the other end, already noosed and knotted, over his head, kissed the rope impassionately as though grateful to it as an instrument of welcome death, clasped his hands together, and leaped.

The rope held firmly, and quickly strangled the life out of the horribly struggling form.

Mrs. Wagner was on her way to a neighboring spring for water, and witnessed the suicide. Redmond's house was nearer than her own, and she ran to it and called out the men. When they reached the dangling body life was extinct.

The corpse was left swinging in the breeze till Wm. Rolfe, overseer of the poor, arrived and officially ordered it cut down.

The county physician came later and ordered an inquest to be held, with a view to ascertaining who the dead man was. The inquest will be begun this afternoon.

IS IT A WOMAN'S DARING PLOT?

EITHER THAT OR A CASE OF MAN'S BASEST TREACHERY.

If It's Blackmail the Fair Complainant Is Fighting Tremendous Odds.—The Reputation and Honor of Herself and Others at Stake.—The Woman Determined to Recover Heavy Damages, and the Man Resolute for Vindication.

A scandal of a highly sensational nature has been developing in Plainfield during the past few months, and since the case has gone so far that it cannot avoid becoming public property THE PRESS fulfills its duty as a newspaper by giving the people first and reliable information concerning it.

The leading characters in this erotic local drama are a young man, a student in one of the most highly honored professions, well known to many Plainfielders, and very popular with certain society people, especially the gentler sex; and a young woman whose home is in one of the most beautiful, fashionable and refined quarters of the city, and who mingles daily with the throng upon the streets.

For reasons which will be obvious to the readers of this story of the case, THE PRESS for the present withholds the names of the parties involved, and the curious ones must be satisfied to have the matter treated generally until exposure of these and other particulars has become necessary and proper because of the affair coming up for settlement before the courts.

The beginning of the story takes the narrator as far back as last June, when, in occasional promenades about the Plainfield streets, the student had often noticed two young ladies, evidently sisters, driving about in very stylish equipage. For a time he contented himself with distant flirtations with the damsels, who were quite pretty, who dressed in faultless taste, and whose modest demeanor was so coy that the gay young fellow could n't be sure that it was not assumed.

Inquiry developed the fact that the girls were warm friends of one of his Plainfield chums, and after a formal introduction he became

A FREQUENT CALLER AT THEIR HOME.

Indeed, scarcely had the month of roses and strawberries gone by when the student found himself so firmly established as a family friend that he accepted an invitation to spend the summer in Plainfield as the guest of the young ladies' parents. The girls were sisters, as he had supposed. They were highly accomplished, played the piano and other musical instruments to perfection, danced divinely, sang exquisitely, and painted pictures that were gems of art.

The friend to whom the student was indebted for the introduction to the sisters seemed already to have a monopoly of the society of the younger of the girls, but the older was sufficiently charming for the student, and delightful walks and drives and talks between the two resulted.

Strolls about town in the evening were frequent. At such times the entire quartette used to meet at a prominent drug store and imbibe refreshing soda water, or at a well-known confectioner's and partake of lemonade and ices. The summer passed, and the young people parted pleasantly one day because the young men were going off on

A BRIEF PLEASURE TRIP.

But after the student and his friend came back they seemed very distant to the sisters who had helped to make the season so enjoyable for them, and if the story of the girls is true there was good reason for the coldness. They say that they ordered the young men never again to come near them.

But as the story told by the young women differs very much from that told by the young men, they will have to be recounted separately, and out of courtesy to the sex the girls are given first hearing.

The beginning of the trouble—says one of the sisters, in the story which has been told to the lawyer and a few friends of the family—occurred one evening just after they had been drinking soda water at the drug store, when one of the young men said a very funny but a very naughty thing. The girls acknowledge that they ought to have and ought to have chided the other young man for adding a remark that only made the thing worse, but instead they laughed and treated the matter lightly. Next day, evidently emboldened at the success of their first joke of the kind, the boys attempted a broader but a no less piquant one. The girls then said that they were not accustomed to have such things said in their presence. They tried to be severe about it, but the fellows were in a most frolicsome mood, and teased the maidens into laughing too. Then was started the

which continued to characterize the acquaintance of the quartette during the Summer. From questionable jokes to questionable actions was an easy step. Gradually the girls came to accept quite openly, instead of rejecting in scorn, demonstrations of affection from the young men. The boys were very jolly, very sentimental, and very generous; and the girls were in great perplexity—so they say—to know just how to act. They claim not to have thoroughly understood the young men's advances, and they continued to have a very merry time. That all this while they were they could not have been long in discovering, however, for presently came an offer from their gay young swains which they were compelled to treat with an emphatic negative.

One evening, seated in a group in a secluded nook of the broad piazzas of the house, the young men very delicately and skillfully unfolded a plan for "the jolliest kind of a lark". This involved an afternoon carriage drive through the loveliest country of the neighborhood, a dinner at a rural inn in an isolated spot, and a drive homeward by moonlight. All this in itself seemed an innocent enough and romantic enough diversion for such familiar and congenial spirits, but when the young men, in response to the girls' question what time they would promise to leave the inn for home, said that they would start the minute the moon was up. The younger of the sisters had studied the almanac recently enough to know that the moon on the particular night in question would n't rise at all, that not even the faintest peep of the crescent would be visible till some time after midnight and dangerously close to daybreak, and she frankly told the young men of her knowledge. They were visibly discomfited, and had very evidently counted on the maidens eagerly accepting without a doubting word the inviting chance for a happy day they had so glowingly pictured, but after a forlorn joke about girls always keeping themselves posted about the moon because there was a man in it they tried earnestly to assure the maidens that there was

and that even if they stayed at the inn until the moon began to show herself above the horizon they would reach home in plenty of time to avoid all suspicion. No one—they pleaded—would know at what time they got home; if the hour were discovered, it could readily be explained; accidents often happened to horses and carriages on the road, and one could easily be reported in their case: in any event, they would vindicate the girls against every breath of suspicion, and no one would be the wiser.

The young women were not slow to understand the purport of the young men's suggestions, and as soon as possible they left the two ardent conspirators and bade them a somewhat haughty but not entirely chilly good-night.

Next day the girls had not the heart to be cold and distant to the boys, for the gay gallants were as sweetly respectful and deferent and knightly as could possibly be desired. So them their naughtiness, and the young men were courtly, obedient, humble, meek, as the stately but smiling young women willed.

It was not a great while after this—the story of the girls goes on—that the elder of the sisters, in a quiet mood, slipped away from the people chatting on the piazza and spent the summer evening in solitude on a balcony near her room, building dream-visions. It was late when she glanced at her watch; she had not realized how quickly time will flee when the thoughts and hopes and longings of a tender girlish heart are racing against the minutes;

THE HOUSEHOLD WERE ALL ASLEEP:

but she paused even yet before retiring for the night. A moment later, glancing into a room adjoining her sleeping apartment, one might have imagined himself gazing at an exquisite bit of art turned to realism, and might have fancied himself in a famous picture gallery, with the Diana who hitherto had been posing amid paint-and-canvas waters actually come to life and plashing about in a very real, matter-of-fact fountain, the construction of which an old master would have found somewhat perplexing, and which would have been decidedly more familiar to a later-day plumber. The modern Diana had a right merry time playing amid the falling waters, and when, attired in a soft loose gown whose suggestive outlines heightened the grace and charm of her natural beauty, she glided into her sleeping room, fresh and sweet and rosy from the aquatic exercise,

SHE LOOKED HER LOVELIEST.

Like a prudent maiden, she locked the door of her room after entering, turned up the gas, and looked under the bed, as was her nightly wont, for a man. There was of course no man there, but there was one in the room, as she was very much surprised to discover. He stepped from behind the drapery of an alcove, and revealed himself to her startled gaze as the student.

When she faintly asked him, between her gasps for the breath which surprise had robbed her of,

WHAT HE WAS DOING THERE,

he told her that he loved her devotedly, and could not bear to be away from her. He added, in impassioned tones, that he had been waiting for her a long, long time, that he could not bear to be away from her side an instant. She subsequently discovered that he had but just come in, and that if she had come directly to her room after leaving the balcony and had instead of pausing to personate Diana sporting at the fountain, she would have been safe within her room in time to exclude the trespasser.

But the student was in the room, and she could not get rid of him. Pleadings, tears, were of no avail, and she thought too much of him to arouse the family by her screams and expose him. At last—she concludes—he conquered her by his passionate utterances and fervent assurances, and when he finally left her it was with which she claims he committed against her.

PROMISES TO REPAIR THE GREAT WRONG

All this is but the story of the young woman herself. There is much more of it, rich in details which cannot easily or gracefully be told in public print. The tale of the young man is much briefer, and far different. It herself, while it vindicates him. Besides frankly and emphatically denying the entire charge, he says that during his stay at her house the young woman threw herself constantly in his way, and followed him about so continually, in so pointed a manner, and with so evident a purpose, that she became a positive nuisance to him. Being a very sensitive, and, according to reputation, a highly honorable young man, he naturally resented being constantly haunted, even by so attractive a flesh-and-blood creature as this. He had—he continues—just fallen into love with one of Plainfield's and was so devoted to her, and had her so lovingly and faithfully and everlastingly on his mind and heart that the presence of the other was hateful and obnoxious. He avoided as much as possible the girl who now makes so serious a charge against him, and as soon as he could leave the house altogether without offending the family or compromising the reputation of himself or the girl, he did so. His first intimation of the charge she now makes against him is said to have come through his sweetheart, whose mind the fair complainant is alleged to have sought to poison against him.

BLACKENS THE CHARACTER OF THE GIRL

HANDSOMEST AND SWEETEST YOUNG WOMEN,

No matter which of the two stories may be true, it remains a fact that the girl placed her case in the hands of a prominent and successful Newark lawyer and instructed him to bring SUIT FOR $50,000 DAMAGES.

Until recently, however, the lawyer contented himself with trying to secure from the young man and his friends a satisfactory sum in settlement of the case. The student has a host of influential people in sympathy with him, and they have succeeded in restraining him from paying money to hush up a charge of which they believe him innocent. A speedy suit in the courts is therefore promised. The young man and his friends consider the case one of grossest blackmail, and will FIGHT IT TO THE BITTER END.

They claim that the young woman cares really nothing about her alleged wounded honor, and hold that she has merely developed a grasping, mercenary scheme to ruin the young man's reputation for the sake of lining her own purse. They threaten that if she attempt to drop the matter now they themselves will push it, either through a suit for slander or otherwise, so as to secure for him a complete vindication in the eyes of his sweetheart and all others. In whatever event, when the case comes to trial the names of various prominent and highly respected people will be dragged into it, and a great mass of sensational testimony that threatens to damage more than one fair reputation will be introduced.

Taking Plainfield's Club as a Model.

The Woman's Club, of Elmora, met on Wednesday at the house of Mrs. Clare. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Scotch Plains, daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, was the guest of the club. She gave an interesting account of the work of the Monday Afternoon Club of this city, and of the work proposed by the general federation of women's clubs. Mrs. Hall has just concluded an interesting course of lectures before the New York Club. "The art of Conversation," "Social Usages," "The English Language as it is Spoken in the Best Society," were some of the subjects of this course. She has also delivered some of these same lectures in the Seminary here.

Dr. Howard Crosby Has a Relapse.

NEW YORK, March 27.—This morning Dr. Howard Crosby was in a very low condition. Grave fears are felt over the relapse, and a change is expected within 24 hours.

A GIANT PREACHER.

A Wonderful Southern Plant Nearly Six Feet High.

A friend of mine, who has a delightful garden in New Orleans, was surprised one morning, while sauntering there, to see a strange, foreign-looking plant nearly six feet high, occupying a spot where no such plant had ever stood before.

Whence came it? What was it?

Nobody knew. No one had noticed it growing. Yet there it stood, taller than most of us, rearing its head as if to look upon the broad Mississippi rolling by. It was like a Jack-in-the-pulpit—a giant Jack in a cathedral pulpit.

Its footstalk was leafless, about two feet high and an inch and a half in diameter; in color, mottled green and white.

From the apex of this stalk grew the calyx—forming the pulpit—one leaf of many folds, soft and velvety and of a dark reddish-brown, not unlike kelp in color. This leaf measured eighteen inches across in its widest part.

The mysterious stranger attracted much attention. No one could account for it. The gardener had not planted it, certainly, but thought it possible that the seed which produced it had been among some Mexican plants.

We watched the giant's growth with great interest, and learned the following facts of it and its successors.

While Jack is in infancy the tip of the calyx leaf, like that of our own wildwood flower, falls over the pulpit, shielding the young preacher from the wrath of the elements. But as Jack grows older and stronger, and pushes his inquisitive head higher, he thrusts aside the shelter and finally towers above it.

Jack, with his feet upon the floor of his pulpit, is nearly four feet high. He is a dark-red, sturdy-looking fellow, but in reality he is very delicate and will droop and wilt if touched. Moreover, he is hollow, for I peeped at him where his skin was cracked and found that there was nothing of him but his red-brown skin and its yellow lining.

While making this investigation I discovered too that Jack was a very offensive fellow.

At the base of the corolla, where his boots should have been, were millions of white seeds. I accidentally touched one, and the plant immediately gave forth an odor so unpleasant that I was obliged to run away. He loses this disagreeable characteristic as he grows older, however; for I saw him later, when he was preaching his sermon to a group of tiny toads who nestled within his pulpit; the seeds had turned dark-red and I could touch them with impunity.

This New Orleans Jack is short-lived, only lasting a few days. As he surprised us by his first visit, so he continues to make unaccountable appearances, springing up unexpectedly in all parts of the garden, but never twice in the same place.—Mrs. S. B. C. Samuels, in Wide Awake.

THE HUMMING BIRD.

Habits and Peculiarities of the Popular Little Fellow.

The male invariably and savagely attacks the humble bee which dares to invade the flower over which the female hummer is hovering. As the bee cannot back up to the charge in this instance it is placed at a disadvantage and flees before the impetuous foe. The hummer flies noiselessly. The whirr of wings is only discernable when hovering. Its speed has been estimated at from 160 to 200 miles per hour. Certainly when darting, its wings fan so rapidly as to be imperceptible. Although the male has a ruby patch covering not more than a half square inch, its entire lower parts seem aflame when it darts toward one. It greedily devours myriads of lice and insect life, almost, if not totally invisible to the human eye. An examination showed that the tongue of a specimen shot in the act of sipping was covered with insects only fully revealed by the microscope. The saliva apparatus of the bird lies in the interior of its tongue. This minute organ has two tubes, which according to Wallace are used to draw in the honey from flowers. The bird, however, is insectivorous and feeds but scantily on the juices of flowers. It exudes a mucilagenous saliva through these tubes for the outer coating of the tongue to gather insects.

HUMMING BIRD AND NEST.

A female shot May 21 among the evergreens had ovarian organs which showed incipient stages of development, indicative that its breeding season had just begun. These birds are very common along the west shore of Lake Michigan and can breed early owing to the beautiful weather prevailing before the adjoining country has recovered from the spring.

He will be at the CITY HOTEL,

HUNTING FOR SPOOKS.

A Note of Warning to the New Investigating Committee.

Howard Fielding Tells How the Spirit of Harvey Blake's Grandmother Used Him as a Toboggan and Then Sued Him for Damages.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

It is reported that a number of distinguished ladies and gentlemen have banded themselves together for the purpose of investigating the phenomena of spiritualism. They propose to get up a series of tests through which no fraudulent ghosts and very few of the genuine can ever pass successfully.

Let me hasten to say that it is not my purpose to criticize or ridicule these investigators. Some of them live in Boston and are thus above criticism, while others do not live in Boston and are therefore objects of pity rather than ridicule. Collectively, if they have a fault, it is that they are too good. The work requires somebody who is en rapport with iniquity, as a Boston gentleman remarked in tendering me an invitation to a spook-hunt in that city some years ago. I did not understand French at that time, so I simply thanked him, adding modestly that I had a good bringing up, and hoped not to disappoint his expectations. I now perceive that I should have struck him with a club, but it is too late.

The hunt of which I have spoken was organized by spiritualists. They were honest believers who desired to expose fraud, as the surest way of giving the truth a chance. My intentions were as good as theirs, but I lacked discretion. I shall tell the story of the hunt as a warning to the above mentioned committee not to push investigation recklessly.

We were to expose a man who was temporarily named Morse. His wife materialized spirits through the power of a deceased Indian princess, who in life had been called Bright Eyes. Her vision must have been considerably dimmed in the mysterious hereafter or she would have been able to see through such a diaphanous fraud as Mrs. Morse, and would have refrained from having anything to do with her. When Mrs. Morse passed into a trance she was controlled so completely by Bright Eyes that she could speak nothing but pure Choctaw. Thus the ordinary auditor at one of her seances learned little or nothing about the eternal mysteries.

Our hunting party heard of this linguistic difficulty, and so we pressed into our service an ex-cowboy who conversed fluently in Choctaw. He could also shoot the neck off a two gallon demijohn at fifty paces, and afterward drink the entire contents, no matter what it happened to be. He was an accomplished gentleman.

He arranged the plan of campaign very carefully. To each was assigned his share of the work. Bill Adams, the cowboy, was to test the quality of Bright-Eyes' Choctaw, after which he was to wait till the signal of attack should be given by Harvey Blake. This young man acted as a sort of guide to our party. He was a believer in spiritualism, who had come to the Morse seances in good faith, until their trickery became too thin to deceive even so partial a witness. The Morses thought that they had a sure grip on him, and so he could easily secure a front seat at the seance—a favor not shown to strangers. In his position of advantage he was to wait until a materialized spirit was well within his reach, and then he was to grab it, and yell. At his war-whoop Adams was to overpower Morse; I was to assist in detaining the spooks; and others were to turn up the lights and quell any outbreak on the part of Morse's heelers, of whom there were a half dozen at every meeting.

I noticed them when I first entered the rooms on the evening selected for the exposure. They were short-haired middle weights who were engaged at fifty cents a head, as a body-guard. We were given a brief opportunity of examining the room, one corner of which was curtained off, making the usual cabinet. When we took our seats Blake was in the front row with Adams, and me just behind him. I estimated that of the thirty people present only about a third had come with a real desire to see and converse with the departed.

When the lights had been turned down a thin and faded spinster began to play hymn tunes on a consumptive cabinet organ in a manner calculated to disturb the eternal slumbers of their defunct composers, if anything could. That they did not materialize and remove the organist hardened my unbelief as nothing else ever had. But young Blake, who was a very nervous fellow, found this waiting for ghosts in the grizzly darkness very trying. He did not know which to fear most, the appearance of a genuine spook or the rough-and-tumble fight which was certain to follow a palpable fraud. He trembled so that I could feel his chair shake. Adams noticed it, too, and tried to quiet the young man's nerves.

"Don't you be alarmed," he whispered. "Just because that man Morse has a gun in his hip pocket ain't no reason why you should expect to be cut off in the flower of your youth."

Blake's teeth began to chatter audibly.

"I felt the gun," continued Adams, "while you fellows were looking over the room. I spent my time looking over Morse. He is my meat, and don't you forget it. Cheer up, my bloomin' shrub; I have a shooting iron in my bootleg, and it's twice as long as Morse's."

Blake gave a tremendous groan. By this time Mrs. Morse had gone into a trance and was jabbering in her alleged Choctaw. Adams listened to it awhile and then he said: "I'm gambling that that don't come from the happy hunting grounds. If any poor Injun talks that lingo it must be because his sufferin's overpower him. Wait till I try the genuine article."

He spoke a few words in an Indian dialect, and then added in Un.ted States: "If the ghost of the old Chief Red-Eye isn't here in thirty seconds, the whole thing is a fake."

"Why so?" I inquired.

"I just remarked in Red-Eye's native tongue," said Adams, "that I knew where there was a barrel of firewater on tap. No, no; he'd have been here before this. What evidence do you want? Speak your little piece, Blakey, my boy, and I'll open fire right over your shoulder."

ADAMS SHOT OFF HIS REVOLVER.

Blake fell upon his knees, and reaching out his hands toward a white-robed figure which had just capered out of the cabinet, he called her his dear old grandmother and asked if she had come to protect him. At this several women sobbed, but I was not deeply affected. This same figure had been out before. I recognized it as the bulky form of a fat woman whom I had seen skipping down the basement stairs just before the seance opened. But Blake said she was his grandmother, and an old fellow on the other side of the room recognized her as his daughter who had died at the tender age of eleven. I could not help feeling that this identification was complicated and doubtful; and I longed to make a sure thing of it by dragging the specter to some portion of the house where there was more light. It was evident that Blake was too badly frightened to give the signal; I could hear murmurs from various members of our party; and I was anxious to get away from Adams' revolver before it should go off by accident.

Moved by these considerations, I sprang over Blake's kneeling form, and seized the fat spook around the waist. She offered a very material resistance which became quite uncontrollable when Adam shot off his revolver into the ceiling and leaped upon Morse. After that, I was no more of an encumbrance to the spook than if my arms had been her apron strings. She rushed out into the hall, and I trailed behind like the "bob" of a kite. She fled up the stairs with an agility proportionate to her fright, and marvelous considering her bulk. I accompanied her up the stairs because I was afraid to let go. On the uppermost step she tripped, staggered a moment, and then, overbalanced by my weight, she fell backward and slid the whole length of the stairs on my unfortunate body, as if it had been a toboggan. I had been told that spirits dematerialize at the profane touch. This one didn't. She was all there when we landed on the hall floor. I was much nearer dematerialization myself, being pressed out to a thinness which approached transparency. All this I have been told, for I was not in condition to observe it at the time. I did not know when the spirit of Blake's grandmother was lifted off my ruins, nor did I suffer anything at the hospital where I was restored from a strip to my usual cylindrical form. No; these trials were over before I regained command of my faculties; but what did pain me seriously was the notification that Blake's grandmother's ghost would charge me with assault and battery, and sue me for civil damages.

Therefore, I publish these facts in order that this new investigating committee may know enough to stand from under, when spirits that have been too ponderously materialized attempt to impose upon the humble seeker for the truth. We should all grieve if any member of the committee should pursue the search for facts about the other world to a point from which he could not return with his report.

HOWARD FIELDING.

TERRIBLE TEMPTATION.

James Struggled Very Hard and Triumphed Over a Bad Impulse.

It was a pretty little pocketknife, and deserved a better fate than to be forgotten by its owner, who had gone home from school and left it alone and unprotected on his desk. It had, however, caught the eye of one little fellow—James Donnelly by name—who, having often borrowed it, was keenly alive to its merits.

James was staying in after hours, mastering an example in arithmetic which during the day had mastered him; and now, having finished his work, was getting his few belongings together before going home, when his eye alighted on the knife. He picked it up, and gave each blade a separate and distinct admiration.

How any boy could forget such a treasure he did not see. He fairly longed for such a knife, with a longing that only a boy could feel who was obliged to do the great amount of his inevitable whittling with one that, in its palmiest days, had boasted but a single blade, and bore, therefore, but sad comparison to the little beauty that he now held in his hand, and which, the longer he held and the more he admired, the harder it seemed for him to replace.

The ever-ready tempter was at hand with his suggestions; but James hesitated, for, being in the main an upright little fellow, he could not deliberately take it without violence to his better self.

"No one will suspect you, and the owner will think he lost it," whispered the evil voice.

Still he hesitated, and still the desire to possess the knife was strong upon him.

Right and wrong struggled for the mastery; until one more admiring glance, one more feeling of the bright blades, proved fatal. Quickly he slipped it into his pocket, and hurried out of the class-room without his cheery "Good-afternoon!" that his teacher was wont to hear.

But she, being intent on the work of some other boys, soon forgot the omission.

He walked down the street with a feeling of anything but exhilaration at possession of the coveted knife. He changed it from one pocket to another, but somehow it seemed to be at home in none. Then he took it out and again looked at it; it certainly was pretty, but what pleasure would it bring to him if he must always hide it?

Suddenly his heart beat quicker, for one of his classmates was coming up the street, and James, with his burden of a guilty conscience, felt that his comrade would surely penetrate his guilt, and therefore he must avoid him.

Quickly he scrambled to the top of an old woodpile, and rejoiced to see that he had not been seen by the boy that ordinarily he would have been glad to meet.

While on top of the old boards, his better angel began asserting himself. He had never before been tempted to take what was not his, and he wished the little knife was safe in its resting place in its owner's desk.

The more he thought of it the worse his action seemed, and the inner voice of conscience was whispering:

"Return it; school is not yet closed, and the class-room by this time is empty."

With an heroic effort he made up his mind to do so. Slowly he climbed down from his height, and slowly retraced his steps toward the school.

He opened the class-room door. How lonely and quiet it all seemed! The afternoon sun was coming through the windows, lighting up the walls and desks and brightening even the old blackboard.

He placed the knife where he had found it, and again hurried out of the class-room, but with what different feelings—with what a light heart!

He ran for very joy, and on his way home, in his own boyish fashion, he did much thinking, and made up his mind hereafter to be straightforward and honest in spite of temptation.

Long years have passed since that afternoon, and he feels that he has been the better man for his boyhood's resolution.—Golden Days.

Intelligence of Sparrows.

In a secluded city street, a sparrow having by some mischance caught his foot in a slip knot of pack thread, the other end of which was attached to a water-spout, soon exhausted its strength in its attempts to escape. At length, apparently giving up hope, it hung at the end of the thread, uttering loud cries of pain. Soon all the sparrows in the neighborhood assembled and seemed greatly excited over their comrade's plight. After much chattering, a bright idea struck the mind of one wiser than the rest, and he told his plan to the others. Each sparrow took his place in a long line, and all went in turns, as in the sport of running at the ring, and in passing, struck the thread with their bills. These efforts, directed to one spot, were continued without intermission for nearly half an hour, when the thread was severed and the captive restored to liberty.

His Nose Didn't Save Him.

A man recently left his family and has not since been found, although his nose turned up.—N. Y. World.

"No More Doctors for Me."

"They said I was consumptive, sent me to Florida, told me to keep quiet, no excitement, and no tennis. Just think of it. One day I found a little book called 'Guide to Health,' by Lydia E. Pinkham, and in it I found out what ailed me. So I wrote to her, got a lovely reply; she told me just what to do, and I am in splendid health now. She informed me that she likes to receive such letters of confidence, as they appeal to her as a mother, and how glad she is to have the records of her life's experience among women made available to all women. These records are the largest in the world, and contain facts that cannot be found elsewhere. Thus will her noble work be perpetuated."

"Why, Are You Sick?"

"I know precisely how you feel; it is that nervous, irritable feeling, your back troubles you, and when you try to read a little your head aches. Isn't that so? I knew it. Oh, bother the doctor! Get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and take it faithfully as I have done. I've been through this thing myself, but am never troubled now."

"I am Sure it Would Help Them."

Thousands of delicate young ladies, employed in fashionable dry goods, millinery, and other stores, others in mills, factories, workshops, etc., where through the long day they are constantly on their feet. Among this class some of the worst cases of female diseases occur, and when their ill-health becomes apparent they are at once discharged.

The society girls who are whirled along in the excitement of fashionable life, and who overlook those minor ailments, that if not checked are death to health and beauty.

Actresses, singers, and others of the profession, do not always think; they rush into the tide of popularity regardless of all save fame and fortune. How often we read of some favorite actress, "Ill in London, nervous prostration," etc.

Prudent women, who best understand their ailments, find in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a remedy for all those distressing ills that require prompt and effective treatment as a guaranty to good health.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S Vegetable Compound

EIGHT LIVES LOST

The Bark Dictator Goes Ashore on Virginia Beach.

SEVEN OF THE CREW RESCUED.

The High Seas Imperiled the Work of the Life Savers.

The Captain's Wife Refused to Leave the Vessel—A Life Boat Could Not Live in the Surf—The Unhappy Sailors Taken Ashore by Life Lines—The Beach Lined with Spectators.

NORFOLK, Va., March 28.—The Norwegian bark Dictator was driven ashore near Life Saving Station No. 2, on Virginia Beach, at 10 a. m. Of the crew of 15 seven were rescued. Including those who perished were the captain's wife and little child. The captain swam ashore and was picked up senseless. The bark was bound from Pensacola, Fla., to West Hartlepool, England, with lumber. She is fast going to pieces.

The weather was so thick that the vessel was not seen until nine o'clock, and then she was in the breakers, broadside on, within a quarter of a mile of the shore.

Full crews from two life saving stations, those of Cape Henry and Seatack, under command of Capt. Drinkwater, were promptly on hand and began firing lines to the ill fated bark. The guns could not deliver the lines so far, though they were repeatedly fired.

A Line Ashore.

The ship finally succeeded in getting a line ashore tied to a barrel, which the surf carried to the life savers. The breeches buoy was quickly rigged and sent to the vessel, but unfortunately the bark's crew were ignorant of its use and the rescue was delayed until Capt. Drinkwater wrote instructions, and put them in a bottle and sent it to the Dictator by the line connecting the vessel with the shore.

The men on board broke the bottle at once, as could be seen by glasses from the shore, and proceeded to carry out the instructions. The first man was delivered ashore in eight minutes and six others were rescued in a short time, four of whom came ashore in a lifeboat, which was capsized, but the men succeeded in reaching the shore in a half dead condition, one man having his arm broken.

The ship rolled and pitched terribly and made the work of rescuing the unhappy sailors exceedingly difficult and slow as the life line would tighten or slacken in response to the motion of the vessel. Once the line broke with a man midway to the shore, and he was hauled back to the bark half dead. The line was mended, and the same man was safely landed.

The beach was lined with people who came from the country houses and the hotel, and to the spectators the anxiety and suspense was awful, as they could plainly see the people on the bark and could also hear their constant cries for succor.

Devotion of the Captain's Wife.

The captain had urged his wife to take the buoy and come ashore, but she steadily refused, as she would not leave her husband and child, and only one could take the buoy at a time. The wife and child were already greatly exhausted, according to the report of the sailors.

The work of rescue was continued, and the captain, after vainly beseeching his wife to make the attempt for life, took his half dead child and climbed into the buoy. The father reached the shore, but the son was lost.

The life savers worked with great diligence and heroism. The apparently slow progress of their work is due to the fact that a lifeboat could not live in the surf and that the guns would not reach the bark and crew could not use the breeches buoy until they were instructed from shore, which caused great delay.

No Money for Parnell's Envoy.

OMAHA, March 28.—Envoy O'Kelly of the Parnell faction arrived during the morning and an hour later was informed by a delegation representing the Irish-Americans that Omaha would contribute nothing to the election fund until assured of a change.

Another Bank Pressed for Money.

NEW YORK, March 28.—There were rumors on Wall street that the Mechanics and Traders' Bank at Broadway and Broome street, was hard pressed for money, and that the directors were having great difficulty in getting assistance.

Killed by a Boiler Explosion.

PITTSBURG, March 28.—A boiler explosion at Williams' brickyard, near Hazelwood, almost instantly killed John Jones, foreman. The furnace door was hurled against him, knocking him a distance of [illegible] fracturing his skull.

FOOLED TWENTY GIRLS.

Speedy Departure of a Young Man Named Oliver Deacon.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., March 28.—Twenty young ladies are to-day in various towns in Cabel County mourning the speedy departure of a young man named Oliver Deacon. He was gay, witty and wicked; had a handsome form and taking address, and during the past two years has been engaged to no less than twenty girls, all living in the same county.

Nearly all Deacon's victims claim that he had promised to marry them on April 20, and the others say no time was fixed, but it was to be "very soon." One girl, Mary L. Hash, had made all preparations, and, getting word that Deacon had been keeping company with other girls, took her father into her confidence. The old gentleman, armed with a revolver, went to Deacon's boarding house and ordered him to immediately come with him and marry his daughter.

Deacon consented, and, to show the sincerity of his promise, he secured a marriage license. He then left the State and went to Kentucky, and he has written back: "Get me if you can; they don't hang gentlemen in Kentucky."

THE SEALER SAYWARD CASE.

It is Probable that the Famous Suit Will Not be Called for Trial.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—It is stated that it is probable that the case of the Canadian sealer Sayward will not be called for trial in the United States Supreme Court as originally intended. This is said to be the result of a conference that recently took place in New York between Mr. Choate, the leading counsel for the Canadian government, and a member of the present administration.

The subject was discussed at length, it is said, and it is understood that when the representatives of the two governments parted, a way was clear to an amicable adjustment of the difficulty.

The Attorney-General is not in a position to make any overtures in that direction, except under certain circumstances, and in the meantime he proposes to prepare for trial. Under any circumstances a continuance of a week or more will be requested, as the Attorney-General cannot until then obtain the necessary documents from the Alaskan court.

TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

Gambler Elliot Kills Two Women, and Then Ends His Own Life.

SPOKANE FALLS, Wash., March 28.—Charles Elliot, a faro dealer, brutally shot two women at the Casino Variety Theatre last night and then committed suicide. He was occupying a box near the stage when he suddenly began emptying a revolver at the performers on the stage.

Mabel Debabian was his first victim, she being shot in the left breast and instantly killed. Another bullet struck Carrie Smith in the back, inflicting a fatal wound. Elliot then shot himself through the head, dying instantly.

His shots were aimed at Lulu Durand, one of the performers, but she escaped injury. Jealousy was the cause of the tragedy.

Attempt to Wreck a Train.

WINSTED, Conn., March 28.—An attempt was made last night to wreck a Naugatuck passenger train between this place and Barrville. The train struck a pile of ties and threw the forward truck off the track and damaged the engine. Th passengers were greatly excited, but for tunately no one was hurt.

Sent Home to Die.

ORDERED TO WORK

A New Move by the Knights in the Rochester Labor War.

THEY WILL MAKE A TEST CASE.

If Their Members Are Refused Employment They Will Sue for Damages.

A Belief that the Clothiers Will Discriminate Against the Officers of the Local Assemblies—Employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad Petition for an Increase of Salaries—A Strike May Follow.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 28.—At the clothing workers' meeting to consider what course to pursue with reference to the lockout, the opinion of the National Executive Board was submitted to the meeting and created a great sensation. It is as follows:

"To the officers and members of L. A. 1,772, 1,920, 1,930, 2,558 and 2,742 attached to National Trade Assembly 231, K. of L., Garment Workers of America: We, your national officers, desire to make the following report and recommendations: After hearing an expression of opinion from the officers of the above mentioned local assemblies, we recommend that all locked-out members of the Knights of Labor apply to their former employers for their former positions.

"We take this position for two reasons. First, that any employe that is refused employment has reasons for an action against the employer who so refused, which will be pushed to the strict letter of the law, with the understanding that we know a clear case of conspiracy.

"Second, the reason we take this unprecedented move is because we desire to give the consumers of Rochester clothing the opportunity to know the kind of men who conspired against American workingmen and women of the city of Rochester, and, as it will take several weeks to notify the consumers of Rochester clothing, it would be unprofitable and inadvisable to remain out of work during that time."

The men against whom the Executive Board thinks there will be discriminations are the officers of the local assemblies. It is on behalf of these men that the board proposes to commence suits for damages, in case they are refused employment.

WANT MORE WAGES.

Pennsylvania Railroad Employes Petition for Increased Salaries.

JERSEY CITY, March 28.—The employes of the New York division of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company are signing a petition asking that their wages be increased nearly 15 per cent. When all the signatures have been secured the petition will be presented to General Manager Pugh direct.

The men ask for a general increase for all who run on passenger trains between Philadelphia and New York. The round trip is fixed at 183 miles, and the pay now is as follows; Conductors, $3.25; baggagemasters, $1,90; brakemen, $1.65, for each round trip. The men ask that the wages be increased as follows: Conductors, $3.50; baggagemasters, $2,10, and brakemen, $1,90.

The firemen on the same branch, who are nearly all members of the Brotherhood of Firemen, have also presented a petition asking for an increase which will make their pay $2.25 for a round trip.

The men claim that when President Thomas A. Scott reduced the wages in 1880 he promised to restore them as soon as the earnings of the road would increase. Wages were restored on all divisions except the New York branch, the men further state.

If the demands of the men are rejected, a strike may follow.

ANOTHER BRUTAL MURDER.

A Woman Found Dead in a Clump of Trees at Camden.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 28.—In a clump of trees near Eighteenth and Federal streets, the dead body of Nellie Ryan, a woman about forty years of age, was discovered at an early morning hour by Peter Meyer, who was on his way to work, and the appearance of the dead woman led to the belief that she had been knocked down, outraged and left dead.

Coroner Jefferis, drove immediately to the scene of the supposed murder. The body could only be reached by the Coroner forcing himself through a crowd of a hundred men and women who had gathered around the body.

The woman lay on her back, and on her left cheek was a bruise, which evidently had been recently made, while her forehead was much discolored.

Her clothing was disarranged and her red shawl and hood were thrown a few feet away.

Pending a postmortem by the county physician, the body was removed to the morgue.

The constable is busily engaged in investigating the case and will probably have several persons under arrest in a short time.

Several persons are willing to swear that they saw a negro lead the woman up to the spot where she was found dead, and he is now missing.

It is a fact that the woman was in company with a negro, but whether he killed the woman remains to be proved.

Mr. Thorne denies that he ever knew the woman and thinks Lincoln is either crazy, or that he is attempting to blackmail him. Mr. Thorne and his family move in high society circles, and all their friends think it utterly impossible that Mr. Thorne can be the man that Mr. Lincoln imagines him to be.

A Wise Choice.

NEW YORK, July 23, 1890.

All other reports on Baking Powders signed by me or purporting to be signed by me are based on investigations made several years ago.

In view of the present controversy as to the purity and wholesomeness of baking powders, I have been requested to make a chemical examination of the leading brands found in the market.

My analysis of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder verifies the statement on the label, that the only ingredients used are cream of tartar, bicarbonate of soda (both of the highest purity), and a little flour to preserve the strength.

My analysis also shows that "Cleveland's Superior" is free from ammonia, alum, or other substitutes.

Owing to the purity, strength, effectiveness, and constancy of composition of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, I have adopted the same for use in my home.

ENGLAND TO PROTECT BELGIUM.

Lord Salisbury Promises an English Fleet to Defend Antwerp.

An Uneasy Feeling in Berlin Over Alarming Rumors—Sofia's Minister of Finance Assassinated—The Shot Was Meant for Premier Stambuloff—The Irish Factions Resting at Sligo.

LONDON, March 28.—Something occurring behind the scenes of European diplomacy sharpens apprehension that the final move in the long game preluding war will not be long delayed.

Lord Salisbury, just before starting for San Remo, held a long conference with Lord Knutsford and Mr. Currie, the permanent Secretary of the Foreign Office. A work of supreme difficulty, requiring the most delicate handling, was intrusted to Mr. Currie, relating to engagements of England to protect Belgium.

King Leopold during his recent visit pressed for an answer as to what practical co-operation England would give under the existing treaty for the defense of Belgian neutrality in the event of war. Lord Salisbury, according to a report credited within the Foreign Office, promised English aid by a fleet and contingent troops, if demanded; to defend Antwerp, leaving the Belgian army free for defensive operations in the forts of the Meuse.

Apart from the renewal of the concentration of troops on the Russian-Austrian frontiers and the Czar's demonstrative friendship for President Carnot, it is reported that an agreement has been reached between the French and Russian governments in regard to the simultaneous mobilization of troops and other movements in the event of war. The heads of the European Powers seemed to be informed of a Russian scheme of attack which is likely to declare itself in the autumn.

During the exit the police maintained perfect order, and the room, which had been packed, was emptied without a panic. The flames were afterward extinguished. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

To-day both parties have been resting on their arms.

The Story About Bismarck Denied.

BERLIN, March 28.—Friends of Prince Bismarck denounce as utterly untrue the story that he once proposed to France, through the late Prince Napoleon, to divide Western Europe between Prussia and France. PARTICULAR MENTION.

Charles W. Kellogg and family, of Mercer avenue, have returned to Brooklyn.

Mrs. T. B. Richards and Miss Theo Richards, of Germantown, were the guests of friends in this city Thursday.

Miss Kittie Doty, daughter of Freeholder Geo. W. Doty, of Union is visiting her cousins, the Misses Searing of Madison avenue.

Mrs. L. L. Manning, of West Seventh street, who is now in St. Vincent's Hospital, where she has had an operation performed, is doing nicely, and will probably be brought home in a few days.

Good Friday was appropriately observed by services at Holy Cross church yesterday morning. The altar and pulpit were heavily draped with black, and the sermon by the rector, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, was most instructive and impressive. There were services in the evening at which the entire vested choir were in attendance.

A number of progressive Plainfield girls have gotten up a sort of an anti-gossip crusade and are fining themselves one cent for each and every time they say anything of somebody else that they would not say to somebody's else face. It comes high to be sure, but it is a step in the right direction, and now that the girls have led it is in order for the boys to follow suit.

SWEET SINGERS IN REBELLION

NO EASTER EVENING MUSIC FROM THIS CHURCH CHOIR.

Because the Organist Who Played Secular Tunes and a Music Hall Cornet Was Dismissed, and Because Foreign Talent Was Being Imported, the Aggrieved Musical Combine Decided on a Strike.—To-morrow Evening to Decide Success or Failure.

The choir of the Park Avenue Baptist church have gone on a strike, and an immediate result of the disruption which now violently agitates the people of that body is the announcement to-day that the elaborate Easter service of song which had been planned to delight the senses of the congregation in that house of worship to-morrow evening will probably not take place.

The good Baptist brethren and sisters had been preparing to give a jubilee celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the church, for March 15, but were obliged to defer the event until Easter Sunday because the new pipe organ recently purchased from Anchor Lodge was not quite ready for service. Last Sunday the organ was completed, and was put in use for the first time. Garret T Dunham, who had acted as organist and choir leader during the period when the smaller organ now usurped by a grander one was the only source of instrumental music, manipulated the keys. He had not handled a pipe organ in some time, and was quite rusty in the work, but through the singing of most of the hymns he acquitted himself satisfactorily. Those who during the opening hymn were disposed to criticize his playing admitted, as the service went on, that he improved steadily, and that it was quite evident that with a proper amount of practice his work would soon be well-nigh irreproachable. The concluding hymn he played very well indeed—the worshipers thought—and they were feeling very amiably disposed towards him when the benediction was pronounced.

As they turned into the aisles, however, to leave for home, they were thunderstruck to hear come pealing forth in the big church organ's loudest tones the notes of the familiar air to which the well-known words of John Howard Payne's household song are sung. They had forgiven the organist all his previous errors of the day, but to have him play "Home Sweet Home" as a recessional, instead of the solemn sacred compositions they were used to hearing in other churches, was something they could not stand. So some of the congregation quietly sought out Mr. Dunham and gave him a general lecture on music and a special talk on appropriateness.

It was supposed that this was all there was to the matter, that Mr. Dunham would do better in the future, and that there would be no further break of the "Home Sweet Home" variety.

Wednesday night, however, the fact was disclosed, at a meeting of the choir, that Mr. Dunham had just received a letter from John J. Coard, Chairman of the Committee on Music of the Board of Trustees, informing him that within a month he must vacate the position of organist.

At first it was hinted, in a semi-humorous sort of way, that the reason Mr. Dunham was about to be deposed was because he played the naughty B-flat cornet in the wicked Music Hall orchestra, but the lynx-eyed tenors and bassos of the choir were not long in discovering that Mr Coard had arranged that his daughter, Miss Alice, was to supplant the "Home Sweet Home" virtuoso, and that she as organist was to contribute the organist's salary of $3 per Sunday to the organ fund of the church, so that the debt on the new organ could the more quickly be decreased. This was of course an excellent plan, as viewed by those having the financial welfare of the church at heart, and was more or less commended. There were, however, those who considered that Mr. Coard was acting on his own responsibility, without consulting those who had a right to consider such matters with him, and these were very free to express the opinion that Mr. Coard was rushing things with decidedly too much officiousness. This idea became more general among the choir members when it was learned that Mr. Coard had another new project in view which threatened to take from the regular singers of the church the honors of the Easter anniversary song service. Mr. Coard's idea was that two relatives of his from other cities should do the fine solo work of the different part songs, thus shutting out the local talent from anything except chorus exhibitions. When the choir heard of this every individual singer's nose immediately flew out of joint.

From open rebellion to determined conspiracy was but a step. The choir had never been extremely partial to Mr. Dunham, but now they were eager to make him a favorite, and they extended to him their fullest sympathy.

If you can't play—they said,—we won't sing, and that settles it.

Mr. Dunham protested that it would be a hardship to an innocent and suffering congregation to deprive them altogether of music on Easter Sunday morning, and after considerable talk, in the midst of which some very heated and exciting argument took place, a compromise was effected.

It was decided that the choir and the organist would stick by one another to the bitter end, and that after Easter Sunday, so far as they were concerned, there would be no music from the one without the other. For Easter itself a special programme was prepared. It was arranged that in the morning Mr. Dunham would play and the choir would sing, but that in the evening, when the special anniversary and Easter service was to be given, Mr. Dunham would fold his hands idly and the choir would keep their mouths firmly shut. Such an arrangement, it was anticipated, would cause great embarrassment to Mr. Coard and those who sided with him. It might be easy enough for Miss Coard to fulfill the duties of organist, but it would not be so easy to procure singers. The musical selections on the programme are especially difficult, and require a great deal of practice to be rendered at all well, and as about all the available choir material in the church is in the chorus of dissenters, the congregation will, it is expected, have extremely hard work to struggle through the songs The choir are very eager to see how Mr. Coard's imported talent will surmount the difficulty; and it is believed that Mr. Coard and his forces will receive an overwhelming defeat, and will as the result of the lesson the choir say that they intend to teach him submit with as much grace as possible to such terms of capitulation as the rebellious ones may impose. The choir expect to prove that they are absolutely indispensable to the church services, and as soon as they have won the battle they have entered on so determinedly they will insist that in the future no changes of programme shall be made until they have been consulted and have consented.

Some of the people in the church view this novel struggle for the mastery with a great deal of secret amusement, and some very good people are having an immense amount of quiet fun over the affair. Most of them, however, very properly deplore it. Some of those who have been given an inkling of the true inwardness of the matter anticipate a highly interesting time, whether the choir and the organist stick entirely to their resolve or not. The prominent speakers who are to be present from out of town will to these amusement-seekers be not the only attractions of the meeting at night, especially among such of the younger generation as are eager to see the musical services spoiled on the striking choir's account. Those who deprecate all such disruption are sincerely hoping that the quarrel will be promptly smoothed over and speedily settled.

Good Friday's Union Service.

The union services held last evening in the Crescent Avenue church, were conducted by the Rev. W. R. Richards. The choir sang Gounod's "O, Lamb of God", and Mr. Richards made some opening remarks, read a scripture lesson, offered prayer and led the congregation in responsive reading. The subjects and the clergymen who spoke thereon, were as follows:

The seven words of Christ on the Cross. "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do," Rev. K. P. Ketcham.

"Verily, I say unto thee, to-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise," Rev. C. Schenck.

I HAVE been a sufferer from catarrh for 20 years. I found immediate relief in the use of Ely's Cream Balm. Since using it I have not suffered a moment from headache, sore throat or loss of sleep, from which I previously suffered, caused by catarrh. I consider your Balm a valuable remedy.—R. G. Vanar, 56 Warren St., New York.

ELY'S Cream Balm is worth its weight in gold as a cure for catarrh. One bottle cured me.—S A. Lovell, Franklin, Pa.

NURSE PRICE'S STORY.

He Denies the Hospital Superintendent's Charge That He Left Mr. Wood to Kill Himself, and Says the Patient Was Eating in the Dining Room With Mrs. Walrod, When He Went.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your issue of the 25th, reporting the suicide of Capt. Wood, you say he was deserted by his nurse, which is untrue. The facts of the case are these: I was taken to the hospital by Capt. Grant to act as nurse. I was directed by Mrs. Walrod to the room of Mr. Wood, who in a rational manner asked me who I was, and what I wanted? When I told the object of my visit and who had sent me, he said he was sorry I had been put to the trouble, as he had made arrangements with his physician for a nurse.

I waited for Dr. Boone to come to the room. He confirmed Mr. Wood's statement, saying he had employed a hospital nurse, and asking me as a favor, if I would stay long enough to help Mr. Wood to dress as they were to remove him from the room he then occupied to one on the first floor? I did so.

While Mr. Wood and myself were sitting in the hospital office, the matron, Mrs. Walrod, came in and invited Mr. Wood to partake of a light supper in the dining room. Mr. Wood before going, said, "Mr. Price, I will not keep you any longer, as you have a long way to walk. I am sorry you were put to so much trouble. My nurse, whom I know, will be here by the time I have finished my supper." He then shook hands, with me and went to the dining room.

This was about 5:30 o'clock. I was at Mr. Sayers store on East Front street, at 6:15. The conversation attributed to me in which they say I told Mrs. Walrod I could not stay with so violent a man, is false and entirely untrue. The only words I addressed to Mrs. Walrod, was a request to send Dr. Boone to me, as I wanted to know from his own lips if Mr. Wood's statement about the engagement of a nurse was true, although from his manner I had no reason to doubt it. When I left the hospital Mr. Wood was in the dining room in the company of the matron. Had I known he was in the condition he was (which his appearance did not indicate) I would have staid with him at all hazards.

THOS. PRICE.

Policeman Cooney's Case.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Will you allow me space in your columns for a word or two about one of our policemen? I would like to know, in the first place, if policemen are not supposed to guard any and all city property, and if the hose of the Plainfield Fire Department does not belong to the city, and if it was not officer Cooney's duty to protect such hose, when asked to do so by an officer of one of our fire companies. Instead of doing so, Cooney is reported to have told the officer to "mind his own business." Cooney is also reported to have been searching for the officers of the fire company. I suppose fearing that charges would be made against him, to try to smooth things over; and, going to the house of the company, asked in a voice of gruffness if "that thing," mentioning the name of one of the members, was there. Was that the language of a gentleman, or one who is supposed to see that our city is protected from disorderly characters and see that they use proper language on our streets? I think not. Cooney is also reported to have said that certain firemen would better carry themselves mighty straight hereafter, or he would have them behind the bars. Has a policeman any right to make such threats, just because he was criticised for failing to perform his duty? I think a man, even if he does wear a blue coat and brass buttons, can at least be civil to our citizens, and especially to our fire men, who often are called on to risk life and limb to save the property, and even the lives, of our citizens.

CIVIL.

Mr. Serrell and the Marvels of Electricity.

(Contributed.)

L. W. Serrell, Jr., gave a most interesting address on electricity before a large audience at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, Thursday evening. The talk was illustrated throughout with fine stereopticon views. Mr. Serrell proved himself to be master of the situation.

From one step to another, from the magnetic bar of an early day down to the powerful dynamos now in use, was clearly delineated in the views upon the canvas and carefully described by the lecturer. It was indeed wonderful to see how much has been done with this remarkable agent and yet how little is known concerning it. You know that electricity has weight, can be measured in quantity, produces light without much heat as witnessed in street lamps, and yet almost instantly it will bring to welding heat the ends of large bars of iron so as to make them one; and as to motion it will encircle the earth in less than 40 seconds. It can be made in various ways, yet after all is said and done, what it is no man has as yet been able to tell. Since the trolley and storage systems have entered into the strife for the mastery, it may be considered within the range of possibility that one of the young men present that evening may travel from Plainfield to Washington having his bicycle propelled by this wonderful agent.

We cannot excuse people for being cross when they suffer from colds. They are often too mean to buy a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, which would restore their good nature.

Important! Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain, is only 25 cents.

The First Match on the New Alleys.

The Crescent team will consist of Van Winkle, Thiers, Haven, Vail, Rogers, Reed, Teel, Davis, Pelletreau and Van Emburgh.

The Monroe Chapel Dedication.

The Monroe Avenue Methodist Episcopal chapel will not be dedicated to-morrow, as announced in some of the papers. The dedication is to take place one week from to-morrow, April 5, as first told of in The Visitor and THE PRESS. Bishop Andrews, of New York, will preach at 10:30 a. m.. There will be a platform meeting at 3 p. m., and the Presiding Elder, Dr. A. L. Brice, will preach at 7:30 p. m. The exercises will be very interesting, and all are invited.

The Difference.

"The Easter bonnet is now all the rage", saith the scribe, but he forgets to add that the rage is all with the chap that has to pay for one. This sensation is unknown to the investor at Colliers', for the jewelry there is as reasonable in price as in excellence and variety it is unsurpassable.

—At a meeting of Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, Thursday night, the charge made against policeman Kiely, that he had clubbed one of the members, was considered. It was agreed to drop the matter provided Mr. Kiely would write a personal letter of apology, which he promised to do. In this connection the Board of Engineers wish it stated that they have always found Mr. Kiely a courteous, efficient and faithful assistant at fires.

Silver Creek's Firebug Caught.

SILVER CREEK, N. Y., March 28.—Quick work by the fire department saved the business centre of this town from destruction last night. The fire was started by the same incendiary who has been operating here for a year. He has been finally detected. Herman Gugler, who has long been under suspicion, and was discharged from his position as night watchman some time ago owing to the suspicion that he was the firebug, is the guilty one.

The mystery remains unsolved.

RELIGIOUS MATTERS

ALL-REPAYING LOVE.

Through the long, toilsome day she went
With quiet sweetness, everywhere.
I watched her tender, tireless hands
Caressing here, relieving there.
No recompense, no answering smile,
No words of cheer were hers the while.

"Tell me, thou patient one," I cried,
"What secret hope sustains thine heart,
That through a thankless ministry
So gentle unto all thou art?"
She turned on me her soft eyes light:
"I need them not. He comes to-night."

Behold an all-repaying love!
What matters, when the day is past,
The burdens others on her laid
If in His arms she rests at last?
The darkest way to her is bright
Since He who loves her comes at night.

O soul, whose hope is high as Heaven,
Cease thine unprofitable plaint!
A watcher, waiting for thy Lord,
How can'st thou grieve, how dar'st thou faint?
Work on, rejoice, while yet 'tis light!
Thy Bridegroom's voice may call to-night.

A day of toil—what matters it?
So short, this life of tears and pain.
Lift up thy face! What dost thou fear?
Thou hast not given thine all in vain.
Soon thou shalt walk with Him in white.
Who knoweth? It may be to-night.
—Adelaide Allison, in Inter-Ocean.

THE RELIGIOUS BEE.

Fill the Hive with Workers and Queens, and Not with Drones.

The bee is a universal emblem of industry. With tireless activity the little worker flies hither and thither, lighting on every fragrant blossom, and eagerly extracting the hidden sweetness that there may be an abundant supply of food stored up for the cold months of the winter. Small though he is, he not only supplies his own needs and provides for a numerous family, but he furnishes a delicate luxury for man. What more natural, therefore, than that "busy as a bee" should become a proverb in all languages?

The bee is in some respects a good model for the Christians. Every church ought to be a hive of bees. But we must be careful that we select the right kind of a bee for our pattern; for there are several kinds of bees, and they are not of equal value.

First, there are the drone bees. They are the best-looking bees in the hive, large, round and sleek; and they bustle about and make a great deal of noise. As you watch them, you might easily believe that they were the busiest of the hive's busy inhabitants. They rush here and there with an air of great importance, and each one makes more noise than ten workers; but it is all humbug. They never do any work. They do not even gather their own food from the flowers, but lazily gorge themselves with the honey that others have gathered.

Then there is the worker bee, a quiet, unpretentious little fellow, who wastes no time and makes little noise. He feels that he has an important work to do in the world, and he does it as rapidly and as diligently as possible. When he flies, he goes in straight lines, that he may accomplish his purpose the more quickly—whether it be to extract the sweetness from some flower, or to plant his sting in the most vulnerable part of some enemy.

Most important and valuable of all bees is the queen bee. She is a great stay-at-home. No one ever sees her outside the hive, nor does she make any noise unless a special occasion calls for it. Yet all recognize her superiority. She is the mother of all. Without her the hive would soon be empty. In her seclusion she exerts a controling influence and receives universal homage.

In studying the bee as a model, be sure you do not select a drone. We have enough of them in the church already. You may easily recognize them. They are the disciples whose sole office in the church is to bustle about and talk and criticise. They never feel any personal responsibility. They are perfectly satisfied to let others do the work and take all the responsibility, while they enjoy the fruits of their labor. Wherever found, drones are useless. Their numbers are not a source of strength, but may prove a fatal weakness.

Much more to be desired are the workers, the people who say little but are always busy. Whenever an opportunity presents itself to do some good work, they eagerly seize it. No duty is neglected; no responsibility is evaded. The work which is laid upon them they perform faithfully and well; and each one feels that he must do his part, not only in sustaining the spiritual life of the Christian hive, but in giving food to those who are without. Theirs is an important place in the kingdom of God, and we never can have too many of them. Imitate them, by all means, especially in one thing—the bee line. Don't waste time by roundabout methods.

The queen bees are as few as they are valuable. They are rare souls. Deborah, the bee of the Scriptures, was one of these. "A mother in Israel" was her chosen title. And the queen bees are usually "mothers in Israel." They are not the women who shine on public occasions. They are only workers. The queens are busy in the home. They are those blessed motherly persons who attract young people to them, and in their quiet way exert a sanctifying influence throughout the entire community. There are always enough disciples ready to fill the prominent places, to make a great noise, and to do conspicuous work. The church has no lack of these. But to-day, as ever, there is need of those who, in the quiet seclusion of ordinary life, amid the cares and duties of the home, set an example of true godliness, sending forth a spiritual influence that reaches many hearts about them, and becomes a power for good in many lives.—Rev. G. H. Hubbard, in S. S. Times.

HALLOWED REST.

God's Place of Observance for the Christian Sunday.

The rest which God entered upon as the sequence of His creative activity is man's model of rest. His model, not merely for the weekly abstinence of the Sabbath, but for all His seasons of rest. How did God set apart His own rest, lifting the period of its duration into a holy prominence, excelling the periods that had preceded it? What is it that hallows rest? Our Lord's defence of His Sabbatic service rendered to man by the assertion of His Father's continued activity throws much light upon the question: "My Father worketh until now; and I work."

He, then, misconceives the facts who construes God's rest as inaction. The great Father has not been idle these ages that have elapsed since His creative energy culminated in the production of man. God's long Sabbath, still in progress, has been one long season of the activity of love. When the work of creation was consummated then especially began love's opportunity to serve. Thenceforward Divine energy spent itself in sustenance; Divine wisdom in oversight. Immediately thereafter arose the necessity that love should redeem or man be lost. Never has the Divine energy of the Father ceased to manifest itself as love. Redemption is the first fruit of God's rest. It was the foremost sign of the Redeemer's oneness with His Father that His love was never idle. Even as a Jew, loyal to the law of the Sabbath, He never ceased, on that and every day, to render such service to others as only love can prompt. It is love, then, and the service which is love's energy that alone hallow rest.

He who would lift the first day of the week into an exceling place in his life must make it a day for the promotion of redemption. An idle Sunday is in no sense a Sabbath. To lounge, to relax the mind with the trash of social and political gossip, or to inflame the mind with the last sensation, to spend the day in selfish ease or in dull inaction—all this is the day's desecration. Such lazy inaction sink the day to a level lower than that of those days which are of necessity filled with the compulsory service and the stimulated sacrifices of business or household life. To turn the thoughts from self to God; to use the cessation of energy from material objects as an opportunity for its transformation by turning it to spirtual ends; to think of others and to act for them, from choice and not because we must, whether this is done in the genial ministries of home or in the fellowships of God's house; to live the life of love to a degree for which other days allow no opportunity—this is the hallowing of the Lord's day, its assimilation to the Sabbath of God.—Christian Inquirer.

"There Is But One Book."

The midnight sky adorned with stars is regarded very differently by a peasant to what it is by an astronomer. The former has no such conception of the glory of the heavens as the latter has. He has visions of magnificence through his hours of lonely vigil with his telescope utterly incomprehensible to an untrained eye. Thus it is with the Bible. Only by study and familiarity with it shall we know its treasures of instruction and comfort. As we make it our daily meditation we shall understand how truly the great novelist spoke when dying: "There is but one book."—Christian Inquirer.

Bound to Rise.

You can not keep a good man down. God has decreed for him a certain elevation to which he must attain. He will bring him through though it cost him a thousand worlds. There are men constantly in trouble lest they shall not be appreciated. Every man comes in the end to be valued at just what he is worth. How often you see men turn out all their forces to crush one man or set of men. How do they succeed? No better than did the government that tried to crush Joseph, a Scripture character.—Talmage, in N. Y. Observer.

RAM'S HORN BLASTS.

—God is nearest to those who need Him most.

—The most beautiful thing on earth is a Christian character.

—No one can be happy who is not doing something to help other people.

—No greater question can concern us than the question of our standing with God.

—No man can do a good deed with a good motive without being lifted up by it toward God.

—If you want to make yourself miserable, the easiest way to do it is to become a fault-finder.

—You can not expect your children to be religious unless you make religion attractive in the home.

—People who have learned to be patient, have learned something that will cause the devil a good deal of worry.

—So long as the devil can have the first chance at the children, he don't care how high we build our church steeples.

—The less religion people have, the better they are satisfied with themselves. The more they have, the better they are satisfied with God.

Sign of the Three Balls in Pera.

Pawnshops are incredibly numerous and packed with treasures of every description; diamonds, pearls, emeralds; splendid laces, articles of virtu, table service, and toilet sets of solid gold and silver (including pieces for all the common uses of the bedroom, betokening the extravagance of an age when the Andes poured out streams of precious metal that were thought to be inexhaustible); for since these latter days of poverty the wolf has been kept from many doors by the surreptitious sale of household treasures, heirlooms, keepsakes, and even rich, old-fashioned garments which their dead grandmothers wore. It is quite the fashion here to visit pawnshops; and the tourist can not do better than go on tours of inspection and perhaps convert some coined silver into jewely in antique settings, which may sometimes be bought for a tithe of their real value.—Lima Letter.

—Very few hearts are ever so badly broken that a little golden salve will not make them better than new.—Boston Traveller.

THE DOLL-LADY.

ONCE there was a sweet doll-lady,
Came from Paris o'er the sea,
Wore a cloak of finest satin,
Ostrich plumes her velvet hat in,
And a gown all 'broidery.

Ah, her manners were so charming!
She could sing, and curt'sy low,
Walk and dance a minuet—
Sweetest doll you ever met,
You'd have surely said, I know.

But alas, this sweet doll-lady
Came to visit small Miss Rose;
First she lost her golden tresses,
Then she lost her lovely dresses,
Then she lost her eyes and nose.

She was soon a helpless cripple;
She was never put to bed,
Could not sing she was so jaded—
All her waxen roses faded,
And at last she lost her head.

What this pretty, sweet doll-lady
Must have thought, is plain to me,
Just before her execution—
That a new French revolution
Had arisen this side the sea.

SQUEAKIE AND KITTY.

A Couple of Queer Friends Who Had a Very Good Time.

Dinah was a little black kitten, and Squeakie was a pretty gray mouse. Squeakie was not afraid that Dinah would eat her up, because they were very dear friends.

Did you ever hear of a cat and a mouse that were dear friends?

Well, it happened this way. One evening little Donald Duncan lay upon the rug in front of the open fire watching the sparks snap out and sail up the chimney. Mamma sat near by writing letters. Just as Donald's eyes were getting sleepy he heard outside the low window a weak little "Mew! Mew!"

"Mamma, I hear a kitty!" he exclaimed, jumping up, his eyes wide open.

"Yes, I hear it too," said mamma. "Open the window and see if it will come in."

Donald did so, and, sure enough, there was a tiny black kitten shivering with the cold. He brought it in, gave it some warm milk, and made it a comfortable bed in the woodshed. The next day Donald tried to find the owner; but nobody claimed the little wanderer, and so it came about that the kitten was his.

One morning, soon after this, when mamma went to the pantry, she found a young mouse caught in the trap, but in such a way as not to be hurt.

"Oh, don't kill the dear little thing! Let's keep him, mamma," said Donald. "I can tame him; I know I can mamma!"

"Squeak! Squeak!" said Mousie; and that settled it.

Donald had an empty bird cage, and he put Squeakie into that at first. Of course Mousie felt very strange at first, but he soon became so tame that he would eat from Donald's finger, and it was not long before Donald could take him out and feed him from his hand.

After awhile little Dinah was allowed to come in the room and be introduced to Squeakie, but was taught not to touch him. She soon learned that Squeakie was to be her playmate, and so it came about that they ate from the same saucer, played hide-and-seek, and often took a nap together. But the funniest sight of all was to see Dinah walking proudly about with Squeakie on her back. That always made Donald laugh. Wouldn't you have laughed too?—Amelia A. Frost, in Our Little Ones.

What the Others Would Have.

Little Carl was calling on a friend a few days ago, and in the course of the conversation the little man remarked enthusiastically: "I wish I had all the dollars there are in the world!"

"Why, Carl," his host exclaimed, "what would all the other folks do if you had all the dollars?"

Promptly the reply came: "Oh, they'd have the cents!"—Harper's Young People.

LUCILE GREGG'S MISTAKE.

She Had a Good Time But Eventually Lost Her Self-Respect.

Lucile Gregg was a pretty girl, and fond of a good time. Whenever there was any fun or mischief afoot, Lucile was a leader. She liked to do things a little daring, just a bit "shocking," and enjoyed seeing some of her friends open their eyes, and hear them exclaim: "O Lucile, how can you!"

"I'm not a Miss Prim," she would reply. "I'm not too strait-laced to have a good time."

Lucile had many admirers with whom she had what she termed "summery flirtations." "There's no harm in it," she said. "It's just for a good time."

Last summer Lucile went to a fashionable resort in the White mountains. While there she made the acquaintance of George Martin, a young man of good family in New York. He showed Lucile attention, and sometimes she thought, with a little fluttering of her heart, that this might be more than a "summery flirtation."

One day George was joined by his mother and two sisters, and Lucile looked forward with mingled pleasure and anxiety to meeting them; but a whole day passed, and George did not offer to introduce her to his relatives. Lucile was somewhat annoyed at this omission, but did not suppose it was intentional until, just at dusk, she was sitting alone in a sheltered corner of the balcony, when she heard voices in one of the rooms.

In answer to some question, she heard George Martin say: "Oh, that's Lucile Gregg."

"Why, then she must be Belle Merrill's cousin," responded a lady's voice. "You must introduce us. You know Miss Gregg, of course?"

"Yes, I know her," George answered, "but I don't believe you'll care to make her acquaintance."

Lucile ought to have left without hearing more; but the temptation to learn more was too great so, with burning cheeks, she lingered and listened.

"Why, she belongs to one of those old Boston families," the lady exclaimed, "and why shouldn't we care to make her acquaintance?"

"Well, she does well enough to talk with and treat to ice cream and confectionery, but she—well, she isn't the girl a man would like for a wife, or would like his sisters to choose for a companion. She's a little too loud—"

Lucile waited to hear no more. Hot with angry shame and humiliation, she fled to her room. And she had thought that George Martin esteemed her. She knew his real opinion of her now.

Wave after wave of wounded pride and mortification went over her as she recalled certain acts of her own; twice she had smoked cigarettes in George Martin's presence and he had professed to admire her "splendid independence," and all the while he was thinking her loud!

Lucile did not spare herself in this humiliating retrospect. "I never will do so again!" she cried, at length. "No one shall ever have a chance to call me loud after this!"

Whether she keeps her resolution or not Lucile Gregg will never think of certain events of that summer without a thrill of shame.

Without a thought of wrong, save in merry pursuit of a good time, many a young girl has been led to some foolish act which has left a stain on her reputation and caused her hours of humiliation afterward.—Youth's Companion.

THE CHAMELEON'S SKIN.

The Creature Can Change Its Color When ever It Wants To.

The chameleon is to many people as mythical as the salamander, but it is a real creature, although its natural history is burdened with many fables of antiquity. It supplied not a few of those medicines to which absurd credulity ascribed the most marvelous powers, and having the power of fasting for a long period was credited with the faculty of living on air.

The phenomenon of changing color is, however, a scientific fact, and is thus explained:

If we take three pieces of glass, and distribute over one several small drops of brown paint, by pressing on this with another glass, the drops are spread out, giving to the whole glass a delicate brown tint. If we now separate the glasses a little the paint collects in drops and the tint partly disappears. If we take the third glass and place on it a few drops of green paint and then press it against one of the others a green tint will show through the layer of brown dots.

The skin of the chameleon is, roughly speaking, made up of three such layers, with dots of pigment called chromatophores between them. These dots may be contracted or spread out in thin layers, the result of the color depending on the color of the chromatophores affected.

The power of adopting color to surrounding objects is known to naturalists as "protective resemblance," and many cases of it are to be found in both the animal and vegetable kingdoms.

An Intelligent Youth.

"Johnny, six from 9,005 leaves how many?"

"905."

"Go to the blackboard and show how you get that result."

"9-0-0-5," wrote Johnny. "Six out," rubbing out the six, "leaves 9-0-5, which equals 905."—Harper's Young People.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

A Perfect Success. 7

The Rev. A. Antoine of Refugio, Tex., writes: As far as I am able to judge, I think Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is a perfect success, for any one who suffered from a most painful nervousness as I did. I feel now like myself again after taking the Tonic.

A Strong Proof.

ORILLIA, ONT., CANADA, June, '88.

I was first attacked by epilepsy in November 1879; residing in New York I consulted the best physicians, but they could only arrest the disease, the honest ones told me then there was no cure for it—I was compelled to give up my occupation and return to Canada in 1879; since then I tried innumerable remedies and consulted some of the best physicians, but nothing benefited me until I began to use Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in September '88, since then I had not a single attack.

STABBED TO DEATH

Brutal Murder by an Italian Near Camden N. J.

HE KILLED HIS SISTER-IN-LAW.

The Assassin Captured and Lodged in the County Jail.

He Meant to Kill His Wife But Was Prevented by His Victim—The Girl Sank Down and Died Before the Eyes of Her Parents—A Young Man Murders His Companion.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 30.—The body of a plump, pretty Italian girl, 17 years old, lies in the Morgue, with a great, gaping stiletto wound in the centre of her breast. She was Giovino Donore, and she gave up her life to save her sister from the murderous fury of her husband. Her murderer, Dominico Fileppo Cocco, aged 29, is safe in the County Jail, and the authorities have a score of witnesses to show that Cocco was bent on murder when he went down from Philadelphia on Saturday night to see his wife, Giovino's sister, from whom he has been separated since January 12.

Cocco's wife lived with her parents at Cedar Brook, a little hamlet on the Camden & Atlantic Railroad, about twenty miles from this city. Cocco blamed his wife's relatives for his marital troubles, and, going to their house, called his wife out. The parents endeavored to interfere, and Cocco, drawing a long-bladed stiletto, threatened to kill the old man, Michall Pinto. Giovino heard him and declared dramatically, "You shall not kill him; you must kill me first."

Cocco glared at her angrily and walked away with his wife. Giovino followed them. Just as Cocco drew his stiletto upon his wife the girl stepped between them and caught the infuriated Cocco's arm. The latter seized the girl about the waist. With his left arm he bent her body forward and gave his stiletto one fierce upward thrust. The girl's blood followed in a stream, and she sank before the eyes of her parents, sister and several others, and died in a few minutes.

Cocco had brought a bundle of clothes with him and had left them at the railroad water tank. He went directly to them, threw off his bloody cap and shirt, replacing them with others, and drew on a pair of overalls. He then took to the woods, where he remained all night, and in the morning boarded the first train for this city. He was captured at the depot in this city by Officer Hart.

He was given a hearing before the mayor and admitted the murder, saying that the girl had struck him in the head with an axe. He was committed.

STABBED TO DEATH.

John Boyle of Kearney, N. J., Murdered by His Companion.

KEARNEY, N. J., March 30.—John Boyle, 20 years old, was stabbed and almost instantly killed about 2 a. m., near his home in Oak street, by John Gildea, 21 years old. They had been companions and playmates from infancy.

The young men were employes of the Marshal Linen Thread Works and are related by marriage. They had been out all night drinking.

While they were crossing the Bridge street bridge over the Passaic River Boyle and Gildea began to quarrel. They kept it up along Passaic avenue to Johnson avenue and were about to come to blows when Policeman Feeley ordered them to go home or he would arrest them. They went into Oak street and continued their wrangling but a few doors from Boyle's home.

Gildea finally made a remark which was particularly offensive to Boyle, and the latter threatened to whip him. Gildea replied, "If you strike me, I will stab you."

This angered Boyle more than ever and he said with an oath: "I can lick you, knife or no knife, with one hand."

At the same time he placed his left hand behind his back, called upon O'Brien to tie it for him, and made a lunge at Gildea with his right. The latter retaliated by plunging the sharp pointed knife into Boyle's breast, just above the heart. Boyle cried out that he was stabbed and fell to the ground. Gildea ran and O'Brien gave chase, but returned in a few minutes to where Boyle lay bleeding.

"I'm dying, Jimmy," said the injured man. "Go for a doctor and a priest."

Boyle was carried into his home at No. 3 Oak street, but died before the priest arrived. Gildea tried to escape from the city, but was finally captured. Boyle was married 16 months ago, and besides his young wife leaves a four-months-old daughter. Gildea, although never before in serious trouble, has an unsavory reputation. He works all winter, it is said, and then in the summer tramps about the country.

Moved Into the Government Building.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 30.—The Rochester postoffice has moved into the new government building at the corner of Church and Fitzhugh streets, after having occupied quarters in the Reynolds Arcade, one of the old landmarks of the city, for about 20 years.

FAMOUS MURDER TRIAL.

Remington of Fargo Sets Up Hypnotism as His Defense.

FARGO, N. D., March 30.—It is possible that the trial of Joseph Remington for the murder of J. T. Flett may become one of the most famous cases in the United States.

As the case at present stands it will be almost impossible to convince any jury of his innocence on the grounds of insanity or any of the common pleas, hence it is almost a settled fact that the defense will be on the same lines as that of Gabrielle Bompard in Paris last year, wherein it was claimed and so clearly proven a case of hypnotism that her accomplice was sentenced to death, while she received a term of imprisonment.

The theory in the Remington case, it is understood, will be that he committed the act while hypnotized by the Minneapolis woman whose name has been so frequently mentioned since he murdered Flett.

Competent authority, who have visited Remington in jail with this theory in view, are said to be of the opinion that he is so constituted as to be susceptible to mesmeric influence. Should this line of defense be adopted it will probably be the first one of the kind in the United States.

MRS. SCHMIDT MAY ESCAPE.

A Lack of Proof that She Murdered Her Sister.

MEDIA, Pa., March 30.—The evidence in the trial of Caroline Schmidt, charged with the murder of her sister, Emma Pfitzenmeyer, is all in, and after argument to-day the case will be given to the jury.

There is very little doubt entertained but that the woman will be acquitted, simply because there is a lack of evidence to convict her. The prosecution has failed to make out a strong case, and she will owe her freedom to the superior generalship of her attorneys.

Five Parlor Cars Burned.

PHILADELPHIA, March 30.—Shortly after 8 o'clock last night fire was discovered in the conductors' room of the Reading Railroad Company at the Knight's Point ferry slips, and in less than an hour the entire property, including the three slips and eight coaches, were destroyed. Three alarms summoned the entire department to the scene. A shifting engine removed the passenger coaches, while citizens pushed several other cars out of danger. In spite of their efforts five parlor cars, valued at $8,000 each, were destroyed. The flames spread so rapidly that Evan Fox, night ticket agent, was caught in his office and narrowly escaped death. In his efforts to get out he was badly burned.

Pronounced Koch's Lymph a Failure.

TORONTO, March 30.—The hospital medical authorities of Canada have pronounced Koch's lymph as a specific for consumption a failure. Dr. W. W. Henderson of the Kingston Hospital says it afforded slight temporary relief in one or two cases only, and that he does not consider it generally effective when used for other diseases. The doctors of the Montreal General Hospital declare that although every precaution was taken the lymph failed to cure in any case, and its use has been discontinued.

A Religious Fraud.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 30.—Investigation shows that Henry C. Berg, the alleged Franciscan monk, who was baptized into the Christian church on Friday night, is a fraud from Louisville, Ky., who has been doing a thriving business as an "apostate," being quite impartial as between denominations in bestowing his faith. He has probably been baptized in more styles than any other man in America.

Another Doctor Claims It.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 30.—Dr. O. M. Myers, of this city, discovered the influenza microbe over a year ago, which was announced recently by Dr. Gentry, of Chicago. Myers was quoted in a Rochester newspaper at the time of the discovery, and his description of the microbe organism corresponds exactly with that described by Dr. Gentry.

950 Deaths in Chicago Last Week.

CHICAGO, March 30.—There were 950 deaths here last week from pneumonia and kindred ailments, the largest number ever recorded in one week in this city. A careful estimate justifies the statement that nearly a quarter of a million people in this city are under medical treatment. Every branch of business is crippled by the prevailing sickness.

Weavers Reject the Offer.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 30.—The striking weavers of the Wanskuck mills rejected the offer of Superintendent Metcalfe that they work six months at the new list prices, and then if they are still dissatisfied and are not making as good pay as any operatives in the same line in New England the difference will be made up.

Schafer Accepts Carter's Challenge.

CHICAGO, March 30.—Jacob Schafer has formally accepted Eugene Carter's challenge for the championship of the world at fourteen-inch balk line billiards, and after a conference with Charles J. Parker, representing Carter, May 8 was selected as the date and the Central Music Hall, Chicago, as the place for playing

THE SIOUX UNEASY

Preparing for Another Indian War at Pine Ridge.

SECRET COUNCILS BEING HELD.

Couriers Sent Out in All Directions Asking for Help from Other Tribes.

Mrs. Logan Contradicts a Rumor About Herself—The Fuller Wedding To-night—Peru Will be Represented at the World's Fair—The Bennington to Make Another Trial Trip To-morrow.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—A dispatch from Pine Ridge Agency says that the probability of another Indian war is very promising, for the young men are becoming uneasy, and the more conservative ones are holding secret conferences. War is in the air. Couriers have been sent out in every direction to the various agencies to ask for the co-operation of the other tribes should their assistance be required, and in almost every case assent has been given.

The Sioux feel deeply the cut given to them at the conference at Washington. They say that they were snubbed; that no attention was paid to what they had to say, and very much ill-feeling exists among them.

They see around them that the government is making active prepartions to quell any disturbance that may arise, and this excites them. They know the strength of our government and that without reinforcements the Indian can do nothing; hence their call upon their allies, which has met with such ready response. Councils are being secretly held in every Indian camp.

MRS. LOGAN'S DENIAL.

She Silences a Rumor that Hinted at a Probable Marriage.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Gen. John A. Logan's widow has thought proper to notice some rumors that have hinted at a probable marriage. Mrs. Logan says to the society reporter of a local newspaper:

"If I had no sentiment about remaining the widow of Gen. Logan—and I have—I have no desire or need to marry since, thanks to Congress and the General's friends, I am well provided for, and I now enjoy the friendship of many good men who were his friends, and whose wives are my friends. Why should I want to sacrifice all these blessings and associations of 30 years of wedded life for the uncertainty of other ties?"

The Brazilian Treaty.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The Brazilian newspapers, which arrived here in the mails on Saturday, contained little else than the discussion of the reciprocity treaty with the United States. While the remonstrances to the treaty are very loud and earnest, they come almost entirely from English, French and German supporters, who have reason to fear that they will lose a large share of their trade because of the advantages offered in the treaty to the merchants and manufacturers of the United States. The Brazilian government is prepared to carry the treaty into effect upon April 1, and necessary instructions have been issued to all the collectors of customs.

Peru Will Make a Display.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Lieut Wm. E. Safford of the United States navy, special commissioner of the World's Columbian Exposition to Peru, reports that he was presented to the President of that republic by Minister Hicks and was received with the greatest cordiality. The President assured him that Peru would accept the invitation to make a display at the exposition, and that commissioners would be appointed very shortly to secure a proper exhibit of the resources and products of that country.

Another Trial Trip To-morrow.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—To-morrow has been set by Secretary Tracy for a new trial of the gunboat Bennington. It will be remembered that the Bennington was given a trial in Long Island Sound last month but she failed to meet the contract requirements concerning horse power. The contract called for a development of 3,400 horse power but the vessel developed only 3,312.

To Be Wedded To-night.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Miss Grace Weston, daughter of Chief Justice Fuller, to-night will become the bride of Archibald Lapham Brown. Rev. Dr. Douglas is to perform the ceremony at 8 o'clock at St. John's Episcopal Church.

An Express Train Jumps the Track.

PHILADELPHIA, March 30.—The rear portion of the eastern express on the Pennsylvania Railroad—four Pullman coaches—jumped the track at Devon Station and toppled over. Miss Goddard, of St. Louis, was quite severely injured, she having four ribs broken. C. V. Kipp, of New York; Frank Hardy, of New York; D. V. Roberts, of New York, and George T. Cram, of St. Louis, were very slightly injured.

Big Winning at Monte Carlo.

LONDON, March 30.—A dispatch from Monte Carlo says that an Englishman there has succeeded in winning 92,000 francs at roulette.

Killed by a Boiler Explosion.

SCRANTON, Pa., March 30.—Joseph McGovern was killed and Patrick McCauley severely injured in a boiler explosion in the Grassy Island Mine, near Olyphant.

Death of Warden Osborne.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Warden Charles Osborne of the Tombs Prison died last night of consumption.

DR. CROSBY DEAD.

The Well-Known New York Divine Carried Off by Pneumonia.

NEW YORK, March 30.—The Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby died last evening of pneumonia, after a short illness.

Less than two hours before his death he managed to write with his own hand a few lines of farewell to his family, especially for his son and daughter, who are in Cairo, Egypt.

Dr. Crosby was born in this city in 1823, and comes from an old revolutionary family. He graduated from the University of New York in 1844, and in 1859 was appointed professor of Greek in Rutger's College. He held this position until 1863, when he took up the parsonage of the Fourth Avenue Presbyterian Church, with which he was associated at the time of his death. Dr. Crosby was chosen Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in 1873.

His interest in public affairs was shown a year since by the active part he took in the interest of the People's Municipal League movement, which aimed at the purification of local politics.

KILLED BY ITALIANS.

A Railway Foreman Torn to Pieces for Justifying the Lynching.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., March 30.—Upon the railroad lines known as the Camden system in the centre of the State 700 Italians are working and it is only once a week that news reaches them. At Alton the report of the New Orleans riot was received and while the Italians were discussing it among themselves the foreman of the gang, a Scotchman named McCauley, said the citizens of New Orleans did just right.

The Italians became enraged and killed McCauley. They then mutilated his body in a terrible manner.

The excitement among the Italians when they read the particulars of the killing of their countrymen was intense. No arrests have been made.

Shot His Boarder.

PHILADELPHIA, March 30.—John Hayes, aged 27, a locomotive fireman, surprised his wife in the morning in the room of Andrew McFarland, who boarded with him. He seized a gun which stood close by, and, placing the weapon almost against McFarland's shoulder, fired. A frightful wound was the result. McFarland was taken to the hospital, where his arm was amputated. The doctors think there is a chance of his pulling through. Hayes surrendered himself to the police. He says the discovery of his wife's infidelity was a great surprise to him, and that his sudden home-coming was purely accidental, as he had never even suspected her.

Futile Canadian Cabinet Meeting.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 30.—A lengthy meeting of the Cabinet was again held with reference to the proposed visit of Sir Charles Tupper to Washington, but, as far as can be learned, without result. The manufacturing interests have taken a decided stand against Canada making any concessions by which the protection now given to Canadian manufactures would be lowered. On the other hand, Sir Charles Tupper points out the absurdity of going to Washington unless he is empowered to offer something to the United States beyond an exchange of natural products.

Delaware's Defaulting Treasurer.

DOVER, Del., March 30.—Ex-State Treasurer Herbert has not paid over to the State the $37,000 which he admits he owes, and which he declares he is willing to pay. Mr. Herbert, it is understood, has borrowed money from a trust company in Wilmington, and will turn it over just as soon as satisfaction is given on his bond, which was entered up when the trouble first came out.

A Recorder of Deeds Arrested.

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., March 30.—Considerable excitement has been caused by the arrest of Deputy Recorder of Deeds Fackenthall, on the charge of grand larceny and embezzlement. He is accused of stealing fees received for recording deeds and other duties and also with purloining deeds and valuable papers left with him to record. Several of the deeds were found in Fackenthall's possession.

Sunday Prize Fight.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 30—A prize fight occurred in Smithfield yesterday morning between James Kernachan, white, and Richmond Latham, colored, both of Providence, for a purse of $100. Six rounds were fought, when the negro committed a palpable foul, which was not allowed by the referee. The fight then broke up in a general row.

Knights to Hold a Mass Meeting.

NEW YORK, March 30.—A labor mass meeting has been called by the Knights of Labor to be held at Cooper Union on the evening of April 9 to protest against the course of the Rochester clothing manufacturers. T. V. Powderly, the National Master Workman of the Knights of Labor, will speak. District Organizer Wright will also address the meeting.

Committed Suicide in Mid-Ocean.

PHILADELPHIA, March 30. — William Hartley, an expert florist and rose culturist, who was bound for Manyunk, committed suicide in mid-ocean on March 23 by leaping overboard from the deck of the steamship Ohio. Every effort was made to save the unfortunate man, but without avail.

Pork Packing House Burned.

BALTIMORE, March 30.—Charles Rohr's packing house at Nos. 118 and 120 North Paca street was burned during the morning. It was considered the best appointed house for pork packing east of Cincago, and was built in 1882 by O. Hammond, jr. The building is owned by Brown & Sons. Loss, $70,000; insured.

Hon. James A. Lawless Dead.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 30.—Hon. James A. Lawless, of Bristol, died during the day of neuralgia of the heart, aged 71. Mr. Lawless was a prominent citizen of Bristol and was commodore of the Rhode Island Yacht Club.

FIGHTING AT SLIGO

Many Encounters Between the Irish Factions.

DR. TANNER ATTACKED BY A MOB

Several Times the Police Had to Charge on the Crowds With Clubs.

Unusual Activity in the War Office at Berlin—Germany Fears Trouble from Russia and France—A Quarrel Between the Count of Paris and the Duke of Orleans—Gen. Foster's Mission.

SLIGO, March 30.—There is great excitement here. Parnell took an excursion yesterday to Strandhill, where he began a personal canvass, but, meeting with a hostile reception, he returned at once to Sligo.

Maurice Healy, Sexton, Davitt and Collen started at 9 in the morning for Tireagh, addressing small gatherings until they reached Templeboy. There the people formed into two hostile groups. The Parnellites, armed with blackthorns, moved against the Healyites, with the intention of attacking them, but the police interposed with fixed bayonets, and the storm subsided.

At Dromore West the Parnellites stoned their opponents, and the police made a charge with clubs on the Parnellites.

Then Davitt led his followers off the ground amid a fusilade of stones. Several Anti-Parnellites were injured, and Mr. Pinkerton, M. P., had his head cut.

A telegram from Ballina states that Dr. Tanner was seriously assaulted there by a Parnellite mob.

GERMANY ALARMED.

A Belief that Russia and France Are Preparing for War.

LONDON, March 30.—Advices from Berlin state that unusual activity has prevailed for the past three days in the War Office, and that an unusual number of employes were busy at the office to-day.

The Emperor had a long audience with Chancellor Caprivi, and the high officials generally look as if something important was on the tapis.

There is no doubt that the movements of Russian troops near the German frontier, and the evidence of cordial intimacy between Russia and France have caused much anxiety in Berlin, and it is possible that the alarm caused by the apprehension of war may lead to important military changes. Besides the thought that Russia and France may be preparing for war, the German government is said to be very much stirred up over startling facts that have been disclosed in regard to the Socialistic propaganda in the army.

The military authorities have come into possession through a recent arrest of evidence going to show that the Social Democracy has been spreading its doctrines through the ranks both of the army and navy and has made numerous proselytes, and that the propagation of Socialism among the troops is not confined to Germany, but is systematically carried on throughout Europe, with the exception of Russia, and that all the armies of Western Europe are honeycombed with the subversive ideas of the pledged enemies of established institutions. The Kaiser, it is stated, has given directions that the evil shall be dealt with most radically so far as Germany is concerned, and any officer or soldier detected in propagating the prohibited opinions shall be punished with the utmost severity.

Gen. Foster Confident.

MADRID, March 30.—Gen. John W. Foster expresses himself as confident that his mission to Spain will be promptly successful. Gen. Foster said that he expected to be able to return to the United States in May. He remarked: "I do not see how Spain can refuse Mr. Blaine's proposals for reciprocity with Cuba, now that Brazilian sugar enters the United States free of duty. If Spanish arrogance carries the day, Cuba might be forced to seek relief by asking for admission to the sisterhood of the United States."

Trouble in the Russian Court.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 30.—The Lutheran grand duchesses are having a very unhappy time at the Russian Court since the conversion of the Princess Elizabeth, of Hesse, to the orthodox faith. They are regarded to some measure as the champions of Protestanism against Russia, and in the present strained relations between Russia and Germany this gives a pretext for much coolness on the part of the Imperial family.

Hennessy is a Pensioner.

LONDON, March 30.—The fact brought out in a Parliamentary debate, that Sir John Pope Hennessey is in receipt of a pension of one thousand pounds a year from the government, as a colonial ex-Governor retired on account of ill-health, has not strengthened the cause of the McCarthyites. The Government has in its power to send Mr. Hennessy back to duty at any time, on evidence that his health is improved, and as a matter of fact, he appears to be all right.

The Military Called Out.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Pa., March 30.—Company E, 10th Regiment of the National Guard, joined the deputy sheriffs guarding the Mortwood coke works at midnight. The Southwest Company officials say they have plenty of men to draw their coke, while the strikers assert that no coke will be drawn. The strike leaders have been busy trying to persuade the men from drawing the coke. Exciting times are expected.

Summer Hotel Burned.

NASHUA, N. H., March 30.—An unfinished summer hotel on Mt. Vernon was burned at noon. The loss is about $10,000; partially insured. The fire was probably of incendiary origin.

REWARD FOR ABDUCTORS.

Some Interesting Developments in the Perrien Case.

DETROIT, March 30.—Fresh interest has been added to the famous abduction case by Perrien's lawyers offering $2,000 for the arrest and conviction of the abductors or evidence that would lead to that end. Perrien would have offered the reward the day after his return, but Chief of Police Borgman advised him against doing that.

A break has been made between the Chief of Police and the Perrien family, because the former has accomplished nothing. Lawyers Maston, Cowles, and Jerome, who have charge of Perrien's interests, have drawn up charges to present to the Police Commissioners against the Chief, asserting that he neglected to work out clews that they furnished and claiming that had he done so Perrien's abductors would have been captured the first day. So far as can be learned the police are as much in the dark as they were the first day, although John Lyons, who keeps a livery stable and always goes bail for the crooks, is strongly suspected of knowing who they are.

Lyons was called upon by Perrien's lawyers and grew angry, telling them they had better cease trying to catch the abductors, or the first thing Perrien knew he would turn up missing again and would either give up his money or die. Perrien and his son-in-law applied to the Mayor for permission to carry revolvers, and it was granted.

NEW RAILROAD DEAL.

The Vanderbilts Secure a Transcontinental Line from Nova Scotia to Vancouver.

NEW YORK, March 30.—President Van Horne has concluded an arrangement with Chauncey M. Depew and H. Walter Webb of the New York Central Railroad by which the Canadian Pacific can bring its freight and passenger trains into New York over the West Shore and the Central.

The Canadian Pacific will come down from Brockville over the new bridge which is to be built at that point by way of the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg to Utica. The details of the agreement are to be worked out by the traffic officers of the two companies and is to go into effect immediately.

President Depew confirmed the deal in an interview and said the arrangement would give the Vanderbilts a transcontinental line from Nova Scotia to Vancouver, and that the foreign road would bring a great amount of business to the metropolis.

STEAMER IN DISTRESS.

She Struck a Rock in a Fog but Did Not Sink.

WHEELING, W. Va., March 30.—Early in the morning, while the steamer Lizzie Day was feeling her way through a dense fog near Powhattan, O., she ran into the West Virginia shore. She was then backed out, and the pilot, supposing he was holding her head up stream, ran toward the Ohio shore and struck a rock about 50 feet out. She hung there, which was all that prevented her from sinking in 20 feet of water.

One hundred and fifty passengers and a large cargo were on board. The Keystone State and the B. D. Wood responded to her distress signals and took off the passengers.

A Drunken Debauch Results in Murder.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, March 30.—Amos Weems was shot and instantly killed in this city last night by Horatio C. Caldwell. They are both young men and had been on a drunken debauch together all day Saturday. Caldwell took Weems to his home to sleep, and, while the husband was sleeping off his intoxication, Weems attempted to assault Caldwell's wife. He did not succeed in his designs, Mrs. Caldwell resisting vigorously. Weems then left the house. Yesterday the wife told her husband of the affair, and Caldwell armed himself with a revolver and went in search of Weems. Meeting him, Caldwell shouted "Hello!" and then opened fire upon Weems. Four shots were fired, two of them taking effect, one in Weems' lungs and the other in his side. Weems died inside of five minutes. Caldwell was locked up.

Hon. John Plankinton Dead.

MILWAUKEE, March 30.—Hon. John Plankinton, one of Milwaukee's most enterprising and wealthy citizens, died at his home in this city at 8:30 o'clock last night. Mr. Plankinton was stricken with paralysis over a week ago, and a short time ago he caught a cold which developed into pneumonia. He was born in the State of Delaware in 1820, and came to Milwaukee in 1844. He leaves a large fortune to two children.

The Galena Floated.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., March 30.—The United States steamer Galena has been floated and towed to Vineyard Haven.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Senator-elect John M. Palmer, of Illinois, is confined to his bed by sickness, and his friends fear the result.

Hugh J. Jewett, ex-president of the Erie railroad, is lying at the Hygeia Hotel at Fortress Monroe critically ill with acute bronchitis. A consultation of physicians has been called.

Anua B. Morrow, of 1,424 Kater street, Philadelphia, and forelady of the shoe factory at Carlisle, Pa., was found dead in her room at the Thudium House in Carlisle, death resulting from suffocation by gas.

William Flickinger, of Erie, Pa., an old gentleman of prominence, left his home in that city a few days since, and, getting caught in the last snow storm, wandered up a gulch and perished. He had become imprisoned in a deep canyon.

Work Ordered at Portsmouth Navy Yard.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 30.—A dispatch has been received at the Navy Yard from the Navy Department ordering work to be begun on outfits, consisting of spars, blocks, boats, furniture, &c., for the new cruisers now in course of construction. This will give employment to several hundred men at the yard.

THE DAILY PRESS.

J. A. DEMAREST, Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Peck has got the grip—on business.

—A social meeting of the Young Men's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. will be held to-night.

—The Elkwood bowling alley and billiard parlor is now open under the management of J. B. Miller.

—Doane & VanArsdale are anticipating a large spring trade, judging from the large assortment of shoes they carry.

—Hoagland's Express is prepared to remove or store furniture, and provides careful and experienced men for the work.

—"If" your want to find the longest and handsomest stock at the lowest prices, go to Edsall's; so reads his advertisement to-day.

—Easter was charmingly observed in the Plainfield churches yesterday. THE PRESS has already published most of the excellent programmes rendered.

—The second grand ball of Zephyr H. and L. Co. No. 1 will take place this evening at The Crescent. A good time is promised. Grand march at 9 o'clock.

—The United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association, agents in Plainfield for the celebrated Cleveland Seed Company, have a new advertisement in THE PRESS to-day.

—Over $1,300 was the amount of the plate collection in the Crescent Avenue church, yesterday morning, and it was after a Board of Foreign Missions sermon, too.

—The eighteenth anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society of the First Baptist church is being held to-day. This evening's meeting, at 7:45 o'clock, will be addressed by the Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D., of Philadelphia, "than whom", according to high authority, "no more powerful speaker or writer on the subject of missions can be found in America".

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Ex-Councilman Bowers is back from Old Point Comfort.

Edward Sebring has begun the erection of a new residence for himself and family on Emily street, near Vine.

Passenger Agent W. R. Babcock, of the New York and Boston R. R., and family, have given up their home on Webster place, this city, and leased apartments in West 93d street, New York.

The Rev. W. E. Honeyman gave an interesting talk on the subject of missionary work among the Indians in Alaska, before the Sabbath-school of the Trinity Reformed church yesterday afternoon.

George Wharton Edwards, of this city, has been awarded the medal for the best oil painting of a coast scene, by the State of Massachusets. The painting which won Mr. Edwards this honor now hangs in one of the rooms of the Union County Country Club.

A charming feature of the Easter song service at the Congregational church yesterday morning was Miss Julia Ketchain's delightful rendition of the solo parts in that sweetest of Easter hymns written by Dora Read Goodale and set to rarest music by N. H. Allen.

Mrs. E. B. Custer will give her famous lecture, "Garrison Life on the Frontier", at Seminary Hall to-morrow afternoon at half-past three o'clock, for the benefit of the Kitchen Garden. The audience will hear a most interesting story from a most pleasant and cultured woman.

John M. Crane, the hustling young insurance expert who declined the nomination for Mayor of this city, last Fall, when tendered him by a number of representative citizens who would have assured his election, has returned from a long business trip and is at home again in his new house on West Eighth street.

A number of invitations have been issued for a social meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association to be held in their new hall, 9 Park avenue, to-morrow evening at eight o'clock. The invitations are signed by: A. Titsworth, president; G. Thorn, secretary; and D. W. Littell, J. A. Hubbard, H. M. Sherwin, Aug. Stutzman and Wm. H. Harding, Board of Trustees.

The financial scribblers of the New York papers can't leave him alone. Town Topics says: "What an uncompromising bear Jake Kirkner is! He thinks that there is very little honesty in the average railroad president. Jake has not been making any money of late, and his lightning arti-t changes have not made him particularly popular with the bulls or the Grangers."

The Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D., author of "Many Infallible Proofs" and "The Crisis of Missions", and editor of The Missionary Review of the World, will speak in the First Baptist church this evening at 7:45 o'clock. Dr. Pierson has probably done more than any other living man with tongue and pen for the cause of missions during the past few years. He is a masterly orator.

ANOTHER STEP FORWARD TO-NIGHT.

Cut Out the Street Railway's Route Through North Park Avenue, and Let Her Go!

The Plainfield Street Railway Company proved its good faith and the honesty of its professions, last Friday, by placing at the disposal of the people of this city a special train on which they might journey to Newark and view the electric road propbsed for this city.

As was to be expected, the most stubborn obstructionists and loudest objectors declined to go. They never saw a road like it in their lives, nor read of one, yet they will continue to keep up their opposition on various pretexts. As the train was waiting to start, the editor of the Central Times strolled leisurely home to luncheon with nothing else to occupy his time or attention for the day. He did not go, yet he will this week again tell his readers what an unsightly, noisy and dangerous thing is this road that he has never seen.

Of the three car loads of citizens who did go, not one returned an objector. In fact, A. Venino and others who appeared by name before the Council a week ago as utterly opposed to the project, are working for it since they went to Newark and saw just exactly what it was.

THE PRESS trusts that to-night the Council will take a step further towards securing this great benefit for Plainfield. There are a few slight changes desirable in the proposed franchise—and the route through Park avenue north of the railroad should not be allowed—otherwise the ordinance cannot be adopted too quick.

A CLERICAL CONVERT.

Dr. Taylor, Who Was an Objector, Now Favors the Trolley, Since He Has Learned What He Is Talking About.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Having recently, in a supposed defence of my rights of property on Park and North avenues, signed a remonstrance against street cars run by the trolley electric method, in the conviction that they would obstruct these important thoroughfares, and prove a detriment to business interests there, I ask now the favor through your paper to say publicly that having subsequently visited Newark and inspected the working of the trolley rapid transit line I withdraw my objection as an entirely mistaken one. The system as now seen by me has not one of the objectional features I supposed, but many positive advantages over any other mode of street conveyance. A car run by this system carrying twenty persons would not occupy more than twelve feet of track, and, though driven swifter than horses, causes no dust, whereas a required number of horses and carriages for the conveyance of twenty persons would cover a hundred feet of roadway and raise all along their line of travel a suffocating cloud. Streets, whether intended for business or fashionable drives, are open and must necessarily be kept open for every form and shape of vehicle that public interest or private taste may require. Bakers', butchers' and grocers' wagons, furniture vans, builders' and lumbermen's long trucks, ash, garbage and offal carts, "odorless" excavators, and even the undertakers' hateful black dead-cart, invade our fairest and most cultivated precincts, and how, I ask, can we help it, even if we would? Much of the evil, however, would be obviated by the introduction of the trolley electric system of street cars, to say nothing of the positive advantages which must result from it not only to property owners but to all residents of Plainfield and vicinity.

J. P. TAYLOR.

Gave Them a Good Game.

The bowling contest between the Plainfield Crescent League and Phœnix Club was of course won by the visitors, who are now admitted to be the crack team of Harlem if not of New York city. The Plainfield boys gave their opponents a most interesting game, however, and at the end of the fifth frame were leading the winners of the Herald championship. Fitzsimons, the holder of the Herald individual championship, did n't bowl so well as Haven or Rogers. Chief Murray was referee. The score:

Will See the Company for His Death.

Michael Kenney, a cousin of John J. and Andrew E. Kenney, of this city, was killed at Newark yesterday. He was an employe of the Central New Jersey Railroad, and was riding in an empty gondola car. The bottom of the car was rotten, and he fell through. The wheels ground his legs to a shapeless mass. He died at St Michael's Hospital. The family will bring suit against the company. Funeral services will be held Wednesday at Junction, N. J. The body will be removed from Roselle, his late home, on the train leaving at 9:23 a. m. Kenney was 26 years of age.

It is false! No imitation is as good as the genuine Hires' Root Beer. Some dealers recommend imitations for the larger profit they yield. What a delicious drink Hires' Root Beer Packages make.

P. M. FRENCH'S DAM.

Though the Court of Chancery Decides Against Him, Mr. Hyde Is Still Full of Fight.

About two years ago Chas. Hyde filed a bill in chancery to compel P. M. French to reduce the height of his mill dam. About 120 witnesses were examined, and the case was hard-fought on both sides.

Below is given in full the opinion of Vice Chancellor Bird, just rendered, deciding the case, from which it will be seen that he holds that the Court of Chancery has no jurisdiction in the matter, and dismisses the bill with costs:

Hyde
vs.
French.

Craig A. Marsh for Complainant.
Charles A. Reed for Defendant.
Bird, Vice Chancellor.

It is quite clear in disposing of this case the Court must be controlled by the decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals in the case of Outcalt vs. Helme, 15th, Stew. 665. The declaration of that Court must be the guide of this, in all cases where they are reasonably applicable; and perhaps no two cases can be found where the principle in dispute and the facts by which the rights of the parties must be determined are more nearly alike. The counsel for the complainant urged that this case comes within the familiar exceptions to the general rule, because the complainant is suffering irreparable mischief in the obstruction occasioned by the casting back of an unlawful amount of water upon his water wheel which he uses to irrigate his lawns and shrubbery around and about his dwelling. In other words, it is an interference with that lawful enjoyment of his home, and a deprivation of his domestic comfort which cannot possibly be estimated in damages and which the uniform practice of all courts of equity has been to protect upon the ground that they do not admit of pecuniary consideration. This principle is well founded and has been distinctly recognized by the Court of Errors and Appeals. (See Hart vs. Leonard, 15 Stew.) But as in every other case courts of equity cannot fail to consider the circumstances which have controlled the parties and which manifestly appear in the presentation of the case. A striking circumstance in this case is the fact that the complainant did not bring his suit until more than seven years had elapsed after the wrong complained of had been committed, although from the first he suffered in all respects to the same extent as he did at the time he filed his bill. Hence I find no just reason for attempting to distinguish this case from Outcalt vs. Helme. Therefore I will advise that the bill be dismissed with costs.

The end, however, is not yet. Mr. Hyde will ask the highest court to reverse the Vice Chancellor's opinion, and will also sue Mr. French for damages before a court and jury.

THEIR VOICES MUTE.

Not a Note of Song from the Striking Choir.

The rebellious choir of the Park Avenue Baptist church have thus far remained firm to their decision.

When the story of the strike appeared in the columns of THE PRESS (which as usual gave first and exclusive news in the matter), Saturday night, an attempt was made to follow out the suggestion there made and effect a reconciliation of the divided forces.

This, however, was of no avail, and the dissenters clung loyally together and refused to sing the elaborate service of song prepared for Easter evening.

A number of outside singers, including Mr. Coard's imported talent, rendered such vocal music as could be hastily prepared, and Miss Coard played the organ.

The choir say that they won't go back till they can have things run more to their liking, and the faction opposing them seem to think that the church can get along without their help.

A Superb Caste.

The Pyramus and Thisbe wish THE PRESS to announce to their many friends that a few more tickets still remain unsold for the coming second performance. The club is anxious to sell them before Thursday.

The names of the two plays are still held in reserve, but that they will be excellently rendered every body may be sure when the castes are known. The caste of the first play includes Mrs. C. H. Evans, Mrs. G. W. Edwards, Mr. VanVliet and Master Arthur West. In the second play all the dresses are of the gay and brilliant time of Louis the Fourteenth. Parts are taken by Mr. Pelletier, Mr. Tracy, Evarts Tracy, Mr. Bloodgood of Elizabeth, and Miss Betts and Miss Streuli. After reading this list no one can question the success of the plays.

Sudden Death of Clayton Gaskill.

Wm. Clayton Gaskill, who had for twenty years been a carriage painter for L. M. French, died suddenly Saturday. In the afternoon, at about 3 o'clock, he was seized with an attack of dizziness, and before a physician could arrive he had fainted. At first it was thought that the man was suffering merely from indigestion, but on examination it was found that the attack was an apoplectic fit. Mr. Gaskill died at 9 o'clock without having recovered consciousness. Funeral services will be held from his late residence, 63 West Second street, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mr. Gaskill leaves a wife, but no children. He was 39 years of age. His relatives and friends rejoice in the fact that he was an excellent Christian man. He was an active member of the First Church of Christ.

Dr. Dean's Dyspepsia Pills are unquestionably good. They are, in my opinion, all they claim to be. I have tried them and found in them what I needed. I believe they will cure Dyspepsia, and that is saying much for any medicine. I am glad, therefore, to give my testimony.

THE REV. DANIEL F WARREN, D.D., Rector Holy Trinity, Jersey City Heights.

A Lecture by Bishop Vincent.

Bishop J. H. Vincent, D. D., who is also Chancellor of Chautauqua, will lecture in the Roseville M. E. church, corner of Orange street and Bathgate place, this evening. The subject will be "Tom and His Teachers". An organ recital will follow. William A. Gray will preside at the keyboard.

I HAVE been a sufferer from catarrh for 20 years. I found immediate relief in the use of Ely's Cream Balm. Since using it I have not suffered a moment from headache, sore throat or loss of sleep, from which I previously suffered, caused by catarrh. I consider your balm a valuable remedy.—R. G. Vassar, 56 Warren St., New York.

ELY'S Cream Balm is worth its weight in gold as a cure for catarrh. One bottle cured me.—S. A. Lovell, Franklin, Pa.

ANOTHER PETITION CIRCULATING.

Citizens of North Plainfield, Also, Want the Freight House Removed and a Safe and Attractive Approach Provided on the South Side of the Railway Station.

The following is another petition that has been started to bring about another of the public benefits THE PRESS has so long and earnestly labored for:

To the President and Board of Directors of the C. R. R. of N. J.

GENTLEMEN:—The undersigned citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield, patrons of your road, respectfully but urgently petition you to remove the freight sheds and side tracks from the vicinity of the passenger station quickly as possible. These sheds and freight trains, which obstruct a direct approach to the station on the south side, occasion great inconvenience and danger to us daily, whether we crowd into North avenue or pass through the obstructions. To go around under your bridges on Park avenue and Peace street, is daily becoming more perilous and is a waste of valuable time, morning and evening. A neat passenger station and pretty park, with safe and wide approaches from Fourth street, will make Plainfield more comfortable to us, and attractive to passers by, and will add much to the prosperity of the city, and therefore benefit your road.

Residents of the north side are put to great inconvenience and considerable peril from overcrowding upon North avenue and Park avenue, and this danger will be very much less, both to carriages and pedestrians, when freight wagons shall be directed by your honorable company to some more appropriate, convenient and accessible freight house and yard.

The desire for this change is very general and very earnest, and we trust our appeal will receive your early and favorable attention, in order that these troubles shall not continue a day longer than absolutely necessary. It is indeed miraculous that so few accidents have occurred, when the risks are so imminent every day. Narrow escapes are constantly occurring, and a calamity may happen any day which will cost your road far more than the expense of these changes for which we now petition you most urgently.

Very sincerely yours,

Easter Prizes at Holy Cross.

The Easter services held yesterday at the Church of the Holy Cross were all attended by large congregations. There was administration of the Holy Communion in the morning at eight o'clock, and again, with morning prayer and sermon, at eleven. In the afternoon the annual Easter festival of the Sunday-school took place. The floral decoration of the church, always the most elaborate and extensive of any in the city, surpassed all previous years in its beauty and arrangement. The entire chancel was converted into a perfect bower of countless brilliant, fragrant flowers nestling in a vista of leafy plants. Hundreds of Easter lilies nodded above the beautiful mass, and the sweet perfume of the many blossoms filled the whole edifice with its subtile incense. Upon the pulpit, lectern and font reposed handsome memorial pieces, and each chorister wore a bunch of fragrant white carnations. At the early service the choral programme was finely rendered by a choir of twelve male voices. Among the gems of this service was the singing of the Agnus Dei by William Holmes. At the second service the entire vested choir was present, and the church was filled to overflowing with worshipers. The choir beautifully rendered the extensive and elaborate music program me as given in Thursday's PRESS, and their fine work reflected the greatest credit on Willi m H. Miner, the choirmaster and organist of the church. The Rev. T. Logan Murphy delivered an interesting and appropriate sermon on the text: "Come, see the place where the Lord lay", after which the sacrament of the Holy Communion was adminis ered, the choral part of the second service being entirely different from that of the earlier one. At 4:30 p. m. the annual Sund y-school Easter festival took place, and was attended by a large gathering of the friends of the scholars. The school marched into the church preceded by the choir, and occupied the nave, their bright-colored banners being arranged at the position of each class, and the whole forming a very pretty picture against the floral background as one viewed it from the rear of the church. The exercises consisted of the singing of carols, an address by the rector, and remarks by Superintendent Henry R. Phillips. The Lenten offerings of the various classes amounted to nearly $100, and will be devoted to the fund for enlarging the Sunday-school building. Prizes for the best work in the annual examination held Saturday were awarded to Gertrude Haviland, Ella Loyd, Francis Phillips, Clara Fellows, George H. Dupee and Everett Hartley. The school, followed by the choir, then returned to the parish building, singing a recessional carol.

The offertory at the morning service amounted to about $325.

The First Baptists' Easter Anniversary.

The First Baptist church was filled yesterday morning, with people eager to listen to the fine Easter programme which had been arranged. The floral decorations were very elaborate; much taste was displayed in their arrangement. The services were opened with an organ voluntary by W. E. MacClymont, the efficient organist, followed by an anthem by the full choir, entitled "At the Lamb's High Feast". Mrs. Martin I. Cooley was the soloist, and sang most beautifully Shelly's "Resurrection Song". The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes then preached a powerful sermon on the resurrection.

In the afternoon, the anniversary and Easter services of the school took place. A special musical programme was prepared, and the singing of soloist B. T. Barnes was very fine, as well as that of the quartette. The report of School Secretary Chas. H. Smith showed a year of unusual prosperity. The school has grown very much, 78 have professed Christ, and a Young Men's Class, formed about Jan. 1, has now nearly 50 on its roll. The church has been obliged to build an addition in the form of a large class room to accommodate them. The Rev J. C. Fernald made an address to the children, and thus closed one of the most happy Easter days the First Baptist people have ever celebrated.

Easter Lilies at Trinity.

The Easter services at the Trinity Reformed church were very pretty. At the pulpit was an elaborate display of white lilies and cut flowers, tastefully arranged by Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, Mrs. Robt. A. Meeker, Mrs. Edward T. Van Winkle, Mrs. W. G. E. See and Mrs. E. H. Bird. At the morning and evening services special Easter music was rendered by a choir of twelve voices, under the leadership of T. E. Bazell. The singers were: Mrs. J. S. Cutter, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, Miss E. Krymer, soprano; Miss F. Mattison, Miss L. Dunn, Miss E. Dunn, alto; E. B. Ryder, H. J. Martin, T. E. Hazell, tenor; J. S. Cutter, A. J. Moore, Harry Rand, base. A. L. Titsworth was organist.

An appropriate morning sermon was preached by the pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, on "The Empty Tomb". His text was Luke XXIV: 6—"He is not here, but is risen."

The evening service was as follows:

Song—Praise Him,	School
Scripture reading.

Anthem—Christ our Passover,	Choir

Easter at Hope Chapel.

At Hope chapel yesterday an Easter sermon was preached in the morning by the pastor, the Rev. G. K. Newell. In the afternoon the Sunday-school rendered an appropriate service, including singing by Elmer Runyon and Miss Holmes, short addresses by Mr. Lovell, Mr. McKenzie and the pastor. A package of seeds was given to every scholar. In the evening the pastor preached a sermon to the children. The interior of the chapel was adorned with flowers presented by the children.

Policeman Cooney Defends Himself.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your issue of the 28th inst. you do me a gross injustice by preferring certain charges against me which are without foundation. As officers of the city it is our duty to receive instructions from the Mayor or Captain of the Police. On the night in question both officer Kiely and myself were summoned to the Weigman fire to take charge of the body found in the ruins. While there, it is claimed, certain vehicles were allowed to be driven over the hose, thereby damaging the same. I have positive proof of my stopping all drivers from crossing the line while I was on duty at Second street and Park avenue. With reference to alleged gruffness, I have this to say: If the fireman who ordered me to watch the hose had used a little more discretion in the matter and had spoken as a gentleman should, the affair could have been amicably adjusted without any newspaper publicity. JOSEPH COONEY.

Plainfield, N. J., March 30.

[Mr. Cooney is in error in claiming that THE PRESS preferred any charges. What THE PRESS said was that others had criticized him for certain alleged shortcomings. The public will be glad to know that the officer stands ready to disprove all allegations made against him.]

A Fine Catch.

Abram B. Dunlap returned last Saturday from his Florida pleasure trip to his quarters at Force's Hotel, much improved in health and looks. During his visit he was so fortunate as to capture with rod and line a fine specimen of the tarpon or silver king fish, which weighed 62 pounds and measured 5 feet 2 inches in length. Mr. Dunlap intends having the fish mounted and placed in Force's Hotel.

"Treading the wheel"—says an authority—"is about the best way to clear the cobwebs from a man's brain, to fill his lungs with air, rejoice his eyes, broaden his understanding, and increase his knowledge of his own beautiful land. The sooner our girls learn to exercise their limbs and muscles by bicycling, the sooner will they acquire that physical development and that purity of complexion which seaside lounging and cosmetics can never provide." In this connection it is wise to read the big advertisement of F. L. C. Martin in to day's PRESS, and learn from that what wheel is the best.

A fat man in Washington, who used to be an invalid, took to Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and now he walks right over the very slenderest dudes, and don't care at all. This remedy costs 25 cents.

TO INCREASE PLAINFIELD'S PROSPERITY

That's the Object of the Proposed Electric Railway, and Here's a Correspondent Who Understands the Facts.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—With your permission I will intrude upon your valuable space to give expressions to the sentiments that would seem to be the natural outcome of mature thought when the subject of rapid transit is broached. One paragraph in your article headed "Plainfield Rapid Transit" in your issue of March 21, says, "against the proposed street railway system considerable objection was made". It seems to be the natural propensity of some of Plainfield's progressive (?) citizens always to raise objection to any and all improvements that are made or attempted by those who really have the best interests of the city at heart. This is a well-known and established fact, and one which the more conservative citizens of this city certainly know. The question that is now so much debated on is that of the rapid transit scheme. It is a certainly an absolute necessity that the city shall have some kind of a road, be it what it may; and should such a road, when put in working order, metaphorically speaking, tread on the toes of some of our city's nabobs, it only redounds more to the benefit of their less fortunate neighbors who have not the wherewithal to keep and maintain their independent horse and carriage, and must as a necessity use shank's mare in their journeying to and fro.

It is a noticeable fact that those who are the most strenuous objectors to the proposed improvement are those who as to their requirements have no need whatever for any public conveyance, having their own private equipages. The objectors to the road as proposed are but a minimum of the population of the city, and as such are, I may safely say, rated on the tax-collector's books as worth at the very least $5,000, and when this is the rate quoted on the assessor's book we can judge what the real value is. These are the ones who have no need for such a line, but if on the other hand we will take into consideration the balance of the population we will find that very few of the medium-class property-holders will average over $1,000 real valuation, and to them will redound the benefits that a car line must certainly bring.

There is a plenty of vacant land now lying useless, and from 20 to 35 minutes from the railway station, that would be utilized and made of value, not only to the owners but to the city itself, in additional taxable property. This of itself is a point of no little value to the municipal authorities. It is also of interest to the merchants of the city, inasmuch as the incoming population will be bringing money to their pockets. I have not the slightest doubt that the present Council will give a just and equitable decision in favor of the road proposed, as they certainly appreciate the additional impetus that such a line will give to the business interest of the city. As to the objections of the road itself, it would cost but a very trifling sum to take a trip to Newark and obtain prima facie evidence of the truth or falsity of the statements made against the road as raised and pushed by some whom I may term "wayback". The writer of this has fully experienced the benefits of a ride in what some years ago would be thought a king's private coach. If the middle class of Plainfield's citizens could be brought together and would give voice to their unbiased sentiment they would unanimously decide in favor of such a line. But this is one of the things not to be attained, and consequently their sentiments and opinions must be given voice to by one or two individuals who may have a little time to write and lay before the citizens the thoughts and expressions of others of their number, and as one of the few I endeavor to write for the many. N.

A Powerful Sermon.

A masterly address on the subject of foreign missions was given by Robert P. Wilder, in the Crescent Avenue church at the Sunday morning service. Introductory remarks were made appropriate to Easter time by a reference to the various appearances of Jesus Christ to his disciples after his resurrection, and of his charge to each company in turn to proclaim to others the news of his resurrection. As one result of this parting commission of Jesus, the speaker then related the origin of the student volunteer missionary movement now represented by 6,200 volunteers, of whom 321 have already sailed for foreign fields, stating that the 21 volunteers present at the college students' meeting for Bible study, held at Mt. Hermon, Mass., in July, 1886, had increased to 100 before the close of the conference. Reference was made to the famous address delivered by the Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D., at the same gathering, as well as to the Meeting of Nations, held July 4, where young men born in ten different countries spoke in behalf of foreign mission work. About this time Messrs. Wilder and Foreman were selected to present the claims of the work on students in colleges and institutions of learning all over the land, and largely as the result of their year's work, the number of those who by a written pledge had signified their purpose and desire under God's permission to become foreign missionaries, had increased to 2,200. The conference of the volunteers, held at Cleveland, Ohio, from Feb. 26 to March 1, of the present year, was attended by 960 persons, representing 150 institutions of learning and every State in the Union, except Delaware. Dr. McCosh may well ask: "Has any such offering of living young men and women been presented in our age? in any age or in any country since the day of Pentecost?" There were also present at the Cleveland conference 100 returned missionaries and secretaries of foreign missions, and plans to evangelize the world were considered. In illustrating the comparative need of work at home and in foreign lands, Mr. Wilder spoke of the 206 millions in Africa, of whom 180 millions have never heard of Christ; of the 250 millions in India, of whom 800 pass each hour into eternity; and of the millions in China, where 20 souls depart each moment. The point was also made, that of the money used to carry on foreign missionary work, nine-tenths is given by one-tenth of the people, while one-half of American Christians give nothing to the cause. In one year ten churches in Boston paid nineteen thousand dollars for church choirs and gave but six thousand for rescuing the two-thirds of the race that are without Christ. The man who apologizes for foreign missions apologizes for his own conversion, as he would not be a Christian except for foreign missions; apologizes, too, for Christianity, for without foreign missions that would cease to exist. A noted evangelist said: "There are three things that keep men from the foreign field: ignorance, selfishness and exemption.

"Go" does not mean stay and preach the Gospel to every creature; does not mean repeat the Gospel to those who have already heard it.

In conclusion, Mr. Wilder urged on his hearers not only to pray, but to pray with definiteness, singling out some individual missionary for whom supplication should be made.

Fire.

An alarm of fire was sounded from box No. 28, corner of South and Woodland avenues, Netherwood, at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Robert W. Schiereth, in trying to jump aboard Hook and Ladder Truck No. 1, at the corner of Second street and Park avenue, was thrown to the ground and run over. His right hand was terribly mangled.

The alarm was given because burning leaves threatened a house in the woods at Netherwood.

The Tale of Plainfield Fishermen.

A Bound Brook correspondent writes that Plainfield sportsmen, while fishing at the Bound Brook dam in the Raritan river Saturday, were much startled at the appearance of a black-and-white seal. As soon as the animal saw the men it disappeared. This is the first time a seal has been seen so far up the river as Bound Brook. The men say the animal was trying to clamber up the dam, which is built on an incline, but plunged back into the water as soon as they approached it.

He Was a Stranger, and Took Them In.

A nameless sixteen-year-old lad whom Dayton Melick, of Mt. Pleasant, picked up off the road and gave a good home in return for such odd chores as the boy could do, was left alone in the house, Friday, while the family were trading at Plainfield. The lad proved his faithfulness and gratitude by eloping with a silver watch and $27 in cash.

Showing Off the Fire-Alarm.

Eugene Laine wanted to show a friend the workings of the excellent new fire-alarm telegraph system Saturday, and opened one of the boxes with a key which had been intrusted to him. He forgot that a key could not be removed except by one of the Fire Board, and had to wait by the box till Chief Murray relieved him.

She Saved the Guests' Lives.

PIEDMONT, W. Va., March 30.—The Sims House, the oldest hotel in this city, was totally destroyed by fire. The house was full of guests, and they owe their escape from death to the presence of mind of Miss Annie Entler, the daughter of the proprietor of the hotel. After an unsuccessful attempt to arouse the watchman, Miss Entler ran from room to room and aroused the sleepers, in some cases finding it necessary to batter down the doors, in doing which she broke three fingers. The loss is about $12,000.

Another Murder Mystery.

NEW YORK, March 30.—The body of an unknown man, about 35 years old, was found in the water near Fort Wadsworth, Staten Island, yesterday. There was a deep cut wound in the forehead, which the physicians who examined the body did not think could have been caused by the body coming in contact with the rocks. Indications point to another murder mystery.

Died of Heart Disease.

THE WOMAN OF FASHION.

She Is Forced to Recognize the Season as a Jeweled One.

Fabrics Are Made with Jewels Interwoven—Too Many Gems Are Impossible—A New Gown Recently Seen Which Was Manniş, but Pretty.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

This is not a quiet season in dress. It is rather a showy season and a gaudy one. Bright stuffs, imitation jewels, tinsel, gold braid and beads are seen in splendid profusion and at prices to suit all purses.

It is Cleopatra's fault. She began it. Bernhardt owns as much herself. She makes no secret of the fact that Cleopatra's jewels are vulgarly numerous and too showy to be either pretty or in good taste. Indeed she says that she has been obliged to hold back the play thus long simply because she could never before command a sufficient supply of gems.

As soon as Cleopatra became the rage all the world rushed out with its jewelry and, when that gave out, with its colored stones and imitation gems. And so we can thank the Cleopatra-Bernhardt combination for this jewel season of ninety-one.

The newest form which jewelry takes is the heart-shaped brooch, the heart-shaped pendant and the heart-shaped tinsel patterns, which come for the beautifying of panels on dress skirts and bodices. In the brooches and pendants heart-shaped amethysts are encircled with pearls. They may hang from a chain of pearls, which encircles the throat many times.

One can not wear too many pearls. They are seen in every possible and impossible place, in every suitable and unsuitable one. The long hanging chatelains from which a score of articles dangle are made entirely of pearl beads, which are strung on wires to insure strength.

The rage for the construction of fabrics which shall contain precious stones shows no abatement. Last week there appeared in the show windows broad satin ribbon in all shades, dotted with imitation torquoise, emeralds, opals and moonstones. These were set irregularly at every inch of the ribbon's length. All varieties of bright galloon can be obtained in any color decorated with stones of any other variety. A few months ago this would have been considered in execrable taste, but now fashion sanctions the wearing of any brilliants as fancy may dictate.

Since the wearing of the medici collar has become an accepted fact, there have sprung up in the shop windows passementerie collars which are to be placed over whatever material may have been chosen for the gown. Beautiful bronze collars, broad in the back and gradually tapering toward the front can be obtained in the best bronze tinsel for the trimming of brown cloth or satin garments. Skeleton cuffs in tinsel may also be bought.

These collar and cuffs trimmings come in gold, silver, bronze and all the varying shades of these colors. By means of them an otherwise common appearing dress can be glorified and beautified into a thing of elegance.

Much beading and passementerie of all sorts is used. The perfectly plain skirts are no longer considered stylish. A beading must be placed above the hem or a cording added to give the proper finish.

Cashmere gowns are trimmed around the bottom of the skirt with narrow flounces of black silk. These are gathered full until they form almost a ruffling. Several rows of these ruffles are put on one above the other; and in street gowns they extend entirely around the skirt.

The Baroness von Glumer, whom New Yorkers will remember as the bride of the famous diamond wedding back in the fifties, may be seen daily in a street gown of most charming taste and quiet elegance. It is, as the most of the baroness' gowns, entirely of black. The front is of heavy dark cloth, made severely plain and drawn back to reveal the stately form of the wearer. Around the hem of the skirt is a border of black cut jet passementerie and heavy braiding. The back of the gown is of satin, perfectly plain and cut in demi-train.

An entirely new style of dress was seen upon the street recently. The skirt was of the severely plain habit style, tweed in material, and in color a mixture of that indescribable gray, ecru and brown so often seen. Not an inch of spare material was employed. The front of the skirt was as plain as might be and the back was only just full enough to be graceful.

It was the waist of the gown which was unique. It consisted of a white linen shirt front with three gold buttons and over the shirt bosom fastened a black doeskin or broadcloth vest exactly similar to a gentleman's garment. Over that was a dress coat. The coat was cut precisely as a man's dress coat would have been. Not a button nor a pocket was missing. It was exactly similar. Strange to say, this odd garment was pretty, stylish and becoming

Most exquisite pearl garniture for waists, including a girdle, side trimmings, collar and sleeve pieces, can be obtained at any of the large stores that deal in very nice materials. A lovely pearl set, suitable for wearing over any dark material, consisted of a solid network of beading extending over the complete right side of the basque. It terminated in a broad girdle, which was composed of many rows of pearl beads strung in parallel lines across the front of the belt. The left side of the bodice was adorned with several rows of pearl beads looped from the shoulder, making huge festoons which depended almost to the bottom of the basque.

Really fashionable women do not undertake to dress thus showily in the street. One may search the thoroughfares over and yet fail to find a really elegant woman among all those whose dress attracts attention.

The woman of refinement and taste chooses some quiet, modest, yet substantial material for the street gown and has it fashioned by the very best tailor of her list. Other and second-rate dressmakers may be intrusted with fancy goods that are to be made in a showy manner, for here, possibly, the faults in style may be hidden in the intricacies of flounces and loopings. But a street gown with the long lines and nice finish requires the best skill obtainable. Yet with all the modesty suggested by refined taste, traces of the showiness of the season are seen upon the most elegant of street dresses.

Suppose a lady wishes to buy a gown for street use. It is to be tailor made and as severely elegant as possible. First of all, she is forced, if she buys the newest patterns, to get something with a bright cord—perhaps of silver, bronze or gold—interwoven. Then the finish for the neck, sleeves, bodice and skirt hem is of bright tinsel. A quiet cording seems impossible. Thus, before she realizes it, the woman of quiet fashion and elegant taste is adorned in the same gaudy style which she has so often condemned in others.

One must indeed shut one's eyes and follow blindly the lead which Dame Fashion dictates.

Black lace dresses are being recalled into popularity. A year ago every woman, young or old, who made any pretensions to fashionable dressing numbered in her wardrobe at least one net dress. For a season the net dress has been upon the wane, but modistes announce that the spring trade finds many of these gowns in the shops and upon the counters, where they are quickly measured off to admiring customers.

There is something about the soft, graceful, clinging net that recommends itself to the mind of womenkind. There is a kind of dressiness about it that makes the wearer feel comfortably well clad, yet which does not give her the sensation of being overdressed. Nicely made, the black net dress is suitable for receptions either at home or abroad, for calling wear, street promenade and theater. It is seen at evening gatherings and in the ball room. At all of these occasions it is entirely in place if properly made and is, perhaps, the most becoming gown that can be worn.

A very pretty ball gown for a young woman in second mourning is designed from plain black net. In the openwork meshes is run nine rows of narrow lavender satin ribbon. This forms a border around the front and sides of the skirt. The back of the skirt is of black chiffon demi-trained. The round necked bodice is treated in the same way with ribbon shrinkage. The full half sleeves are gathered in at the elbow with ribbon. An aigrette of lavender ribbons and gold sets off the coiffures prettily. For street wear the net may be threaded with black ribbons or with gold or silver cordings.

Very large jeweled cord can now be bought in exact imitation of gold beads. It is to be sewn around the edge of the sleeves where the material falls over the hands. Carefully put on, it has almost the effect of a gold bead bracelet. A chain of the same is added to the upper edge of the collar to simulate a bead necklace.

CLOAK-ROOM STORIES.

Congressman Cummings Overhears Some New War Stories.

Col. Herbert and the Brave Yankee at Bank's Ford—Swapping Over the Picket Lines—Sad Fate of a Devoted Negro.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Col. Hilary A. Herbert, of Alabama, and a New York member of congress were seated in a cloak-room of the house not long ago, smoking fragant Havanas. Col. Herbert was in the confederate army, and the New York representative was sergeant major of a New Jersey regiment. The fight at Fredericksburg after the the capture of the Heights in May, 1862, was the subject of conversation. The talk drew out many a reminiscence. Each congressman told where his regiment was located during the battle. It was evident that they had been within hailing distance of each other for several hours, nearly twenty-nine years ago.

Col. Herbert was under Gen. Wilcox near Bank's ford when the Heights were taken. The sergeant major crossed the river on pontoons a mile or more below Fredericksburg and was in the assaulting column on Sunday, May 3. His regiment scaled Marye's heights near the female seminary. It passed near the spot where three brass cannon were captured from the Washington artillery of New Orleans. Congressman Coleman, a member of that very battery, was addressing the house while the colonel and the sergeant major were conversing.

Herbert went into the fight from Wilcox's intrenchments at Bank's ford on Sunday morning, and the sergeant major went out of the fight thirty-six hours afterwards from the same intrenchments. The Heights were carried by the old Sixth corps. Sedgwick made an effort to effect a junction with Hooker at Chancellorsville and the fight at Salem church occurred on the same evening. Wilcox swung so far to the right that he flanked Sedgwick's left, came down the hill and recaptured Fredericksburg, leaving "Uncle John" upon the Heights.

On Monday evening the confederates were reinforced from Lee's army and made a charge upon the union lines. They were repulsed. After dark, however, Sedgwick drew back. He occupied the intrenchments at Banks' ford vacated by Wilcox. A pontoon bridge had been built across the Rappahannock late in the evening, and the Sixth corps recrossed the river before daylight.

For weeks afterward the pickets confronted each other with the Rappahannock between them. There was very little firing and the utmost good feeling existed. The sergeant major told a story of a picket reserve on the union side of the river. A confederate officer of the day appeared early in the morning on the opposite bank. His rank and duty was indicated by his sash. The instant the officer in charge of the union pickets saw him he shouted: "Turn out the guard, officer of the day!"

The reserve fell in line and presented arms to the confederate officer, who acknowledged the compliment with a grateful salute.

There was so much good fellowship among the pickets that it excited comment among the division and brigade officers. Orders were finally issued on both sides to prevent the interchange of commodities. Col. Herbert's pickets were stationed at Scott's dam, half a mile above Bank ford. One day, after the orders were issued, the colonel was riding along his line when he saw a stalwart Yankee wading across the river. The Yankee was within thirty feet of the confederate shore when the colonel halted. He was about to retrace his steps when the colonel shouted: "Halt; come ashore."

The Yankee held a newspaper and said that he had come across to trade coffee, sugar and newspapers with the confederate pickets upon the distinct understanding that he would be allowed to return.

"So I thought," the colonel shouted. "You deserve no consideration. You know it is against the orders on both sides. Come ashore, sir. You are a prisoner."

The Yankee demurred. Thereupon the colonel drew his revollver, pointed

"WHAT IS THAT?" THE COLONEL ASKED AS THE PICKET LIFTED THE BOAT FROM THE WATER.

it at him and said: "Obey orders. Come ashore instantly."

The Yankee waded ashore and stood upon the bank in his wet clothes. He was a strong, stalwart fellow, and had a manly bearing. Marching up to his captor he saluted him, thumped his breast and said, in a firm voice; "Colonel, shoot me, but don't take me prisoner. I prefer death to capture. I am a new recruit. I have been in the army only two weeks. I came from Michigan. I would rather suffer death than have my friends learn of my capture under the present circumstances."

The appeal touched the colonel's heart. He regarded the soldier fixedly for a moment or more and then said: "Return to your lines. But understand that hereafter any man that crosses the river will be detained as a prisoner."

The soldier thanked him and waded back to the union pickets.

Upon arriving at Gen. Wilcox's headquarters Col. Herbert said: "General, I have broken your orders. I have allowed a prisoner to return to his lines." He then told the story of his adventure with the Yankee picket. "Well, colonel," replied Gen. Wilcox, after due reflection, "if I had been in your place I should have done precisely as you did."

And that was the end of it.

In further conversation in the cloak-room the colonel said that not long afterwards he was riding along the picket lines when he heard a Yankee shout from the other side of the river: "Hoi Johnny, have you any good horses over there?"

"Yes, heaps of them," was the reply.

"Well, send one over and we'll beat you running," the Yankee shouted.

"Not much," was the answer. "You always beat us running. You have had more experience than we've had."

A week or so afterwards the colonel was again riding along the picket line. He saw in the river a little boat, a foot or more long, exquisitely molded. It had no sail, but bore a tiny mast from which a little confederate flag floated. It came across the river slowly and reached the exact point occupied by a confederate picket.

"COLONEL, SHOOT ME, BUT DON'T TAKE ME PRISONER."

"What is that?" the colonel asked as the picket lifted the boat from the water. The soldier somewhat hesitatingly passed it to the colonel. Upon the flag was the word "Dixie." Within the boat was a little package of sugar and coffee with a note saying:

"Please exchange tobacco for these."

The boat had a little rudder canted to the right. The tiller was lashed to the gunwale with twine. With this arrangement the current of the river held the little craft steady, kept her upon her course, and carried her direct to her point of destination.

Nobody seemed to know anything about the boat. The confederate picket was dumb. But the colonel readily understood where it came from. Some of his soldiers were from Mobile and were experienced naval architects. It was a rebel craft designed to run the blockade. It had done so successfully for many days, and its cargoes of sugar and coffee were highly appreciated. The lines of the little craft were so beautiful that the colonel carried it to his tent and placed it among his camp equipage. He intended to keep it as a souvenir, but when he awoke next morning it was gone. No one could tell how it disappeared. Whether it re-entered the service or not is not known. Many years afterwards the colonel was telling the story while on a visit to Fredericksburg. A Virginian heard him and burst into laughter. "I know what has become of that boat," he said. "It is now in the house of a wealthy gentleman living in Washington, and I don't think five hundred dollars would buy it."

At this time Gen. Hooker, of Mississippi, appeared in the cloak-room. The general has but one arm. Something was said about the fidelity of the blacks to their masters. He told a touching story about a faithful black servant upon his plantation near Jackson. Before he went to assist in the defense of Vicksburg he called the slave one morning and told him to take the horses on the place to a plantation a hundred miles below, where they would be safe from capture.

"I can't do it, massa. You mus'n't ask me to do it," the negro replied.

"Why, what's the matter?" the general said; "you have never refused to obey me before."

"I know dat, massa," the negro answered, "but where you goes I goes. I can't leab you, 'deed I can't. Please don't send me away, massa."

The general advised him to remain at home, but the attachment of the servant was so strong that, with tears in his eyes, he begged to be allowed to go with his master. He went to Vicksburg with him. They were camped within the intrenchments in a gully seaming the bluffs. The general's tent was very close to the line. The negro was always at his side, awaiting orders. It was an exposed situation. His master frequently urged him not to expose himself, but in vain. Finally the tent was moved back a short distance, so as to be more sheltered.

A day or two afterward the faithful slave was holding the stirrup of his master's horse. The general was in the act of mounting when a shell tore off his arm and decapitated the negro. He fell like a log. The firing was so terrific that it was dangerous to carry the general up the bluff. He was borne up the ravine where the bleeding stump was bandaged by a surgeon. He lay upon his back all the evening watching the shells and shot passing over him into the town.

After dark he was carried up the slope into the city. Quarters had been secured for him at the house of a friend. While he was being borne into the house an enormous projectile from one of Admiral Porter's ships, three miles away, fell in the back yard. It ricochetted, passed through the building and tore away half of one of the pilasters in front. The destruction of furniture and partitions was great. Nevertheless, the wounded general was borne into the house, where he remained until Pemberton surrendered.

The Government Baking Powder Tests.

The latest investigations by the United States and Canadian Governments show the Royal Baking Powder a cream of tartar powder superior to all others in leavening strength.

Statements by other manufacturers to the contrary have been declared by the official authorities falsifications of the official reports.

THE DIRECT TAXES

States Must Pay What They Owe to the Government.

OLD WAR CLAIMS HUNTED UP.

Secretary Blaine Resumes His Duties in the State Department.

Mr. Lemcke Will Not Accept the Treasuryship—The President's Trip to California—Names Mentioned for Judge Scofield's Successor—The Surplus in the Treasury Creeping Up.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—It is one thing to have Congress appropriate money and another thing to get it out of the the Treasury. Indiana is having an illustration of this, and Maryland will also receive a set-back when her application for her share of the direct taxes is taken up for payment.

Secretary Foster has directed that the Assistant Treasurer at Chicago pay to the State of Indiana $769,144, less $50,000, which latter amount the books at the Treasury Department show that Indiana is indebted to the government as excess of payment on war claims.

In the case of Maryland it is found that she owes the government $8,156 on account of the Indian Trust Fund. The records of the Department are being hunted up, and it may be found that other States are indebted to the government.

A conference was held during the day by the accounting officers of the Treasury to determine upon some plan for the payment of the direct tax to the Southern States. In these States the tax was collected from individuals. It was decided to pay the direct tax to the Governors of the Southern States, in trust for the people who are entitled to it.

MR. LEMCKE DECLINES.

He Will Not Accept the Treasurryship and Will Sail for Europe.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Mr. Julius A Lemcke of Indiana, whose name has been under consideration by the President for the position of United States Treasurer, in case the resignation of Treasurer Huston was accepted, has informed the President, through a friend, that he does not desire to have his name considered in connection with the place, as his health is such that he could not possibly accept it if it were tendered to him. Mr. Lemcke will sail for Europe within a few days.

This leaves the question of the treasurryship in the same position it has been for some time. The impression prevails that efforts are being made to adjust the differences between the President and Mr. Huston, and that they are likely to be successful and that Mr. Huston will serve out his term of four years.

MR. BLAINE AT HIS DESK.

He Says There Are No New Developments in the New Orleans Affair.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Secretary Blaine went to the State Department during the day for the first time since his recent indisposition and spent several hours there.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British Minister, had an interview with the Secretary.

Mr. Blaine said that there were no new developments in the Behring Sea controversy or the New Orleans affair.

Miss Grace Fuller Married.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Miss Grace Weston Fuller, eldest daughter of the Chief Justice of the United States, last night became the bride of Archibald Lapham Brown of Chicago. The ceremony was performed at St. John's by Rev. Dr. Douglas, in the presence of the family's relatives and one of the most representative gatherings of distinguished government officials and diplomats seen at the national capital this season. The bride was attired in a court robe of white satin with silver trimmings.

Judge Scofield's Successor.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—A vacancy has been created in the Court of Claims by the retirement of Judge Glenni M. Scofield of Pennsylvania. It may go to an Ohioan, ex-Congressman Grosvenor and Thompson being mentioned for the place, which pays $4,500 a year and is for life.

The President's California Trip.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—It is now announced that President Harrison intends to make his contemplated trip to California. He will leave Washington by the Southern route about two weeks hence.

The Surplus Creeping Up.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The surplus in the Treasury is creeping up, and at the opening of business to-day was about $128,000,000.

DIXON THE FAVORITE.

The Colored Pugilist Leads in the Betting on To-night's Fight.

TROY, N. Y., March 31.—The glove contest between George Dixon of Boston and Cal McCarthy of Jersey City, which will take place at the Criterion Club to-night is the chief topic discussed at the various sporting houses in this city.

Dixon is the favorite at odds of 100 to 80. The betting on the result of the contest has not been very heavy so far. A few $500 to $400 bets have been made.

Although the followers of McCarthy have unlimited faith in his ability to whip Dixon, they are holding back for larger odds. A number of men are hoping that the betting will be 2 to 1, or at least 100 to 60, before the boys enter the ring. Billy Donohue wants to bet $500 against $1,000 that the Jersey lad will prove the victor.

He will be at the ring side with his friends, all of whom will be ready to wager heavily on McCarthy's chances.

The contest will be one of the closest and most exciting, as well as one of the greatest, that have ever taken place between featherweights in this or any other country. Both men claim the world's championship of their class.

A SERIOUS ERROR.

A Word in the Wrong Place in New Jersey's Ballot Reform Law.

TRENTON, N. J., March 31.—A serious error has been discovered by the Attorney-General in the amendment made by the Legislature to the ballot reform law.

The intent of the amendment was to exempt towns of less than 4,000 from using the election booths in their local elections. The word "not" was put in the wrong place, and it makes the use of booths applicable to towns of 4,000 inhabitants or less and not to towns having over that number.

The Attorney-General expresses the opinion that the intent of the law will hold notwithstanding the error.

FORBES WILL NOT FLINCH.

The Murderer Says He Will Go to the Scaffold Bravely.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 31.—The chain by which the leg irons of Ernest Forbes are fastened to the floor has been loosened, and he is now enjoying the freedom of his cell. He put on the new suit provided for his execution and burial and it pleased him very much.

Forbes says he will not flinch on going to the scaffold. He heard the hammering as the scaffold went up, and sometimes he would say: "There they go working on my scaffold again."

Then he would vary it with: "It's a sad fate."

He expresses a wish to see the scaffold. Friday next is the day appointed for the execution.

The Funeral of Assemblyman Brundage.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 31.—The funeral of Assemblyman Brundage will take place at Bath on Friday or Saturday. Should it occur on Friday the Assembly will probably adjourn for the week on Thursday afternoon. The committee accompanying the remains will return before the funeral, and another committee will be selected to attend the obsequies.

Father Craft Produces More Trouble.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 31.—Mr. Eugene T. McAuliffe of this city has received a letter from Rev. Francis M. J. Craft, the Indian missionary at Pine Ridge, predicting another outbreak among the Indians at the agency unless the management of the Indian troubles is at once transferred to the War Department.

Decker Quietly Extradited.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 31.—An officer from Philadelphia quietly slipped into town early in the morning, and on extradition papers signed by Governor Bulkeley secured possession of Baseball Player Decker, who was in the county jail. The detective left town at once with his prisoner.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The Board of Directors of the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank at a meeting adopted a resolution offering a reward of $5,000 for evidence sufficient to convict the party or parties who spread the unfounded rumors regarding the bank's stability.

Run Over and Killed.

SALAMANCA, N. Y., March 31.—James Hackett, father of John Hackett, ex-justice of the sessions of this county, was run over and killed by a train near Steamburg at 10 a. m. He was 76 years of age.

The Elliotts Arraigned for Murder.

COLUMBUS, O., March 31.—The Elliotts were arraigned in the Criminal Court for the killing of Osborne and Hughes. Both entered pleas of not guilty.

A RESORT TO FORCE

There is Intense Excitement in the Coke Region.

SEVERAL OUTBREAKS REPORTED

Pennsylvania's Governor Has Been Appealed to for Assistance.

Warrants Sworn Out for a Large Number of Rioters—Wives of the Strikers Ringleaders—President Rae Calls the Operators Swindlers—The Workmen Stirred Up to a Fighting Pitch.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., March 31.—Excitement runs high here over the coke strike situation. About 500 strikers with drums and banners marched to the fair grounds, where they were addressed by National President Rae, Master Workmen Wise and others.

Rae declared the profits of the coke industry were increasing year by year, and were greater by $5,000,000 in 1890 than in 1889. He called the operators swindlers and rascals, and told the men that he would win the strike for them if they stood by him.

The raids and riots at Morewood, Jimtown, Leisenring and Leith have stirred the operatives to a fighting pitch.

LOOKING FOR RELIEF.

Warrants Sworn Out for a Large Number of Strikers.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., March 31.—Frick's General Superintendent Lynch and Cap. Schoonmaker are here to see what relief the court will afford them. They declare that the spirit of violence and destruction has at last reached that stage when the law must either afford them protection for life and property or be declared impotent in such emergencies.

Frick's Superintendent Harvey Whiel was assaulted and beaten at Leith, the wives of the strikers being the ringleaders. He drew his revolvers in self defense, and they snatched them from him, beat him and drove him from the ground. He swore out warrants for 11 of the rioters, including three women.

Capt. Schoonmaker swore out warrants for the arrest of 27 of the Jimtown rioters for assault and conspiracy. Capt. Schoonmaker and Supt. Lynch, with their attorneys, came before Judge Ewing in chambers, and asked for an injunction restraining Master Workman Wise and Messrs. Keegan Crow, Eger and others, 97 in all, from congregating about the works, making threats or in any way interfering with those who desire to work. They submitted the affidavits of a number of workmen, who state that they want to work, but are afraid to do so. Judge Ewing granted the injunction and Sheriff McCormick with a number of deputies left on a special train to serve it, as well as to arrest those charged with riot, being mostly the same parties.

ORDERS TO SHOOT STRIKERS.

Labor Leaders May Offer to Protect the Coke Operators' Property.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., March 31.—Labor leaders are considering the advisability of offering the two big coke companies 1,000 citizens and strikers to protect their property.

About 50 armed deputies are stationed on the Coal Brook plant of the McClure Coke Company. It is said they have orders to shoot any strikers found on the premises.

A riot occurred at Everson last night in which a striking foreigner was badly beaten. The fight, however, was not caused by the strike.

Pattison Won't Interfere.

PITTSBURG, March 31.—In reply to the request of the sheriff of Westmoreland County for the consent of the Governor to use the arms of two of the companies of the National Guard, Governor Pattison has telegraphed back that the civil power must be exhausted before the State would interfere.

Another Mass Meeting.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., March 31.—The strikers announce that they will hold another mass meeting at Jimtown and trouble is feared. The company has increased the number of guards to prevent the threatened violence. At labor headquarters it is said that there are by actual count not a hundred men at work at all the Frick & McClure works.

Frick Blames the Leaders.

PITTSBURG, March 31.—The fight from this time on will be bitter, in the coke region Mr. Frick claims that his men are satisfied with the scale of wages he offered, but that the labor leaders will not permit them to return to work, as their position depends on the success of the strike.

Rioting at Homestead.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 31.—A serious riot occurred at Homestead last night, in which a number of Hungarians, Italians and others engaged. The trouble occurred in the upper portion of the town, and 30 men were mixed up in it. Seven or eight were seriously wounded. One of the participants has been arrested, and is is feared that further trouble may occur.

Carriagemakers to Strike.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 31.—The carriage and wagon makers in Pittsburg and Allegheny, about 600, at a meeting last night decided to go on strike to-night if their demand for a nine-hour day without reduction in wages was not granted. The employers have refused to recognize the union.

Conference of Mine Workers.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 31.—The officials of the United Mine Workers of America are holding a conference here to-day, and will endeavor to enlist the aid of all labor organizations on the side of the coke strikers.

SEIZED THE CREW.

The Menhaden Fisheries War Renewed at Keyport.

KEYPORT, N. J., March 31.—The trouble between the New York authorities and the men employed in the menhaden fisheries continues, and has resulted in the capture of two of Keyport's oystermen and the narrow escape of several other crews. Capt. Frank Hines' sloop Hogarty was boarded and detained by officials from Staten Island.

The crew of the sloop Hogarty were at work in the morning. As the wind suddenly ceased they were forced to stop, and while they were in the cabin eating the sloop drifted 25 yards over the line, when over 40 men came out of the cabin of the Staten Island watch boat Nellie Lee, and with the aid of several smaller boats surrounded the Hogarty and captured Captain William Howard and Mate Thomas Morrigan, of this place. They were lodged in the Richmond County jail to await the action of the grand jury.

For some time past there has been more or less trouble with the authorities on the fishing question, and the arrest of many of Keyport's fishermen has been the result. All who have been captured have served time. Captain Abram Post narrowly escaped being captured.

The Russian Minister Suspected of Plotting to Assassinate Stambuloff—Vicious Fighting in Assam—Nearly Five Hundred People Killed—Cabinet Crisis Threated in Portugal—The Sioux Fight.

BERLIN, March 31.—The murder of the Bulgarian Minister of Finance is one of the chief causes of the sudden flurry among the officials of the War Office, and it is looked upon as a serious complication of the gravest designs on the part of Russia.

Despatches have been busily passing between the Foreign Offices of Berlin and Vienna and also Bucharest, and it is now stated that the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the accession of King Charles of Roumania at Bucharest next month will be made the occasion of an informal conference between the powers of the triple alliance.

The sovereigns of the triple alliance will spare no effort to improve the friendship of the Roumanians and it is said that State to their side in the event of war. Roumania is in an excellent condition for defense, having nearly completed a series of formidable fortifications along the Russia frontier, and having a navy that is far from contemptible.

M. Khitrovo, the Russian Minister at Bucharest, is suspected of having had a hand in the plot to assassinate Stambuloff.

The Bulgarian reserves have been notified to be ready for service on call, and the principality is alive with warlike preparations.

TERRIBLE SLAUGHTER.

A Large Force of Native Troops Killed on the Assam Frontier.

CALCUTTA, March 31.—Alarming advices have been received from Simla, a well-known sanitarium of British India, and the Viceroy, abandoning his projected tour, has started for the place with five regiments. A mountain battery has been ordered to Manipur.

Two Goorkhas who have just arrived at Kohima, on the Assam frontier, bring news of a terrible massacre. The trouble originated in a feud between the Rajah of Manipur and a leading chief. The Rajah was deposed and he appealed to the Viceroy.

Mr. Quinton was sent to settle the trouble and started from the headquarters at Shillong escorted by the 42d and 44th Goorkha Light Infantry.

After crossing the frontier Mr. Quinton's camp was attacked and a general massacre followed.

Another account says that Colonel Skene, the commander; Commissioner Quinton, with his son and daughter; Captain Boileux and six officers were killed, the natives refusing to give them quarter. The rebellious tribe is famous for cunning, cruelty and bravery. It is estimated that 470 people were killed.

A Serious Affair.

LONDON, March 31.—All the morning dailies comment upon the gravity of the Manipur rebellion and the necessity of strong measures to retrieve British prestige. Some of the papers think that Commissioner Quinton's force was inadequate and that he committed a blunder in underrating the strength of the enemy.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

The United States Supreme Court Sustains a Railroad Suit for Damages.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—A decision of the United States Supreme Court rendered by Justice Harlan affirms the decision of the United States District Court for New Jersey granting damages to C. B. Converse for injuries received by a Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad train while crossing a track near Jersey City.

The Court says that while those using the public highway are under a duty to keep out of the way of railroad cars crossing it, and exercise to that end such care as the circumstances make necessary, the railroad company in moving cars upon its road is bound to exercise like care toward those who, while traveling on such highways, whether on foot or in vehicles, are obliged to cross over its tracks.

The right of the railroad company to its tracks for the movement of engines and cars is no greater, says the Court, in the eye of the law than the right of an individual to travel over a highway extending across such tracks.

At the First Presbyterian church, Sunday afternoon, took place the wedding of Wm. H. Leach, Jr., of Dunellen, to Miss Ella C. Vail of this city. The Rev. Dr. Ketcham performed the ceremony.

Bishop J. H. Vincent, formerly of this city, is quoted as saying, in a conversation the other day, that he almost wished the name "Sunday-school" might be dropped. It was—he said—too suggestive of the notion that it is a school only for children and young folks. The "church seminary" is a name he suggests, which shall be expected to gather into itself the whole church for Biblical study and Christian training.

Charles L. Davis of this city, died on Saturday at the home of his mother, 460 Evergreen avenue, Brooklyn, of pneumonia. He was in his 45th year. He was for years wheelman of Zephyr H. & L. truck, and has been supported for the past months of his sickness by the Exempt Firemen's Association of this city. He was an old-time fireman of New York and was formerly a member of Jackson Engine Company No. 11 of that city. Bowen was a life-long resident of New York city, and was about fifty years of age. He belonged to the well-known Bowen family, being a nephew of H. C. Bowen of the Independent; his brother, Edward H. Bowen is a prominent Brooklyn business man. Mr. Bowen was the son of Edward E. Bowen and was born at Woodstock, Conn., in 1836, where the body will be interred.

Woodland Fire at Netherwood.

As was told exclusively in yesterday's PRESS, Robert Schlereth was hurt running for Zephyr Hook and Ladder Truck on his way to the fire in the woods, at Netherwood. He narrowly escaped being run over by an engine, also, and his skull just missed being crushed. His right arm was terribly fractured, and the services of two physicians were necessary. He was taken to his home on Chatham street, North Plainfield, in a hack.

The fire at Netherwood was confined entirely to the dry leaves and underbrush in the woodland. One barn was slightly burned, and a house and barn were threatened. The fire department was very prompt in responding to the alarm, reached Netherwood in nine minutes, and speedily put the threatened buildings out of danger.

Sad Fatality at South Plainfield.

Early yesterday morning Richard O'Hearne, conductor, connected with engine 25, met a shocking death at South Plainfield. He was making a coupling in a grav l train that he was conducting when he was accidently crushed to death. The deceased was about 40 years of age, lived at Metuchen, and leaves a widow and family. J. E. Gallagher of Perth Amboy was despatched to take his place.

INSANE FROM LA GRIPPE.

Strange Fancies of a Man Rendered Crazy by Illness.

Francis Bartels of Washingtonville has gone crazy with an attack of la grippe. He is sexton of the Washingtonville chapel, and on Sunday was admitted to membership in the Methodist church in this city. Sunday morning he seemed perfectly rational, but was suffering considerably with an attack of the prevalent influenza. Towards evening the disease began to affect his head, and by Monday he was actually insane. He became so violent that this morning an attempt was made to remove him to the Muhlenberg Hospital in this city. On reaching town he escaped from policeman Patrick Lynch, into whose keeping he had been entrusted, and who was unable to hold him. He was caught again in time to prevent him from boarding a train for New York, and was locked up in the station house till he could be induced to go to the hospital.

Bartels has developed a mania on several topics. Religion is one of them, and love is another. He fancies that he is to be married this afternoon to Minnie Lubkerman, a girl whom he met four years ago, and who he thinks is waiting in New York city to become his bride. He is extremely violent, and raves continually.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Young Arthur Leland Could n't Have His Own Way, and Tried To Kill Himself.

Arthur Leland, a fifteen-year-old lad living at Lee place and Fourth street, very nearly succeeded in taking his own life this morning.

He is a very headstrong lad, and when he can't have his own way at home he becomes very violent.

Last evening he was so obstinate that his father, a Pond Tool Works workman, felt compelled to flog him. Arthur planned his own deliberate death in revenge.

At the neighboring stable of J. H. Fosher he slyly procured a bottle of a horse-healing mixture of aconite and landanum. He drank the entire amount, tied to the bottle a card saying that he was done with life, and crawled off to a barn to die.

Presently he felt so bad that he sought fresh air, and was discovered roaming about the yard looking very sick.

Physicians were sent for, and a stomach-pump was brought into play.

His life was saved, but he is now out of his head, and will be very ill for several days.

Death of Judge Bolton.

Judge James Clinton Bolton, at one time one of the most prominent lawyers of this city, died late on Saturday night of Addison's disease, at his home in the Bergen Point district of Bayonne, in his sixtieth year. He was born in Newburgh on Sept 2, 1831. He was the son of Dr. Franklin Bolton and Letitia Clinton, a daughter of Gen. James Clinton. He was educated at Williams College. In 1870 he was appointed a Master in Chancery for New Jersey by Gov. Randolph. During the Walker filibustering troubles Mr. Bolton was in Nicaragua on business for the United States Government. He was private secretary for Gen John C. Fremont while the latter was in California, and the General's confidential agent in the settlement of the Mariposa affair in 1865 and 1866. After his return from the West Mr Bolton was connected with the Central Railroad of New Jersey for nine years, and with the law firm of Judge Gray. In June, 1859 he married Elizabeth Talmadge, a daughter of Dr. Theodore B. Talmadge, grandson of Gov. George Clinton. He leaves a widow, three daughters, and a son, all adults. His funeral will take place on Wednesday.

Other clergymen taking part in the service will be: The Rev. Hobart Clark, of Plainfield; the Rev. Stephen H. Camp, of Brooklyn; the Rev. H. Price Collier, of Brooklyn; the Rev. Robert Collyer, of Brooklyn, and the Rev. Theodore C. Williams, of New York.

The "Cyclone" Pastor Will Speak.

The Congregational church and Sunday-school will have their annual Home Mission Day next Sunday, April 5, when the Rev. Mr. Puddefoot will preach in the morning, and address the school in the afternoon. Mr. Puddefoot is a most original and stirring speaker. He has been called "a cyclone", and is described as sweeping his audience along with him. In the afternoon the room will be draped with flags and national emblems, and an attractive musical programme will be rendered. A general invitation is extended for both the morning and afternoon services.

INCENDIARY FIRE.

A Horse Burned to Death in His Stall.—Two Men Under Suspicion.

Fire last night destroyed two barns and stables, a wagon house and two or three small sheds and henneries adjoining, owned by William A. Woodruff and situated in the heart of the block bounded by Front, Second, Peace and Church streets.

At about ten minutes past 10 o'clock, passers-by saw the flames breaking forth, and shouted "fire!" so that Chiefs Doane and Murray, standing near Park avenue, heard them and sent in an alarm from Box No. 12. The entire fire department turned out, and at 11:30 the last spark of fire was extinguished. The fire made a fierce blaze, and made the streets as bright as day. It drew a large crowd of spectators.

One of the burned stables was occupied by Mr. Woodruff, the other by John C. Van Dyke of 74 East Front street. Mr. VanDyke lost a horse and wagon on which there was $250 insurance. Mr. Woodruff's loss is estimated at $600, which is coveredby insurance.

Richard E. Coriell, of 20 Church street, saw two men acting very suspiciously in the neighborhood just as the fire broke out. They are suspected of starting the fire, and, having been identified, are under surveillance.

NORTH BROADWAY.

The Proposed New Thoroughfare by Which the Electric Cars Will Reach the Mountains.

A large number of North Plainfielders attended a property-owners meeting in Spencer's Hall last night, to consider the proposition to extend Peace street from East Front to Warren.

Justus H. Cooley acted as chairman, and Horace Martin as secretary. Stirring speeches in favor of the extension were made by Wm. Smith, Mayor Place, Wm. Boe, Geo. Feller, Wm. Pangborn, Thos. Rutledge, Newton Smalley, Father Freeman, and others.

A motion that it was the sense of the meeting that Peace street ought to be extended as proposed was unanimously and enthusiastically adopted.

Chairman Cooley was authorized to appoint two committees—one to confer with the Plainfield authorities in reference to the opening, the other to prepare a petition and get signers.

The boroughites are very anxious to have the street opened and to have the electric railway that Plainfield is soon to have run through the throughfare and all the way to the mountain. They want the railway to climb the mountain also, and create a demand for villa sites along Johnston's drive.

It is already proposed to call the contemplated thoroughfare North Broadway. The borough people are taking hold of the matter very energetically.

"Every Inch a Brave Man."

In a private letter from John Stagg, of Paterson, to a resident of this city, he says of the late H. G. Wood: "Lieut. Wood was a member of the 25th N. Y. cavalry, and the regiment was assigned to the Michigan cavalry brigade only a short time before Gen. Custer was made commander of a division of cavalry. At the time I joined the Michigan cavalry brigade, Wood was an aid on the staff of my brother Gen. Stagg and continued so till the Michigan regiments were sent to Idaho at the close of the War. He was a close companion of mine during the last campaigns and was every inch a good, brave man and a fine cavalry officer. The night before Lee's surrender he accompanied me into the rebel lines, which proved to be a wagon train of 'Johnnies.' Didn't we race horses though, out of their presence?"

A large number of dudes collected at an exposed corner last Sabbath, when the wind was high, and caught colds. Each little darling was speedily cured by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

His Throat Cut by a Telephone Wire.

Dr. Frank S. Wells met with a singular accident last evening. He was riding his bicycle down Madison avenue when a wire left hanging carelessly low by telephone linemen caught him under the chin, almost making a serious gash in his throat, and nearly jerking his neck out of joint. The wire drew some blood, and caused a very painful bruise. Had he been going at full speed he must have been dangerously hurt.

Dr. Dean's Dyspepsia Pills are unquestionably good. They are, in my opinion, all they claim to be. I have tried them and found in them what I needed. I believe they will cure Dyspepsia, and that is saying much for any medicine. I am glad, therefore, to give my testimony.

PLAINFIELD RAPID TRANSIT.

NO STREET CARS FOR NETHERWOOD.

Instanced, the Evona Outskirts Will Reap the Benefit.

Because of the bitter opposition that certain Broadway people have made against the proposition to run street cars past their doors, Netherwood is going to lose altogether, for a time, the benefits of the proposed electric railway, and will be shut out from rapid transit until such time as the obstructionists shall have come to recognize the value of the system as put into practical operation under their very eyes in other parts of the city, and shall have petitioned for an extension into their neighborhood of the railway which they now reject. The amended route over which the railway will run is as follows:

Beginning at a point in Somerset street at the line of North Plainfield Township and running therein southerly to Front street, thence through Front street easterly to Park avenue, thence through Park avenue to Sixth street, thence through Sixth street westerly to Plainfield avenue, thence through Plainfield avenue southerly to Seventh street, thence through Seventh street westerly to Monroe avenue, thence through Monroe avenue northerly to Fourth street, thence through Fourth street easterly to Grant avenue, and thence, through Grant avenue northerly to Front street, thence through Front street easterly to Park avenue, thence through Park avenue southerly to North avenue, thence through North avenue northerly to Peace street.

The cutting out of the Netherwood route was the chief amendment made in the proposed street railway ordinance at last night's meeting of the Plainfield Common Council. The revised ordinance, with all amendments incorporated in it, and as passed by the Council on its second reading, is published elsewhere in THE PRESS.

Councilman Spangenberg, who was responsible for the amendment shutting Netherwood out of the route, explained that he offered it because of the strong opposition that had been aroused against the railway company in that section. The Council were unanimous in voting for the amendment.

Councilman Glinna tried to secure the passage of an amendment compelling the railway company to macadamize to the width of eight feet each side of their tracks the streets through which they are to pass; and Councilmen Ackerman and Rushmore, through various amendments which were killed as fast as introduced, sought to impose heavier taxes on the company for the privileges of the franchise. Councilmen Hetfield, Smith and Moffett explained that before the proposed ordinance was drawn every attempt was made to squeeze income for the city from the company, and the plan outlined in the ordinance was the best the company would agree to. If the Council sought to impose tribute the only result would be that the company would withdraw altogether their proposition and would build no road.

In arguing against these fruitless attempts to squeeze the company more closely than they would stand, Councilman Hetfield asserted that already the company were disgusted with the protests misguided citizens were making and were half a mind to wash their hands of the entire business. It was dangerous—he added—to try to crowd the railway people too far. The railroad was to be a good thing for the town, and the people needed and wanted it, and to be too dictatorial would be to drive it away.

Various other amendments were introduced by Councilmen Ackerman and Glinna which Councilman Hetfield and others declared unreasonable and which in their opinion would cause the company to refuse to accept the franchise on any terms, but all such were lost by a vote of 6 to 5, Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts, Smith and Spangenberg voting no.

The ordinance as finally perfected, and as published in THE PRESS to-day, was finally unanimously adopted on its second reading.

All the Councilmen were present at the meeting. President Smith presided.

Complete passage of the ordinance was not reached until some minutes past one o'clock in the morning. During the meeting, however, a recess of half an hour was taken, in order that the Councilmen and reporters might get a glimpse of the fire that illuminated the city.

SOME OF THE OBSTRUCTIONISTS.

Property Owners Who Helped to Shut the Railway Out of Netherwood.

During last night's Council meeting and before the ordinance was amended in that particular, another protest against the introduction of the proposed electric street railway into Netherwood was presented. It was signed by J. E. Martine, A. D. Cook, Catharine R. Webster, I. P. Brown, Chas. P. Hazen, Mrs. N. H. Day, D. W. Day, Nelson Runyon and F. S. Runyon, purporting to represent a frontage on Broadway of 2,320 feet. The signers stated that they had once consented to permit horse or storage-battery cars to run past their doors, but were opposed to the trolley system and withdrew all consent that might be used as having come from them in favor of the trolley system. They intimated that their consent to a storage-battery system had been distorted into consent to a trolley system, and denounced such alleged action as a false pretense and a fraudulent scheme.

Margaret T. Mahon and T. S. Davis also withdrew their consent to have a railway pass their property on Park avenue and Sixth street.

The latter two communications were filed. That of the Broadway people was ordered spread in full on the minutes.

SHARP TALK FROM MR. NEVINS.

He Plans to Give Plainfield the Waking-up It Needs.

When President Nevins of the Plainfield street Railway Company got a chance to get on his feet and speak for himself, at last night's Council meeting, he eagerly accepted it, and told some very plain and wholesome truths.

He stated candidly that he thought some of the people were trying to crowd the company too much to the wall, and asked that mutual fairness and good will be shown. He was coming to Plainfield—he said—in the best spirit, and with best wishes for the city. He was going to be in every way honorable, honest and just with the people. The advent of his proposed superior system of rapid transit was to benefit the city as much as to benefit himself. Their mutual interests were at stake. The town needed waking-up, and he intended to wake it up most thoroughly. He didn't expect to make a cent out of the street railway inside of five years at least, but he expected to expend $300,000 in purchasing and building up property in the outskirts of the city, and promised that in two years he would, through the medium of his road, increase the property valuation of the city 40 per cent. His object was to build up the town, and share with the city the profits of the era of increased prosperity the coming of the road would bring. No place had a greater future—he concluded—than Plainfield. What it needed was more enterprise, and he and his friends desired to introduce new life into the municipality. The road they were going to put in was to be the best road in the country.

Mr. Nevins was loudly applauded by the lobby.

THEY REALLY LIKE THE ROAD.

But They Don't Want the "Big Six" to Win the Honors.

During the debate of the Council meeting, last night, Councilmen Ackerman and Glinna both let fall the observation that they were heartily in sympathy with the plan to give Plainfield rapid transit, but that they thought that every possible restriction should be thrown about the Company.

Councilman Hetfield thereupon took occasion to remark that as a matter of fact very few people were really opposed to the road. Of the 12,000 inhabitants not more than 150 had signed remonstrances against the road's coming. Should that be considered a representation of public sentiment? The truth was that the source of all objections was from a very few persons who thought themselves prominent in social and political circles and who didn't want the six now holding a majority in the Council to get any credit for introducing public improvements. The "kickers" were not opposed to street railway, sewerage, or water-works; they only wanted to keep the six in majority from winning honors.

A Rare and Wholesome Play.

"The Old Homestead", which will be presented at the Stillman Music Hall on Wednesday evening, is well-known as a simple story, and deals with one of the purest types of country life in New England, into which is thrust a wedge of "life in the city," a moving panorama of the two. Many a parent can look back over their past life, and remember just such scenes, and how many times these have been recalled for the benefit of their own children. The moral tone is perfect, the impression pure and wholesome as the most scrupulous can desire; its success is its simplicity in dealing with a subject that comes home to most of its auditors. Very few families to-day but what have their "Joshua Whitcomb," "Aunt Tildy," and son "Rube," and the characters of "Cy Prime," "Seth Perkins," "Happy Jack" and "Rickety Ann" go to make up the list of familiar faces under many a family roof.

New Officers of Grace Church.

Vestrymen—Jno. B. Dumont, O. T. Waring, William E. Lowe, Howard Fleming, E. N. Erickson, W. R. Cock, W. T. Pelletier.

Section 4. The said company and its officers, servants, agents or employes shall not, nor shall any or either of them, be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice or slush alongside the said track or tracks, in any street or streets, in such manner as to obstruct other public travel therein; but, when removing such snow, ice or slush from said track or tracks, the said company or its said officers, servants, agents or employes, shall cause the same to be immediately leveled between said track or tracks and the gutter lines on each side thereof; under a penalty of twenty dollars to be paid by said company, or by any of its said officers, servants, agents or employes so offending to said city, for each and every offense.

Section 6. The company shall, in laying its tracks, switches and turn-outs, conform in all cases, to the grade lines of the streets, as now established, or as they may be hereafter changed or established by the Common Council; and said company shall in case of any such change of grade conform thereto, and alter such tracks, switches and turn-outs to their then new grade, and without unnecessary delay, and under the direction of said committee on streets; or, in case of default, the said committee on streets shall make such a change, or cause the same to be made, and the expenses thereof shall be paid, on demand, by said company to said city, provided ten days' notice of the committee's intension to make such change shall be given, and served in the same manner as in case of repairs as aforesaid.

Section 7. In passing over the gutters of any cross street where the bottom of such gutters is or may be below the grade line of such railroad, the rails shall be securely laid and fastened upon iron bridges of the most approved pattern; and such bridges shall be extended on each side of the track or tracks to the gutter line of the street in which said track or tracks is or are laid; the bridges and work to be subject to the inspection and approval of said Committee on Streets, in every particular.

Section 8. During the construction of said railroad, no unnecessary hindrance or obstruction to ordinary travel upon any such street or streets, shall be permitted; and if any accident or other casualty shall happen or occur, at any time, to any person or property, because or by reason of any work connected with such construction of said railroad or afterward because or by reason of any operation thereof, or through the carelessness or negligence of any of the company's officers or servants, agents or employes, the said company shall be liable therefor, and shall indemnify, and save said city harmless from all cost, loss or damage by reason thereof.

Section 9. No car belonging to said company shall be allowed to stand in or obstruct any cross street, or to stand upon any cross-walk, for any purpose whatsoever, nor shall any car to stand or remain in any one position, upon any street, for more than five minutes at one time, except when said car shall be unavoidably obstructed or detained without the fault or negligence of said company, or any of its officers, servants, agents or employes under the penalty of five dollars to be paid by said company to said city for each and every offense, and that cars stopping to take up or let off passengers at any street crossing shall in all cases do so upon the far side of such street crossing.

Section 10. The said city reserves the right to dig or excavate in or upon any such street in which said railroad shall be so constructed for the purpose of laying, examining, repairing or replacing any water or sewer pipe or other pipes or making or shutting off any connection therewith, or for the purpose of making any other public improvement, or of doing any other public work of any kind whatsoever; and the said company shall not have any recourse against said city therefor, for damages or otherwise, because of any detention or obstruction to the travel upon said railroad arising therefrom.

Section 11. If the said company shall fail to build or construct the whole of said railroad, with its said turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and to put the same in full and complete operation for the transportation of passengers, within nine months next after the passage of this ordinance, or shall afterwards fail or neglect to operate the same as aforesaid, daily and every day for the space of three months, all the rights, powers and privileges, and every one of them, of said company, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of this ordinance, shall thereupon cease and be determined, and this ordinance shall become null and void, so far as the grant of any such right, power or privilege to said company is concerned, and in either of such cases, the Common Council expressly reserves the right to cause the said railroad, or any part or parts thereof, so constructed to be removed from said street or streets, or any of them and to sell and dispose of the materials thereof by public auction, and, after paying all the expenses of such removal and sale, of repairing the said street or streets, and of restoring the same as nearly as possible to the or their original condition to pay the balance of the proceeds of such sale to the said company, its successors or assigns; provided, that no notice of such sale shall be required to be given, other than an advertisement, signed by the City Clerk, and published in one or more newspapers printed and published in said city.

Section 12. That the cars shall be of the pattern known as the vestibule cars, they shall be lighted by electricity and properly heated in winter, and shall be similar in construction and design to the cars of the Rapid Transit Street Railway Company of the city of Newark, N. J. The company shall use upon its cars the Climax or other noiseless gearing, and shall have proper bells or gongs, and shall be run at a speed of not more than twelve miles an hour.

Section 13. That the cars to be used on said railroad shall be propelled by electricity supplied by overhead wires; that the poles necessary for the overhead electric construction shall be of steel or iron, they shall be placed between curb lines and sidewalk, opposite each other and shall be located as nearly as may be one hundred and twenty-five feet apart. The trolley wire shall be properly guarded so as to prevent other wires coming into contact therewith. The current used by said company to propel its cars shall not exceed five hundred volts.

Section 14. That the fares charged for the transportation of passengers over the said railway within the city of Plainfield, shall be as follows: Children under four years of age, free; children over four and under ten years of age not occupying seats required by other passengers, three cents; all others, five cents. School tickets shall be sold for three cents to all children actually attending school, and to all teachers engaged in teaching school within the city of Plainfield.

That said company shall maintain a system of transfers for a continuous ride within the city limits for a single fare on all lines now or hereafter owned or operated by said company, and also to give and receive like transfers to and from all the lines of other street railways upon any equitable basis that can be agreed upon by said companies. And in case of failure of any two of said companies to agree upon any such equitable basis of transfer, the question shall be submitted to arbitrators, one to be chosen by each of the disagreeing companies, a like number by the Common Council of the city of Plainfield, and a fifth by those so chosen, the decision of a majority of such arbitrators to be final and conclusive and binding upon each of the companies.

Section 15. That no license fee shall be charged for the running of the cars of the said company for the period of five years from the date of the adoption of this ordinance; that for each and every year next following said first term of five years there shall be paid to the city a license fee of twenty dollars per annum for every car operated on said railroad.

Section 16. That the cars of the said company shall be run under the following minimum headway, between six A. M. and ten A. M. fifteen minutes; between ten A. M. and three P. M. thirty minutes; between three P. M. and eight P. M. fifteen minutes; between eight P. M. and midnight thirty minutes. The said headway to be reduced as the service requires. Said company shall run its cars in both directions along all portions of its route so that there shall be an equal number of trips each way daily.

Section 17. That when any other method of furnishing the power for the propulsion of cars by electricity shall have been determined to be a practical success, by a commission consisting of three electrical engineers, one to be selected by the Common Council, one by the said company, and the third by the two so chosen, such commission to be appointed within six months after the passage of a resolution by the Common Council requiring the same to be done, and notice thereof given to said company to adopt such improvements or take down their overhead construction, and substitute therefor such improvements or new methods of propulsion; provided such commission may be appointed at any time the Common Council may by resolution require, and the said company shall appoint its representative within thirty days after the adoption of such resolution, or forfeit the permission hereby given; and if such commission shall report in favor of the adoption of such improvements or method of propulsion of cars by electricity hereby permitted, another commission or commissions may be appointed as often as the Common Council may require in the same manner and subject to the same conditions.

Section 18. In case such substitution is made, or the said company shall forfeit the permission hereby given by refusal to appoint a member of the commission in the last section provided for, the Common Council may order the poles and overhead construction of the said company taken down, and the said company shall within ninety days from the service of such order upon the President or any director of said company take down and remove such poles and overhead construction, and restore the pavement of the street or streets to its original condition within that time. In case the poles and overhead construction are not removed or the street restored to its original condition by any company within ninety days from the service of such order, the same shall be done by the Street Commissioner, at the expense of said company, and the company shall in that case pay all expenses connected therewith on demand, and in case the city shall remove such poles and overhead construction, the same shall thereupon become and be the property of the city.

Section 19. That said company upon the final adoption of this Ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges granted hereby shall, as a condition precedent file with the City Clerk of the city of Plainfield a contract to be executed by said company and duly approved by the Corporation Counsel whereby said company covenant and agree with the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield to abide by and perform all the matters and things herein on the part of said company to be observed, kept and performed, that it will, at any and all times hereafter fully indemnify and protect the city of Plainfield of and from any and all suits, actions and proceedings that may be brought and maintained, by any person or corporation for, on account of or by reason of, the adoption or maintenance by said company, its successors or assigns of said electric system aforesaid, or the construction or maintenance of said electric system, or anything connected therewith, or any act of omission or commission by said company, its successors or assigns or any of its agents or servants, at any time or times, and shall whenever requested by said city, fully defend any and every such action, suit or proceeding.

Section 20. That said company shall also at the same time herein above specified for filing said contract file a bond to the city in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the Common Council and corporation counsel of said city, conditioned for the full and faithful keeping, observance and performance of all the terms and conditions of this ordinance contained on part of said company to be kept, observed or performed. And in case the conditions or terms upon which said company is granted permission to locate its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the city reserves the right to revoke the permission hereby granted, to remove the tracks of the said company and all the constructions made in the streets of the city by the said company, its successors or assigns.

SUPERNATURAL TALES.

Julian Hawthorne Writes a Quaint Autobiography.

Personal Experiences in the Occult Recounted by Means of Pen and Ink—The Shadow on the Wall and Other Mysteries.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

It often happens to people of my profession to be asked to tell a story—a ghost story by preference—and, if possible, a ghost story of their own experiencing. It has happened to me, at any rate; and I have uniformly failed to make a good showing. Whether this was because my material was worse than the average, I know not; but I incline to think it was more because I handled it badly. I am no hand to give dates narratives. My object is to reach the point of the story by the shortest route, and so have done with it.

But put the shade over the lamp. When I was a boy of twelve or thirteen, I used to sit and watch a hand holding a pencil, moving to and fro over a sheet of paper. The place was suitable for ghosts and all who were familiar with it declared it to be haunted. It was an ancient Italian villa, or castle, perched on a hill of the town Apennines, overlooking a wide valley, with a historic river winding through it. There was a tower at one end of it, in which a political captive had been imprisoned more than two hundred years before. An owl now occupies the gloomy chamber in which he used to languish; but after sunset it would flap noiselessly round the battlements of the tower, emitting its soft, long-drawn cry. Bats there were also in abundance. And several times, as I lay on the tiled roof up aloft, watching the great comet that arched across the horizon of the valley, I have heard my name called in the air, just over the parapet. There was a clean drop there of seventy feet to the ground.

THE SHADOW ON THE WALL.

In the body of the edifice there was a sort of cell, or oratory, massively constructed of stone, with groined ceiling. This was the special abiding place of the ghost. One night my sister, having occasion to go there, set the candle on the mantel-piece. As she was stooping over a chest in the corner she noticed her shadow glide along the wall. Turning, she saw that the candle had been placed on the table several yards from its former position. But no one except herself was in that part of the house.

An immense place it was, with upwards of forty large rooms. As there were only five of us in the family, we each had a suite of five or six apartments. My bedroom was at the end of the west wing; five rooms opening into one another intervened between that one and a huge reception hall in the center of the building. Often in the dark of the night I have waked up and heard some one pacing to and fro in these rooms, and the rustle of a long skirt sweeping on the bare wooden floors. I used to suppose it was my mother; and it was not until some years later that I discovered that it was either my imagination—or something else. As to that, I can only say that none of us children had the least fear of ghosts, or knew that anybody feared them. We had never been frightened by injudicious means.

However, to go back to that hand. It was a white, well-shaped, woman's hand, with long slender fingers, and a turquoise ring on one finger. I must not make a mystery of this. It was the hand of a fair young American lady who, years afterwards, leaped or fell from a steamboat in Long Island sound, and so vanished from this world. But at the time I write of, she was a woman of happy disposition and singular intelligence, and was a graduate of a famous western college. Greek, and the Calculus, was as familiar to her as figs and grapes were to me. Either her education, or a natural bias of mind, once rendered her rather skeptical in her views; nowadays, she might have been called an agnostic. Nevertheless she possessed (though she herself despised and ridiculed it) that still unexplained power or susceptibility that we have agreed to call mediumistic. She was a "writing medium."

THE GHOSTLY PEN DRIVER.

It was the era of the Fox Sisters, and of Home. Spiritualism has not lost its novelty. Science has delivered no verdict, and nobody knows whether to believe or not. But there was an English lady living near us, whose poetry was read by all England and America, who was a believer, and often discoursed with earnestness on the subject; and one day she said: "If we only had a medium!" Whereupon, this American girl-graduate that I speak of, out of the kindness of her heart, but with some reluctance, intimated that she believed she had some little faculty in that way . . . but that she could not, herself, place the least credence in the supernatural origin of the phenomena.

To make a long story short—for who could resist the urging of that little brown-eyed woman of genius, who was a lyric in herself?—our medium consented to an experiment; and for a couple of weeks thereafter, while seven or eight of us sat round the table in the great Italian hall, the pencil in her white hand would be driven along the paper, now under one unseen impulse, now under another, she regarding it with a look half apprehensive, half incredulous; but all of us hugely interested. Our deceased friends and relatives announced themselves, one after another, and expressed sentiments of unimpeachable morality and virtuous exhortation—just what anyone would have expected of such good and respectable persons; and the thing was becoming a trifle monotonous, and the medium was writing that more useful ways of employing one's leisure might be found; when all of a sudden.

Draw up closer, the story begins here. Her hand which had been moving methodically along under the direction of the spirit of my maternal grandfather, and had just written the words, "we study causes" was suddenly and violently seized upon as it were by a new and turbulent influence almost knocking the pencil out of her fingers and hurrying it onward in a quite original handwriting uncouth and heedless and moreover incorrect in orthography. The medium started and looked troubled; a wave of interest ran round the circle, she bent forward and spoke out the words: "I must speak with Mr. Hawthorne, I want his sympathy."

My father laughed. He had deprecated and made fun of the whole business from the beginning. But with the courtesy of a man of the world, and an ex-consul of the United States, he consented to listen to a communication which seemed to convey such urgency. Who was the vehement petitioner?

In the course of the next half hour we had as much of her history as she ever confided to us. Her name was Mary Rondel. She was born in Boston a hundred years before. She had died there, in pain and misery, while still a young woman. Her troubles had their source in a certain member of our own family with whom she had been intimately acquainted. She was not happy even yet, and Mr. Hawthorne's sympathy she must and would have.

But how shall I indicate the weird, curious and yet pathetic impression that was produced, not more by the matter than by the manner of her communications? Mary Rondel was bitterly in earnest; she would be heard; she upset the propriety of all our other spiritual friends; it was in vain that they attempted to assure us that she was a bad, improper, untruthful, ill-conditioned creature. In the midst of their pious homilies she would swoop down, snatch the pencil and send it staggering in violent evolutions along the page her language was anything but conventional; nay, it sometimes became indiscreet, if not scandalous. Occasionally our refined little medium would protest, and remove her hand from the table. But no sooner did she resume, then Mary was at it again. She would not be denied. She was a temperament, a will, a person. Of all our long procession of communicants, she alone showed an unmistakable and vivid individuality. We would have known her had we met her on the street. She had been waiting in the dark void of the unseen world, for the better part of a century, for an opportunity to speak and declare herself, and she was not going to let it go unimproved. And yet the poor creature knew not what to say—only that she admired Mr. Hawthorne's sympathy. But what good it was to do her, or by what right she demanded it, we were not informed. He assured her that he would not and did not sympathize with her, hoping, thereby, to pacify her and so get rid of her.

Now, the sequel was strange: we returned to America two or three years later, and four years after that my father died. Some venerable maiden cousins of ours sent us, some months subsequently, a box of old books and papers that had belonged to our family in the last century. Among the books was a dilapidated copy of Sir Phillip Sydney's "Arcadia," bearing date 1586. On the fly-leaves were the autographs of a number of our ancestors, from the first emigrant down to Daniel Hawthorne, who, history says, commanded a privateer during the revolution. And on the broad margin at the bottom of the tenth page was inscribed, in faded brown ink, a woman's name: "Mary Rondel." It is before me as I write, an ill-formed name, but showing character.

After some reflection, I remembered the circumstances under which I had seen that name before. Searching further into the book I came upon the love sonnets and stanzas in the latter part of the volume; but several of these had been marked round with a pen; and such glosses written in the margin as "Pray, mistris, read this;" or "Read this as if I myself spake it." Some of these writings were in the chirography of Daniel Hawthorne; others, in another hand. I surmised that the book had once been read, jointly, by two lovers, who had taken this indirect means of intimating their sentiments.

The longer I meditated upon the matter, the more interested I became. At last I wrote a letter to those old maiden cousins, and, without saying anything about the spiritual experience in the Italian villa, I inquired whether they were cognizant of any family traditions connected with a person called Mary Rondel. Here is their reply:

"DEAR COUSIN . . . . . A Miss Mary Rondel, of Boston, knew one of your great bodies, Daniel Hawthorne, about 1775. The story will not interest you; it is not creditable to either party. It ended unfortunately; there had been some talk of a marriage, but their relations were broken off, and I am unable to say what became of the young woman. Your uncle afterwards fitted out a privateer," etc., etc.

No; I don't pretend to explain it. I simply give you the facts. Take off the shade from the lamp. That is enough for one evening.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

AN ORIGINAL RECIPE.

I do not think that I am very vain,
But this I do assert, and will maintain,
That my recipe for nice brown bread
(The product of a proudly-scheming head)
Is just the nicest that I ever ate,
And with baked beans might grace a fairy's fete.
Take equal quantities you must, of wheat,
Cornmeal and Graham flour (no wondrous feat),
Two eggs, and melted butter, one-half cup.
Of pure, sweet milk, a pint. (Don't drink it up, Though tempted sore.) Molasses? Yes, you'll need
A full half-cup, and after that, indeed,
A teaspoon saleratus, and beside,
Another teaspoon salt. Then, for a guide.
In mere consistency why let it be
Like cake, so all who eat it will agree
That I its praises may with justice sing.
—C. H. Thayer, in Good Housekeeping.

HANDSOME DOILIES.

Dainty Trifles Which Add to the Attractiveness of the Dinner Table.

To the housekeepers who have time and means to add other attractions to their tables than the snowy linen all may have, nothing can be more dainty and fresh than the new center pieces and doilies, in which some flower composes the entire doily, and forms the border of the center piece.

The design given is just one-third the size of original, and shows a white rose doily, embroidered in white silk on white damask.

The edge of outer leaves is cut out and worked in button-hole stitch; then the outlines of center leaves are done in stem-stitch, long-and-short-stitch and satin-stitch, as shown in illustration. The veins are done in stem-stitch with delicate pink silk.

The flowers for border of center-piece may be used the same size as the doily, in which case eight will make border, one in each corner, and one in center of each side, two sides being made longer by leaving a small space the width of one leaf, between the side flowers and corner, working the same as edge of leaves. A round centerpiece edged with roses of the size given in the illustration would be pretty.

A pansy makes a simple design. While daffodils worked in shaded yellow silk on white make a very rich pattern.

Any of these designs may be followed in colored silks on colored damask, if preferred.

A beautiful center-piece may be done on bolting silk, by cutting out and painting pansies for border in natural colors and sizes, and fastening them on with invisible stitches. Or the edges may be cut to represent leaves, as in the illustration, and then the flowers painted. These same designs make beautiful toilet sets, or lamp or vase mats.

A pretty lamp mat is made by painting the pansy border on the colored chamois, so much the style just now. Table covers and tops of pin cushions are also made of this colored chamois. In all these it will be found easier to paint the border first, then cut the edges away, making a pretty colored scallop-edge.—Eva Evans, in Housekeeper.

MEDICI COLLAR FICHU.

A Handsome and Popular Accessory to the Toilet.

A handsome finish for any nice dress to be worn in the house. It is made of cream-white silk ruched in a plaiting to stand up around the neck at the back, and folded to form V-shaped revers inside a pointed shawl collar of black silk upon which black thread lace about four inches wide is gathered in a ruffle. Butterfly bows of black ribbon at each side of the neck-plaiting and at the end of the fichu-collar, which reaches the waist, complete this accessory to the toilet, which can be made in other colors and in white lace, as well as in those described.—Demorest's Family Magazine.

The Proper Care of Brooms.

The rapidity with which brooms ordinarily wear out is surprising, says Harper's Bazar. This is partly due to leaving the broom standing on its brush end when not in use, but more to carelessness in handling. A piece of strong cloth, or, better yet, of old woven under-flannel or stockinet, should be drawn on over the handle and down below the place where the broom splints are stitched. A few stitches with strong cotton yarn should fasten this cover both at its lower edge and gather and fasten it around the handle, sewing the stitches through and through. This cover holds the broom splints together, and prevents their breaking out and the tearing off of the banding of a broom which repeated striking against doors and mop-boards and reaching under heavy pieces of furniture does.

DUKE'S PLAYTHING.

A True Story of a Wonderfully Smart and Clever Dog.

Who do you suppose Duke is?

Some nobleman, who has a crest showing that he comes of a proud old race of men?

Oh, no. Duke is a noble, great dog, and not a man at all. But what do you think Duke has for a plaything? It is not a rubber ball, nor a stick, nor any thing of the kind.

It's a doll. Duke's mistress says she has to give him a doll to play with, just the same as she does her little girl. When Duke feels like playing he will go to find the doll where he left it after his last frolic; then he will shake it as if he meant to shake all the breath out of poor Dolly's body. Then he will chew her as if he meant to eat her up. Next he will catch her up in his mouth and run away with her.

By and by, when he is tired of playing, he will run and put Dolly in some sly place, where he can get her the next time he wants to play.

I must tell you something else that is funny about Duke. He never makes it a habit to follow his master or mistress when they go away from the house except on Sunday. When the family starts for church Duke always goes too. He trots merrily along until he reaches a certain corner; then he stops, turns around and trots home again. Do you not think him a very wise dog?

When Duke sees his master take down his gun he goes nearly wild. He is in part what is called a "setter," a dog that is very fond of hunting.

One day, when his master was going out gunning, he shut Duke up in a room to see what he would do; then he shot off some powder from his gun.

There was a screen in the window covered with cloth in the room where Duke was, and when he heard the gun go off and saw the door was shut, he gave one great bound, burst through the screen, and was at his master's side in a moment.

I do not think Duke was to blame for bounding through the screen, do you? His master will not shut him up in a room again, and then fire off a gun to see what he will do. He has found out.

It would have been very cruel to have made Duke stay at home because he spoiled the screen. His master loved him too well for that. Duke went hunting, and a fine time he had, too.

Is it not strange that a dog should know so much? How kind every one ought to be to the animals who are so gentle and kind themselves.—Mrs. Harriet A. Cheever, in Our Little Ones.

ELEPHANTS IN INDIA.

How the Huge Pachyderms Enjoy Their Luscious Breakfast.

If there is one thing which an elephant enjoys above all things else it is his bath.

The splashings and gurglings and sport of the great elephants at their morning bath in the Frog pond on Boston Common is one of the favorite sights of Boston children when the big circuses come to town.

In India elephants are used to draw the great guns of the heavy batteries. They take their baths in the barracks, at the troughs where they drink, and they behave much better about it than many children.

They cannot duck themselves all over as the traveled elephants do on Boston Common. Instead, they have to lie down and be patient while they are washed by their attendants. They turn themselves about very promptly to suit their convenience.

The attendant rubs the hide with a piece of stone instead of a sponge; and if the stone slips out of his hand the elephant politely picks it up with his trunk and hands it back.

After they have been well scrubbed the elephants give themselves a shower bath, using their trunks to dash the water upon themselves, and they can hit any part of their bodies with ease.

After the bath they form into a row, side by side, ready for breakfast.

Each elephant has five bundles of straw at this meal, and each bundle has two pounds of rice in it. These bundles are laid down before the elephants. But they are not permitted to help themselves, because they would spill and scatter the rice. At the word "Feed!" each elephant raises its trunk. The attendant then lifts a bundle and lays it in the elephant's mouth. So the great elephants are fed like little babies by the soldier nurses.

Their supper is of sugar-cane and coarse grass.—Sophie Scissors, in Our Little Men and Women.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

A Perfect Success. 7

The Rev. A. Antoine of Refugio, Tex., writes: As far as I am able to judge, I think Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is a perfect success, for any one who suffered from a most painful nervousness as I did. I feel now like myself again after taking the Tonic.

A Strong Proof.

ORILLIA, ONT., CANADA, June, '89.

I was first attacked by epilepsy in November 1887; resulting in New York I consulted the best physicians, but they could only arrest the disease, the honest ones told me then there was no cure for it—I was compelled to give up my occupation and return to Canada in 1888; since then I tried innumerable remedies and consulted some of the best physicians, but nothing benefited me until I began to use Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic in September '89, since then I had not a single attack.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

THE BIG STRIKE IS ON

The Miners Start the Battle for Eight Hours.

IT WAS AN UNEXPECTED MOVE.

The Important Change Promulgated at a Conference in Pittsburg.

President Rae Agitated Beginning the Fight on Account of the Situation in the Coke Region—He Says His Organization is Able to Carry the Miners on for Many Weeks—The Coke Region Quiet.

PITTSBURG, April 1.—The great struggle of the miners of the United States for the adoption of an eight-hour work day begins to-day instead of May 1, as had been previously announced.

This important change was promulgated last night at a conference here between the workers and the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, to which the miners are affiliated.

Those present at the meeting were Secretary Evans of the American Federation, and Vice-President John B. Lemon of New York and William A. Carney of Pittsburg. President Rae and Vice-President Penna of the United Mine Workers.

The object of the conference was to review the situation in the Connellsville region and to determine on the future course to be there pursued. President Rae declared in favor of precipitating the eight-hour fight at once, especially because of the situation in the Connellsville section.

He said his organization was able to carry the miners along for many weeks, although they had been paying $20,000 a week in strike benefits.

THE COKE REGION QUIET.

At Several Places the Miners Return to Work Under Guard.

PITTSBURG, April 1.—The coke regions are quiet to-day, but trouble is expected at any moment.

At several places the miners have returned to work under guard. The strikers will hold more meetings to-night.

Residents at Mt. Pleasant Alarmed.

MT. PLEASANT, Pa., April 1.—Residents of this place are alarmed, and feel that their property is at the mercy of an angry foreign element. There is no mistaking the situation. If an attempt is made to resume work there will be serious trouble. That a crisis is approaching seems to have impressed every citizen, and there is scarcely a home in Mount Pleasant from the windows of which the light was not streaming all night.

A General Outbreak Expected.

PITTSBURG, April 1.—Reports from Morewood say the deputies and bosses there expect a more general outbreak than has ever visited the works before, and extensive preparations are being made to receive it.

BACK TO GALWAY JAIL.

O'Brien and Dillon Leave Cork for Their Old Quarters.

CORK, April 1.—Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien have been removed from jail at this place and conveyed back to Galway where they will again be placed in confinement.

The prisoners had been brought here from Galway jail in order that they might be present to testify in the recent trial of Michael O'Brien Dalton and others for rioting on the occasion of the Tipperary conspiracy trials.

Death of Miss Emma Mayo.

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 1.—Miss Emma Mayo, a member of one of the oldest families of this place, a niece of Gen. Winfield Scott, and a great-granddaughter of John Dehart, a member of the Continental Congress, died at her home here during the morning of pneumonia. She was noted for her deeds of charity. In many things she was eccentric, and she had her coffin constructed some years ago of plain oak, with a large cross engraved on the lid.

Agreement Not Yet Signed.

PHILADELPHIA, April 1.—C. A. Spreckels said that there was no foundation for the story of the reported agreement between his father and the sugar trust. He added that his father wouldn't never make a deal with the trust, and that the refinery here would continue to be operated as an independent concern and would not be sold to the trust or abandoned.

To Found a New Bank.

NEW YORK, April 1.—A project to found a new bank on the ruins of the North River Bank, which collapsed last autumn, is under way. A bank with a capital of $200,000 and a surplus of $100,000 is suggested. The memory of Gen. Sherman is to be honored by the selection of the name, "Sherman National Bank."

Collided With the Utopia's Wreck.

GIBRALTAR, April 1.—The British steamer Primula collided last night with the wreck of the Utopia, but without further disaster than being stove in and getting her forepeak full of water.

ITALY'S NAVAL FORCE.

Ranks Third to England and France Only in Number of Vessels.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—There are in all probability no men-of-war afloat that carry heavier guns or are more formidable than those that Italy has recently built. While the navy does not contain as many as that of England or France, it has better vessels.

Italy did not begin to build her new vessels until the experiments made by other nations had enabled her to decide upon a type. She has, either finished or well advanced, 22 armored ships. Of these 10 are of modern build, having a displacement of 11,000 tons or more each, and a speed exceeding 15 1-2 knots. These vessels carry the heaviest guns made, the Armstrong breech-loading rifle of 13 to 17 inches caliber.

There are in the Italian navy 180 vessels, manned by 17,316 marines and officers, in addition she has a naval reserve force of 14,000 men. The active land force numbers 1,456,850 men, with a reserve of 1,758,776 men and officers.

The United States navy comprises 19 new vessels and seven steel and iron ships from the old navy, the entire fleet being manned by a force of 2,077 men. The standing army aggregates 27,390 privates and officers.

FEELING IN NEW YORK.

The Italians Greatly Surprised Over the Recall.

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Italians in this city were greatly surprised at the recall of Baron Fava, their Minister, though it had been whispered about in their colony for some time that something startling was in contemplation.

The following is the editorial of the Progress Americano, which appeared this morning:

"The recall of Baron Fava, the Italian Minister to Washington, is certainly one of the most serious and solemn steps which could have been taken by the government in the present circumstances against America, which has for so many years been a friendly nation.

"Italy has done its duty and the colony has cordially approved, and we hope and believe that it has measured and weighed all the consequences of the act which—whether we will or not—is an open rupture of the diplomatic relations between Italy and America and the first step toward an armed demonstration."

ITALY'S NAVY NEEDED.

The Triple Alliance Aroused Over the New Orleans Affair.

BERLIN, April 1.—The relations between Italy and the United States are beginning to arouse anxiety among the other members of the triple alliance, in view of the threatening situation in the East.

Should the fleet of Italy be occupied by hostilities with America, this would seriously embarrass the alliance, which has looked to Italy's fleet to hold the Mediterranean against Russia and France in the event of war.

It is expected, therefore, that Germany will advise Italy not to take too aggressive a view of the affair at New Orleans.

HOW LONDON VIEWS IT.

The Daily News Sees No Way Out of the Difficulty.

LONDON, April 1.—The Daily News is the only paper of this city which contained any comments on the recall of Baron Fava, the Italian Minister at Washington.

The Daily News thinks that the authorities of Louisiana cannot bring the lynchers of the Italian prisoners to trial, and that, therefore, the deadlock between the United States and Italy will continue unless the latter country abates its demands for satisfaction for the murder of its subjects.

MR. BAYARD'S VIEWS.

The Ex-Secretary Thinks Italy Was a Little Too Hasty.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 1.—Ex-Secretary of State Thomas F. Bayard was interviewed regarding the recall of Baron Fava by the Italian government.

"The action is without precedent," said Mr. Bayard, "and is a big surprise to me. It is ill-advised and hasty and should have been considered by the Italian government before they adopted the course they did. Such affairs are not infrequent and investigations have been the custom. What Italy will do I cannot say, but I do not think the affair will develop into anything serious."

Excitement in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, April 1.—There was considerable excitement among the citizens of New Orleans when the news of Baron Fava's recall reached here. They congregated in groups and discussed the possibility of international complications, and the liklihood of hostilities. The prevailing sentiment, however, is unchanged regarding the justice of the lynching.

King Humbert Won't Leave Rome.

ROME, April 1.—King Humbert and Queen Margherita contemplate making a tour of Sardinia in May, unless the trouble with America, growing out of the lynching of Italians in New Orleans, should be prolonged, in which case the King will not leave Rome.

DIXON IS CHAMPION

The Boston Colored Lad Defeats Cal McCarthy.

TWENTY-THREE ROUNDS FOUGHT

The Jerseyman Was Game but Had to Act on the Defensive Throughout.

There Was Hard Fighting from the Start—McCarthy Was Knocked Down Five Times—Dixon Landed Right and Left—The Winner Cheered by the Large Crowd Present—Profits of the Fight.

TROY, N. Y., April 1.—"Cal" McCarthy of Jersey City, who has for over two years been the featherweight champion of America, last night surrendered the title to George "Dixon, the colored boxer of Boston, who has also won the featherweight championship of England.

Dixon has been, ever since the match was made, the favorite in the betting, but McCarthy, who has many friends and admirers among the wealthier sporting people of New York and vicinity, carried considerable money.

All Ready for the Fight.

At 9:40 Dixon came into the hall. He was attended by Tom O'Rourke and Harvie Hodgkins. He was mildly applauded.

In about 10 minutes McCarthy arrived, attended by Jack McAuliffe and Billy Madden, his seconds. Jack O'Mara and Tom Collins were close behind.

It was just 10:15 when Dixon entered the ring. Jimmy Colville, of Boston, was made timekeeper for the club. At 10:20 McCarthy entered the ring. He was given a perfect ovation.

It was evident that the sympathy of the Troy people was with McCarthy. Cal was dressed in loose knee breeches, black shoes and blue stockings. Dixon wore only a breech-clout.

Charlie Johnston was timekeeper for McCarthy and Mike Bradley kept time for Dixon. Jere Dunn was referee.

The Battle.

At 10:27 the men grasped hands, looked at one another and a second after the great fight was on.

After some preliminary fencing McCarthy hit with the left, and both contestants closed. After release the negro opened with the left, and McCarthy replied with a lightning blow on the jugular.

McCarthy forced the fighting, the negro remaining at guard, but when he tried to come in his opponent thrice hit him heavy blows on the jaw.

In the second round McCarthy again led. He led straight off the shoulder with his left, but Dixon ducked, and Cal slipped toward the ropes. In wheeling he was severely punished on the head. McCarthy came up a little pale, and the negro smiled.

Dixon again pressed him on the ropes and hit him two terrific blows on the jaw, which felled him.

There was some slight cheering, and when the two rose they gave each other a terrible pummeling. Dixon had all the best of it.

In the third round McCarthy was once knocked down, though the fighting was light. In the fourth McCarthy scored a point by flooring Dixon with a left hander.

The fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth rounds were characterized by hard fighting on the part of both men, McCarthy saving himself a great deal of punishment by his clever ducking.

Dixon showed a damaged optic as he came up for the ninth round and his face was terribly swollen, while Mac showed but little punishment.

The 12th round was one of the most exciting ever witnessed in the arena. Dixon swung his right heavily on his opponent's jaw. Mac staggered a second and Dixon went for him like a mad bull. The Jerseyman clinched with him for grim death. In the break-away the colored lad sent in his right and left, bringing the crimson fluid from nose and mouth. The gong sounded as Mac tried a rush.

In the next four rounds the boys were terribly in earnest, but Mac was obliged to fight mostly on the defensive, except in the 15th, where he actually outrushed his adversary.

From the 16th up to the 23d round McCarthy had but 1 chance out of 10 for winning. He fought altogether on the defensive.

The Jersey man came up with the picture of despair written upon his face for the 23d round. Dixon seeing he had his man in Queer street started in to put on the finishing touches. He got McCarthy in a corner, where he rained a hurricane of blows upon McCarthy's face and body. McCarthy fell helpless to the floor and Referee Dunn delared Dixon the winner amid a whirlwind of applause.

As the fruits of victory Dixon gained $3,800 and the championship.

Increase in the Public Debt.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The heavy disbursement of the Treasury Department during the month of March caused an increase in the public debt statement, issued this afternoon, of about $2,500,000. In addition to the ordinary expenses of the government there have been paid out during March more than $5,000,000 on account of the direct tax refund. The surplus is now less than $18,000,000.

The World's Fair Art Department.

CHICAGO, April 1.—The City Council passed an ordinance permitting the erection of a permanent art building on the lake front to be used by the Art Institute after the course of the World's Fair.

Healy Arrives in Sligo.

SLIGO, April 1.—Mr. Timothy D. Healy, with his head carefully bandaged, has just arrived here to take part in the exciting election now pending.

The Pope Seriously Ill.

ROME, April 1.—Pope Leo is prostrated by stomachic trouble, and has been ordered by his physicians to remain in bed for the present.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

He Will Leave for California April 15 and be Away for Six Weeks.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The President, as now advised, will leave Washington on Wednesday, April 15, for his California trip. The party that will accompany him will be small and will probably include no ladies.

Several members of the Cabinet will be of the party, including Secretary Tracy, who will avail himself of the opportunity afforded by the trip to visit the Mare Island Navy Yard and the Union Iron Works at San Francisco, where several United States vessels are now in the course of construction. The itinerary of the trip is not yet mapped out, but the President will probably be away in all about six weeks.

Numerous letters of inquiry as to what cities the President will pass through are being daily received at the Executive Mansion, and no replies can be made, as the President himself has not yet made up his mind as to the exact route he will take.

HER MIND WRECKED.

Mrs. Schmidt Acquitted of the Charge of Murdering Her Sister.

MEDIA, Pa., April 1.—After being out 35 minutes the jury acquitted Mrs. Schmidt of the charge of having murdered her sister, Emma Pfitzenmeyer, last December.

Mrs. Schmidt has been placed under the care of physicians. It is believed that the severe strain to which she has been subjected has completely wrecked her mind.

Her husband, Henry Schmidt, who was held as an accessory in the murder, was discharged immediately after the verdict was rendered in his wife's case, the district-attorney having withdrawn the charge against him.

SHE STARVED TO DEATH.

The Dead Body of an Old Woman Found in a Horrible Condition.

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 1.—Ellen Sheridan was found dead in her home on Washington avenue early in the morning, having died from starvation.

Her condition was frightful, her body being covered with filth and vermin, while there was no roof on the habitation in which she lived.

The bed was a mass of decaying feathers and rotting straw, while the odor in the place was horrible.

Mrs. Sheridan was about 60 years old, and has a daughter living in this city and another in New York.

HARRIS ARRESTED.

The Medical Student Charged With Murder in the First Degree.

NEW YORK, April 1.—Carlyle W. Harris, the medical student who prescribed morphine pills for his wife Helen Potts, from the effects of which she died, has been arrested on a warrant charging him with murder in the first degree.

On being arraigned before Judge Fitzgerald, Harris was committed to the Tombs pending an examination.

Another Requisition for Garnett.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 1.—Requisition papers in the case of Thomas Garnett were served again on Gov. Davis. These last papers bore the regular seal of the State of Connecticut and also the signature of the Secretary of State. The lack of these requirements on the last papers presented was the Governor's reason for refusing to honor them. Gov. Davis will hold a hearing in the matter on Friday, when argument on both sides will be heard.

Successful Fishing Experiment.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., April 1.—Captain Bradford, of the schooner Mary F. Chisholm, just arrived from an experimental trip beam trawling on the Georges Banks, reports the undertaking a success. He took 18,000 pounds of various kinds of fish by this method. Among the fish taken were a number of lemon sole, such as are caught in the North Sea, and never seen in these waters. It is probable that a revolution in the methods of bank fishing may follow this experiment.

Rochester's Labor Trouble.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 1.—The clothing manufacturers have decided to receive the applications of the men for work and the lockout is therefore at an end. The clothing cutters held a meeting during the morning and passed resolutions repudiating the Knights of Labor and the leaders and denouncing the boycott.

Flaw in the Indictment.

NEW YORK, April 1.—The trial of the Excise Commissioners came to an abrupt termination. A palpable flaw was discovered in the indictment. Recorder Smyth was considerably amazed and promptly ordered an adjournment. A motion will be made to dismiss the indictments.

Torn to Pieces While Intoxicated.

DOVER, N. H., April 1.—Frank Leighton, of Milton, met a horrible death while intoxicated. He fell from his carriage and was dragged six miles over a rocky road. His remains were terribly mutilated, having been practically torn to pieces.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Acting Treasurer Whelpley to-day mailed 25,011 checks, aggregating $3,043,644, in payment of interest due April 1 on registered four per cent. bonds.

Author of "The Bread-Winners."

NEW YORK, April 1.—Mr. J. H. Harper authorizes a contradiction of the report that the Rev. Dr. Modenshall of Cleveland is the author of "The Bread-Winners."

A Child Burned to Death.

WILL THERE BE WAR

Italy's Surprising Move in the New Orleans Affair.

RECALLS HER MINISTER HASTILY

Diplomatic Relations With This Country Yet Not Broken Off.

THE ITALIAN LEGATION WILL STAY.

The Situation is Grave Over the Open Signs of Hostility.

Officials Decline to Formally Discuss the Affair—Ex-Secretary Bayard Amazed—The Triple Alliance Worked Over the Situation—How the News Was Received in New Orleans and Other Cities—Comment of the London News This Morning—Opinions of Leading Papers.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The recall of Baron Fava, the Italian Minister and dean of the diplomatic corps in Washington, created great surprise when it became known. No such sensational incident in the diplomatic life of the capital has occurred since Lord Sackville West, the British Minister, received his passports from Secretary Bayard two years and a half ago.

The first report was to the effect that Baron Fava had demanded his passports and this statement was telegraphed throughout the United States and Europe. This proved to be incorrect, however.

MR. BLAINE RETICENT.

The Secretary of State Not Ready to Discuss the Situation.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Secretary Blaine and the State Department officials are very reticent about making public any official statement concerning the recall of the Italian Minister, Baron Fava.

Secretary Blaine said that it would be manifestly improper for him at this time to express any opinion in the matter. It is believed, however, that the Secretary is not alarmed at the turn affairs have taken, and that he is confident the difficulty is temporary and can be settled through the usual diplomatic channels.

The War Rumor.

Baron Fava has been a diplomatic duty in Washington for the past ten years, and his retirement will be much regretted. The highly sensational rumors pertaining to a severance of diplomatic relations and possible war between the two countries as a result of Baron Fava's retirement, are not believed to have any foundation in fact.

Discontent Over the New Orleans Affair.

A very high official authority, whose knowledge of the diplomatic transactions of the present administration is the best, and whose responsibility cannot be questioned, gave to the press the following statement, which may be taken as representing the feeling of the Administration concerning the withdrawal:

"Baron Fava, the Italian Minister, notified the State Department that, under orders from Rome, he was compelled to withdraw from his mission near this government. He does not, however, close the Italian Legation, leaving Marquis Imperiali, the present secretary, to act as Charge d'Affaires. This action on the part of the Italian Minister is in no sense one of hostility to this government, merely indicates a certain degree of discontent on the part of the Italian Ministry respecting the New Orleans parish prison affair."

DISCUSSING THE RECALL.

The Matter a Subject of Intense Interest in Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Little is talked about in Washington to-day except the recall of Baron Fava by the Italian government. In the hotels, on the streets and in the public clubs, the matter is the subject of intense interest.

Strange to say, in diplomatic and official circles the same importance is not attached to Baron Fava's recall as in the public resorts. The fact that the Italian Legation is to remain here and conduct the routine business that usually passes between governments shows that diplomatic relations between the United States and Italy are not severed.

BARON FAVA'S LAST ACT.

According to Diplomatic Etiquette He Must Call on the President.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Baron Fava must, according to diplomatic etiquette, present his letter of recall to President Harrison before severing all official connection with the United States government.

It is said, by persons well versed in diplomatic matters, that a failure to present this letter would be a direct slight to the government.

A minister, when about to present his letter of recall is accompanied to the Executive mansion by the Secretary of State, and after the minister has presented his letters and made a few remarks explanatory of them, the President usually makes a short complimentary speech, expressing his regret at the minister's withdrawal, and his hope that pleasant relations will continue between the two countries.

It remains to be seen what will be done in this regard before Baron Fava leaves Washington.

Arrests from a Riot.

NEW YORK, April 1.—William Lefurgy was instantly killed, and Michael Lawler seriously injured at Hastings, Westchester County, while blasting in the former's stone quarry. Lawler was tamping the discharge when a spark from the steel drill ignited the powder and set off the blast. Lefurgy was horribly mutilated. Lawler was badly cut about the head and will probably lose the sight of both eyes.

WILL THE BROTHERS HANG?

The Nicely Boys to Die To-morrow Unless Gov. Pattison Interferes.

SOMERSET, Pa., April 1.—The citizens of this county grow more excited as the day for the execution of the Nicely brothers draws near. Any time throughout the day little squads of men can be seen on the corners discussing the execution, which is to take place to-morrow.

It is not thought here that Gov. Pattison will re-open the case on the report of Dr. Orth, who, after watching the condemned men for some time, left the jail fully satisfied that Joe was insane.

Detective Charles McPhail of the Gilkinson Agency has openly stated that he has no doubt of the guilt of the Nicely brothers, and that Fitzsimmons, who shot Detective Gilkinson, is not the murderer of old Farmer Umberger.

For the past few months Dave Nicely has been on a religious turn. It is probable that he will make a confession before he is sent to the gallows.

ALL ARE INDICTED.

The Officers of the New Haven Road Charged With Misdemeanor.

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Grand Jury after a week's investigation into the recent disaster in the Fourth Avenue tunnel indicted the following directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company of misdemeanor.

Charles C. Clark, President, E. M. Reed, vice president, both of New York city; Wilson G. Hunt, New Haven; E. H. Trowbridge, New Haven; W. D. Bishop, sr., of Bridgeport; Henry C. Robertson, Hartford; Joseph Park, New York city; Henry S. Lee, Springfield; Chauncey M. Depew, New York city; Nathaniel Wheeler, Bridgeport; William Rockfeller, New York city and Leverett Brainard, Hartford.

Chauncey M. Depew surrendered himself and and Judge Fitzgerald fixed his bail at $5,000. Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who was present, immediately qualified as his bondsman, giving as security his palatial residence on Fifth avenue.

Six-Day Bicycle Race.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 1.—Beginning nexr Tuesday evening a bicycle race will take place at Washington Rink, lasting six days. The time for riding each day will be from 8 to 11 p. m. The distance to be covered is 500 miles. Among those entered is William Clark, champion of Canada.

English Flour Advancing.

LONDON, April 1.—The Leeds Millers' Association has advanced the price of flour 1s. 6d., making a total advance of 5s. 6d. during the month of March. This is due to the rise in the price of English and foreign wheats.

Parnell Has a Severe Cold.

SLIGO, April 1.—Mr. Parnell is confined to his hotel through having a severe cold.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - - Managing Editor.

All those who have copies of the petition to have the freight house removed, are requested to hand them in, or mail them, to THE PRESS office, before noon of Friday.

BY THE WAY.

—New all over. Tuckings at Peck's.

—Good values in torchon laces at Peck's.

—Dr. J. A. Allis has changed his office from 73 Park avenue to 87 Park avenue, corner of Fifth street.

—The carpenters and joiners have given notice that after May 1 eight hours will constitute a day's work with full pay, on Saturdays only.

—Ladies' will save time and money by doing their shopping at Edsall's where a complete assortment can always be found at reasonable prices.

—Day laborers throughout the city have entered a demand before their employers for an increase in wages of 25 cents per day, the increase to take effect at once.

—The talk on locomotives to be given by Robert G. Smith, M. E., at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow evening, will be illustrated by charts and photographs. Admission free.

—Every citizen should read the talk of Herman W. Grannis before the Jersey City Board of Trade, published elsewhere in to-day's PRESS. It is the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, about a matte you are interested in.

—The popularity of the Royal Blue line, via the Central Railrord of New Jersey, between New York and Washington, has called for the addition of a dining and sleeper car, which General Passenger Agent H. P. Baldwin thinks are as fine as any in use.

—At the meeting of the Epworth League at Vincent chapel, Friday evening, the Rev. Mr. Mitchell will give a talk entitled, "Through Ireland in a Jaunting Car," with stereoscopic views. Members and friends of the League are cordially invited to attend.

—Hod-carriers all over the city struck to-day for an increase in wages of from $2 to $2.25 per day. About 50 of them have quit work. They have the Plainfield Protective Union at their back, and expect to have the bosses accede to their demand after a few days' idleness.

—Charles Arnold has purchased from N. B. Smalley the meat market at 94 Somerset street, and announces in a PRESS advertisement to-day that he is ready to serve customers with the best of fresh and salt meats, fish and poultry, both at that address and at his former shop, 21 Liberty street.

—"Men who are talked about" is the standing heading under which a leading journal discusses the prominent men of the times. But you look in vain for the name of your esteemed citizen, Peck. He may not be a great statesman, but he sells good goods and is one of the "men who are talked about," in this community, at least.

—A. D. Mallinson is already doing a thriving business at his new North Avenue Pharmacy. He has one of the neatest and most attractive of stores, and his line of drugs, medicines, chemicals and fancy goods is very complete. His soda-water is drawn from Matthews's latest improved style of fountain, and is pronounced delicious. The public find his store inviting, reliable and satisfactory.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Rev. David F. Robertson is ill at his home, 76 East Second street. Dr. Carman is attending him.

Miss Estelle Stokes of Philadelphia is visiting the Misses Emma and Ida Force of West Second street.

Francis Bartels, Jr., whose sad case was reported exclusively in yesterday's PRESS, was taken to the insane asylum at Trenton to-day. A large circle of friends and admirers unite in sympathy with his relatives, and join in the hope that entire recovery may speedily be brought about.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE TROLLEY.

Jersey City's Board of Trade Listens to a Thorough Exposition of the Overhead Power System as Compared With Everything Else.

Herman W. Grannis of New York, upon invitation of the Board of Trade of Jersey City, placed before that body the other evening, his information, knowledge and experience of the trolley system of street car propulsion. He said in part:

THE LAST STORAGE BATTERY CAR WITHDRAWN.

Coming now to the methods used on electric railways we find three which we shall need to consider.

1. The Storage Battery system.
2. The Underground Contact system.
3. The Overhead or so-called Trolley system.

The Storage Battery system may be dismissed in a few words. * * *

The storage battery may have its uses, but one of them is not for the satisfactory operation of street cars. Theoretically, the storage battery system is ideal, but commercially speaking it is a failure. In New York, one week ago to-day, the last two storage battery cars were withdrawn from the Fourth Avenue line, permanently as is stated. The expense of operation and maintenance as well as the uncertainty of the power, when needed most, constitute probably the chief causes of failure. * * *

THE UNDERGROUND SYSTEM ABANDONED.

In the underground contact system, a wire carrying the outgoing current is placed in a conduit, usually between the tracks, and by means of an arm or other device let down through the slot of the conduit, the current is conducted up to the car motors. All attempts in this country at the operating, commercially speaking, of electric cars by the underground contact system, have been abandoned, the principal causes of failure being, interference with the electric current from the filling of the conduit with dirt and water. I incline to the belief that a carefully built, perfectly drained conduit, large enough to admit a man for the purpose of cleaning and inspection, might make the system successful. But the enormous cost of such a conduit precludes the possibility of its profitable use, except perhaps in very thickly settled communities.

THE TROLLEY'S THE LOWEST IN COST AND EASIEST REPAIRED.

The overhead trolley system is the only reliable and satisfactory one now thought of. Right here it might be well to state what no doubt many of you know, namely, that an electric current to do its work must go out from the point of generation by one path and come back to its source by another. In other words the circuit must be complete and unbroken. Now from this will readily be understood the necessity for the overhead wire. The outgoing current is sent on the overhead wire, from which it is taken by contact of the trolley wheel at the end of the trolley arm with the wire; thence through the wires in the car to the motors under the car; thence through the track and ground wire back to the point of generation. Its advantages consist in low cost of construction and ease of inspection and repair. With this system we reach the minimum of cost of operation. * * *

MISREPRESENTED IN THE NEWSPAPERS THROUGH IGNORANCE.

In localities where electric cars have not been in operation by the overhead system so that their merits and advantages could be understood, there has been more or less of prejudice against them. Their objectionable features have been magnified and exaggerated by the press, not with the intention of misrepresenting, but through lack of information. A horse may easily become frightened at an open umbrella. Lead him gently to it, let him smell of it and he will realize that there is nothing terrible about it. I believe it to be a fact that where the overhead system has been properly installed and operated, the public fully realizes its overwelming advantages, and would object most decidedly to its abandonment. It is entirely cleanly in its operation, is comparatively noiseless, is rapid and economical and admits of a great degree of flexibility in the matter of regulation of power so that the car is thoroughly under the control of the operator and can be started, stopped and reversed instantly if need be. I venture the assertion that by the use of the improved systems of to-day, accidents will be fewer than in the case of traction by steam or cable as a motive power, and no greater than on railways using horses.

RECENT METHODS OVERCOME UNSIGHTLINESS AND NOISE.

The only objections to the overhead system that have ever been raised are unsightliness, noise, uncertainty of operation and danger. Now as regards the first objection, I am willing to admit that an overhead wire and poles add nothing to the beauty of a locality, but with recent methods of construction and neat, graceful poles, I think the question of unsightliness will have very little weight in sensible minds. * * *

As for the noise complained of, that objection cannot justly be made against the best systems of the present. It was justly a cause of criticism at the outset, but in the perfected motor it has been removed.

NOT A SINGLE SERIOUS INJURY FROM STREET RAILWAY WIRES.

Now, what as to danger? Some time ago the Boston Advertiser sent out a circular letter to every city in the country in which electric road were operated, asking for certain information. Included in the letter were inquiries as to whether there had been any loss of life or injury from the wires, and whether there was any serious objection on the part of the public to overhead railway wires. Replies were received from sixty-four cities and towns, and all but four were favorable. Of the four unfavorable replies one was from Newport, R. I., where, it is stated, the wealthy residents do not wish to have anything around that would popularize riding. Not a single instance of serious injury from contact with electric railway wires was reported. The public has been needlessly alarmed about the so-called dangers of electric light and railway wires.

FIGURES PROVE HORSE CARS MORE DEADLY

As a matter of fact, the number of deaths caused by electric currents is surprisingly small. In New York city, out of 1,467 deaths by accident in 1889, only 9 were due to electric currents, a less number than were killed by the horse cars. Not a single death was recorded in Boston from electric currents. In New England there are 140 arc lights stations supply current to 20,000 arc lamps. During the past ten years only five deaths were recorded there as due to electric currents, and four of the five persons were employes. During the same period the steam railroads of New England killed 5,241 people. In reality, electricity is far less dangerous than the same amount of power used in other industries, and relatively safer for the public, as employes are usually the sufferers in the few cases recorded. All deaths that can be traced to currents from wires are due directly to contact with electric light wires or to contact with wires crossed by electric light wires. Never, so far as known, has a railway wire been the cause of death. The chances of accidents are reduced to a minimum, and if the electric light companies will take care of their wires, the public need have no fear whatever of railway wires.

The Amateurs at the Casino.

The Pyramus and Thisbe Club will hold a dress rehearsal to-night, to perfect those of its members who are cast in to-morrow evening's plays, in their exits and their entrances, as well as to try on the elegant new costumes that have been made expressly for them, and to test the effect of the stage settings especially designed for the occasion by a professional artist of international repute.

As to the costumes—not any so fine have ever before been presented on any stage in this city. As to the scenery—none of it has ever been even approached by amateurs, while the garden scene in the second play is to be a revelation to all. Great care is taken in all details, even to the building of a real mantelpiece. The programmes, as usual, will be most artistic.

The very strongest members of the Club are included in to-morrow evening's casts. There has been careful study and patient drilling on the part of all, so the rendition of the plays must surely be all that can be desired. The incidental music will be by Miss Lavinia French. A few tickets are still for sale, and may be obtained at the door.

"The Old Homestead."

This famous play of Denman Thompson's will be seen this evening at Music Hall. Interest in the play seems not to diminish, nor its popularity lessen by repetition, but is even more eagerly sought after by all lovers of pure amusement, for its relief from the "sameness" of the list of entertainments offered the public during the season.

One of the most favorite ways of speaking of "The Old Homestead" is to style it "a play of the hearth, the home and the heart," and whether it be in the hay fields and out-door rusticity of the first act, or the big log-fire and homely Winter appanage and in-door comfort of the last scene, the result is certainly the same—a suggestion of older, may be happier days, of honesty and rugged strength, of home and tender hearts, of manly heartiness and womanly worth, and something in the whole that appeals to the restful senses.

Dedicating Their New Meeting Rooms.

A large number of members of the Exempt Firemen's Association assembled in Coward's new building on Park avenue, last evening, to dedicate their new and handsome rooms there. At the banquet, Mayor Gilbert, President of the Common Council, S. G. Smith, Councilman D. S. Roberts, ex-Councilman B. F. Coriell, Chief T. O. Doane, ex-Chief A. Saltzman and others made brief remarks, John Carney recited a humorous piece entitled "My Mudder-in-Law," Mr. Flannery sang a song, T. J. Gillies told a firemen's story, and others talked of old-time fire reminiscenses. City Treasurer Alex. Titsworth acted as master-of-ceremonies. The Association is in a flourishing condition and has fine quarters.

Pleading for Foreign Missions.

To the Ladies' Missionary Society of the Baptist church, Plainfield is indebted for the privilege of hearing the Rev. Arthur Pierson, last Monday evening. Those who had read his stirring book, "The Crisis of Missions", needed no further invitation beyond the mere statement that he would speak on "Missions". Three years ago Dr. Pierson was pastor of a large Philadelphia church, but gave up his charge in order to devote his entire time to writing and speaking on this subject, which is of vital importance to the church of to-day.

He opened his address with the statement that there are three questions which Christians ever need to ask: What is God's work? What is God's time? What is God's way? These questions—he said—are necessary in the consideration of the colossal question of Foreign Missions. The attention of the hearers was called to the fact that there are few cases in the Gospel of the repetition of Christ's commands, but that the command "Go into the world and preach the Gospel to every creature" is five times repeated.

The one great duty that overtops all others is to preach a full salvation to every creature. People clamor—said he—that charity begins at home, but rather is it true that selfishness begins at home and stays there. He impressed the idea that the church should be the minister's force and not his field, that instead of the pastor having to spend all his time in propping up the weak, he should have only to suggest methods of work to his people; and he cited the instance of a Philadelphia lady who told him when he first entered on his work in that city, "Pastor, you need not spend your time in calling on me. When it is necessary I will send for you. The time that might be given to me I prefer should be devoted to bringing in others. In the meantime, if you have any work for me to do, I shall most gladly do it." If the churches were filled with this spirit, it would not be many years before the Gospel would be preached to the 850 millions of the human race who have not yet heard it. Dr. Pierson claims that in 25 years this result might be achieved by the Christians of North America alone, if out of this 4,000,000 church members, one in 100 could be set apart for this work. This would send to the heathen nations 400,000 missionaries who could in 25 years not only preach the Gospel to every creature once but repeat it many times. The nineteenth century is preeminently God's time, the period for work. This Dr. Pierson considered politically and scientifically. From the political stand-point the first fact he noted was the absolute circumnavigation of the world, which can be accomplished in three months; second, the world-wide intercourse of nations; third, the spirit of organization which pervades this latter part of the nineteenth century. In the scientific world Dr. Pierson noted the rapidity of human progress since 1837. Since that time the improved methods of printing have made it possible for the Bible to appear in from 300 to 400 different languages and dialects. The establishment of the postal union enables us to send our literature to the furthest quarters of the globe in six weeks or two months. Then there are the telegraph, the telephone, the phonograph, the sewing-machine, the type-writer, etc., etc., all of which Dr. Pierson said have come into use during his life-time.

The three essentials to the immediate giving of the Gospel to every creature are: First, men and women; second, money; third, methods. We have the first. In regard to the second some interesting statistics were given in which it was shown that in the Christian church an average of $100 is spent by every church member each year for superfluities, and the same amount for comforts and conveniences. If one-tenth of the money spent on superfluities were turned into the Lord's treasury the amount would be 400 millions; and one-twentieth of the comforts and conveniences, 200 millions; and the necessities of life would still remain untouched. Dr. Pierson then said of his own denomination, the Presbyterian, that $850,000 a year was the sum reached, which made an average of $1 per year for each member—not quite one-third of a cent a day, which is less than the cost of a cup of coffee at breakfast. Several incidents were related of the impression made on the Scotch people when these figures were presented by Dr. Pierson in Scotland two years ago. After one of his addresses, a lady sent him a handsome bracelet, saying it was the last ornament she possessed; a young man parted with his diamond scarf pin; and in New York recently a young lady took from her finger a ring of seven diamonds which she wished Dr. Pierson to use for the cause.

In regard to methods, the Gospel gives abundant instruction. Each believer is a co-laborer with Christ. The work cannot be carried on without the worker; the responsibility is left with every Christian to sow the seed as God directs. Dr. Pierson reviewed the history of Christianity, showing that by persecution the Christians were in the first century scattered to all parts of the then known world. Later when Christianity became a state religion, a matter of form rather than of heart, the darkness of the Middle Ages settled on the church; and not until the days of the Reformation was the true, missionary spirit revived. A tribute of praise was paid to the Moravians, who, though one of the smallest of Christian sects, had done more to spread the truth than any other denomination.

In conclusion, the audience was impressed with the fact that as Christ commanded the loaves and fishes to be brought to him and by his power alone were the 5,000 fed so miraculously, so must we bring ourselves and our means to Him for the needed blessing; and above all by earnest prayers, whether we go or stay, shall the work progress.

SOCIAL CLUBS ALLOWED EVERYWHERE.

Another Way Plainfielders Can Buy and Sell Liquor Even if a Future Council Refuses Licenses.

Under the new law passed by the late Legislature, entitled "An act relating to social clubs", these organizations may sell liquor under the following conditions: That any social club duly incorporated under any law of this State which owns or occupies a club house used by it for its own purposes exclusively, and which for six months previous to its application has had continuously an actual adult membership of at least fifty members and no minor members, may be authorized to sell to its members, and to no others, spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors upon obtaining annually a permit therefor from the inferior court of common pleas of the county wherein said club is located, and upon payment of an annual fee, to be fixed by said court, of not less than $250. The Governor approved the law.

Criminal Negligence.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I wish to speak of a point in connection with the late terrible disaster by which Daniel Leibe and Willie Cannon met their death at Dunellen, March 21. It is upon the negligence of engineers in not blowing their whistles until they are actually upon the crossings. I have repeatedly been on trains where the whistle was sounded simultaneously with the passing of the crossing. In this instance it was the same; therefore even had Leibe had time to cross before the freight train reached him he could have received no note of warning before he was struck. There is the possibility had such alarm been sounded before the crossing was reached that he either would not have crossed at all; or, having got on the track and heard the whistle, might have given the poor beast a blow sufficent to drive him to clear the track. Another point is the fact of the gates being in an upright position. Parties crossing the track look to see the gates; if down they refrain from crossing, naturally: but they are not supposed to know that the company provides no watchman after half-past eight o'clock at night. The economy of the company in this matter is simply criminal. The man who attends the crossing where these persons met their death works 14 hours out of the 24. A simple statement of this fact is enough, without comment; but the two human beings hurled into eternity without one moment's warning is appalling, and a rigid investigation should be demanded. The indifference of railroads to the sacrificing of human lives is becoming proverbial. In this instance their economy approaches criminality. G. E. I.

The Experiment Highly Gratifying.

Free delivery, it will be remembered, was established at Dunellen by the Post Office Department, as an experiment, on March 1, and as first told of in THE PRESS. The result of the first month's work at that office, although insignificant compared with that of any large city, makes a good showing in favor of extending the service to other fourth-class offices. Its real efficacy, however, can only be determined after a long and thorough trial. The returns for the month are as follows:

DELIVERIES.

	No. Pieces.
Letters	1054
Postal Cards	168
2d, 3d and 4th class matter	1115
COLLECTIONS.
Local Letters	170
Mail "	608
Local Postal Cards	25
Mail " "	110
2d; 3d and 4th class matter	81
Total pieces handled	3331

But one delivery is made daily, and that is in the morning. Many letters received in the afternoon and evening mails are called for at the office. During the same period $4.41 postage was collected on local or "drop" letters. The money order department of this office now has a "fixed reserve," to be used in case of an emergency, which is entirely independent of the usual reserve allowed postmasters at money order offices. Among other contemplated improvements in the service is the placing of a letter box at the corner of Dunellen and Jefferson avenues, making six boxes in all within the borough limits.

La Belle Soubise Abroad.

Mrs. Alice Shaw, who formerly resided in this city and whistled her way into the hearts of the "Four Hundred" in New York, and whose social and financial success is said to have been quite as pronounced in London as it was in this country, is to go to Constantinople and give a series of entertainments there. She will give a special performance before the Sultan and his harem, and it will doubtless be a revelation to the followers of the prophet. If the members of His Majesty's somewhat numerous household should catch the infection which Mrs. Shaw's performances spread abroad in this country, and undertake to organize whistling clubs, that august ruler will wish that his love for music had not led him to introduce into the bosom of his family the bewitching unbeliever from the Western World.

—There will be a devotional meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms to-morrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's April Tour to California.

The third tour of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's series to the Golden Gate left New York last week, and now but one remains, which will leave April 14, and undoubtedly cover the most desirable route, both to and from the far Pacific Coast.

The special vestibule Pullman train, equipped with its drawing-room, sleeping, library and smoking, dining and observation cars, manned by a crew of twenty-four employes, as well as a tourist agent in charge, and a chaperon and ladies' maid to look after those of their own sex, a stenographer and typewriter, in fact fitted out even to a barber, is this palace on wheels, which will in going West traverse the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and down into Kansas, Colorado, Utah, Nevada and into California, where six side trips are included, as well as three whole weeks in the land of the sunny sky. Returning the train darts directly north from San Francisco, through California, Oregon and Washington, stopping at Portland and Tacoma, then runs east via the Northern Pacific Railroad through Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and home through Pennsylvania. Tickets for the entire trip, including meals en route and Pullman transportation, together with several carriage rides and side trips, are but $300. Application for space should be made at once to Mr. George W. Boyd, assistant general passenger agent, Philadelphia.

A Charming Lecture.

It is to be regreted that Mrs. Custer's delightful lecture at the Seminary yesterday afternoon was not enjoyed by more people. The lecturer gave bright, amusing sketches of garrison life on the frontier as it used to be before the days of railroad, when the arrival of the mail was an event, and letters and papers weeks old were devoured with absorbed interest; when the possession of a piano [the quality of its tone was not criticized] was a rarity; and when officers were quarted in frame shanties, adobe huts, or dug outs.

Mrs. Custer's animated face and graceful manner charmed everyone. At the close of her talk many were eager to press the hand of the little woman who had so cheerfully braved hardships and privations. Should Mrs. Custer visit our city again soon, Plainfield ladies should give themselves the treat of hearing and seeing this charming woman.

The Deadly Sand-Pit.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Will you kindly inform a taxpayer how much money the city receives for the rent of the sand-pit that has been opened across the street near Grant avenue on South avenue? Also to whom must I apply for the privilege to open one a little further up South avenue, as I think it would be profitable to me, although dangerous to foot passengers. The sand-pit is fraught with danger to pedestrians as the writer knows of three instances where an accident was barely escaped. The street commissioner should see that it is properly protected. A TAXPAYER.

Death of a Track-Walking Horse.

A horse owned by C. A. Smith of Scotch Plains escaped from its pasture at 11:30 Monday night and wandered down the Central Railroad tracks as far as the Berckman street bridge, where it was killed. The railroad company buried the carcass.

Tourists in Yellowstone Park next season might encounter a northwestern blizzard. If they are wise men they will take along a supply of the famous Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

The Society of Bacillusville, L. I., Objected to His Industrious Habits, and Finally Frose Him Out—How He Tried to Be Agreeable.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Society in Bacillusville, L. I., is so exclusive that only the malaria can get into it. The old residents of the town have no place among the aristocracy, and the relations between the two classes remind one of those tender sentiments which bind the North American Indian to this government. The common herd is kept within its "reservation."

The wealth and fashion of Bacillusville extend themselves along Greenlawn avenue, which is regarded as the finest street in the world by everybody who lives on it. And without doubt it is worthy of remark, for it is lined with handsome residences, whose owners look out through their mosquito bars upon beautiful and extensive grounds.

It was by a "fluke," therefore, that a rusty old codger like Farmer Alphonso Hopkins secured the magnificent residence and corner lot which Broker Lemuel Skinner had lacked the time to dispose of previous to taking the fast mail for Canada. Skinner had been one of the brightest ornaments of Greenlawn avenue, and his departure was the more regretted because not even extradition proceedings could bring him back.

There was nothing ornamental about Farmer Hopkins. Forty years spent in wresting vegetables from the unwilling bosom of Long Island had not given him those graces of language and bearing which had distinguished Skinner. Hopkins possessed such a dilapidated and melancholy exterior that one might have doubted whether he could buy land enough at a dollar an acre to secure a comfortable burial. For that reason his negotiations were not suspected by the Greenlawn avenue people, and he bought the place quietly for cash, before they were aware of his intentions. He could afford it, for a life of hard-fisted economy and an unexpected inheritance had made him rich.

When the golden windfall came Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins decided that it was time their two daughters left off washing dishes and learned to play on the piano. Mrs. Hopkins favored moving to Fifth avenue, because New York society was gay and the girls were at an age when they naturally liked going into company. But Alphonso objected. He said that the moral atmosphere of New York was impure; and, moreover, the Fifth avenue houses had almost no grounds around them. He did not want to be obliged to scrape his boots at the gate every morning for fear of carrying away his entire front yard.

Bacillusville was the result of a compromise. The Hopkins took their new neighbors by surprise and the first intimation of the true state of the case was derived from the sight of Alphonso in a suit of faded blue overalls sitting on the front steps of his residence, loading a clay pipe with plug tobacco. The gentle zephyrs of early May wafted the smoke to the aristocratic nostrils of Mrs. Roche-Jones, mistress of the mansion on Alphonso's left, as she was preparing to enter her carriage for an afternoon driver. She turned and looked at Alphonso with horror; he nodded pleasantly, and called: "Good day, ma'am," in a voice which made the cultured air of Greenlawn avenue shudder.

"I'm afeared them folks below us ain't goin' to be neighborly," he said to Mrs. Hopkins when she appeared on the porch shortly afterwards.

"Oh, I would not borry no trouble about it, father," replied Mrs. Hopkins. "The women folks can most generally fix those things up quickest. I'll kind o' make an errand over there in the mornin', makin' out as if I wanted to borry a flat or a little yeast. I can allers get acquainted with a woman best in her own kitchen."

Mrs. Hopkins did not find Mrs. Roche-Jones in her own kitchen, which may account for the failure of her pacific mission. Then Alphonso tried the experiment of smoking his after-supper pipe sitting on the little ornamented fence which separated his grounds from those of the Roche-Joneses. He assumed an easy attitude, calculated to draw Mr. Roche-Jones into friendly discussion of politics or the weather, but that gentleman only glanced out of the parlor window and scowled.

"They shan't say 't I ain't doin' my duty as a good neighbor," he said; and he continued to bow cordially to everybody who came within range.

But time began to hang heavily on his hands. For the first few days he had enough to do, looking around the place and "slickin' it up." This occupation could not be prolonged indefinitely, for the place was slick enough when he began; and he was soon at his wits' end for an occupation. Bred to a life of perpetual toil, he could not be relieved of the primal curse by the accident of an inheritance. His daughters found practicing on the piano an agreeable substitute for household work. They enjoyed it much more than their neighbors did, for what they lacked in skill they made up in energy. But their horny-handed sire was too old to get his exercise in the acquirement of graceful accomplishments. He needed something searching. Trimming up the trees around his house afforded him a relief which was small compared to the misery inflicted upon Van Alpines and Roche-Joneses by the spectacle of their new neighbor, clad in his rustic garments, seated on a limb and chawing a large mouthful of tobacco in time with the motion of his saw. When all his own trees were trimmed, he volunteered to do as much for those in the surrounding grounds., but his offers were refused and he was forced to console himself by joining the laborers employed by the town to care for the shade trees along the highways.

Thus he whiled away a few days, but before long ennui attacked him again as violently as if he had known the society name for it.

Then he painted his house. When the idea of doing it occurred to him, he accepted it as an inspiration. It was finally decided to paint the back and front yellow and the two sides brown. Then Alphonso mixed his paints on the lawn; slung his ladders and prepared for work.

"WHAD 'YE THINK THE CRITTER WEIGHED."

This frightful project broke the armed neutrality which had been observed hitherto by his new neighbors. Mr. Roche-Jones ventured to call with a remonstrance. He said: "Mr. Hopkins, up to this time we have not troubled you with any—"

"Bless my soul," cried Alphonso, "so that is why you hung back. Afraid of troublin' me. Wall now, I swan! I've done you an injustice. Mother—" he called to Mrs. Hopkins, who appeared in the front hall at this moment—"here's Mr. Jones come over to see us and explain why he ain't been more neighborly. Seems that he thought we'd be busy, havin' jest moved in, so he didn't want to trouble us."

"No trouble at all, Mr. Jones, I'm sure," said Mrs. Hopkins, wiping her right hand on her apron as she advanced. "We'd a-been glad to see you of Mrs. Jones any day. Tell her to come over and bring her sewin' work whenever she feels like it."

It was an unusual situation for Mr. Roche-Jones, but he endeavored to do his duty by those whom he represented. He tried a dozen times to introduce the subject of paint or to hint at the practices by which Hopkins had previously made himself obnoxious, but on every occasion he was interrupted by exclamations of cordiality, which were evidently inspired by the notion that he was apologizing for the coolness which had been shown the Hopkins family.

Hopkins finished his house-painting without further interruption. He lingered over it, knowing how badly he would feel when it was done, and he was forced to be idle again. The work gave him opportunities for reflection, and he got an idea which promised a little steady occupation. He resolved to keep a cow. He could raise almost enough hay on the lawn to feed her, and no doubt his neighbors would be glad to take a little of the milk.

Mrs. Hopkins approved, and the cow was purchased.

When this was done he lavished renewed attentions upon his cow. He did everything for this mild-eyed beast which his ingenuity could devise, and at last when he could think of nothing else, he butchered her in the back yard. This led to a call from Mr. Van Alpine.

"Mr. Hopkins," said he, "I want to speak of that unusual spectacle on your premises this morning."

"Yes," said Hopkins, calmly; "how much do you think the critter weighed?"

"I have no desire to know, but—"

"Sho; I was in hopes I could sell you a quarter. Down our way when a man kills a critter his neighbors most always take some of it off'n his hands."

Mr. Van Alpine lost his temper. He threatened legal proceedings, and when they failed to terrify Hopkins, he hinted at illegal proceedings by a vigilance committee.

"Mother," said Mr. Hopkins, in reporting this interview to his wife, "I don't think we can live among such heathens any longer. Soon's I collect our milk bills and salt down that beef I believe we'll pull up stakes."

The milk bills met with almost unanimous repudiation. Mr. Van Alpine said he'd take the case to the supreme court before he'd pay the 96 cents which Hopkins claimed. Two of his late customers got ruined on Wall street, and another moved away without leaving his address.

"I've tried to be a good neighbor," said Hopkins, addressing the family circle on the last day before their departure; "but it wa'nt no use. This is my last experiment with a high-toned community." HOWARD FIELDING.

PRETTY BOOK COVERS.

A Wonderful Addition to the Value of a Dainty Gift Book.

For several reasons a handsome or ornamental book cover is very desirable for one's favorite periodical, a much-used bound book, or as an addition to the value of a dainty gift book. An extra cover, in lieu of the familiar brown paper one, will preserve the handsome binding of a fine volume of poems, or the borrowed volume one does not wish to mar in any way; and if it is not looked upon as a desirable thing to advertise one's literary tastes, a neat ornamental cover to one's novel or preferred magazine is a great convenience.

The dainty fancy worker can also impart some of her own individuality to the volume of her choice which she desires to present to some favored friend, by making for it a handsomely decorated cover of velvet, plush, silk, satin or fine broadcloth, upon which she will work some "border fantasy of branch and flower" and any other pretty device of initials, or a motto, or perhaps paint some flowers in water colors, "pansies for thoughts," etc.

The first of the illustrations shows a handsome book cover suitable either for a periodical or any bound book, according to the size it is made in, which, of course, is governed by that of the book for which it is intended. Procure the pattern first by laying the book open in the middle flatly upon a sheet of sufficient size and cut out, allowing half an inch on all sides. A piece of goods, twice the double width of the book and an inch longer, will be required for the cover, and a piece of similar size for the lining. If the cover is for a periodical, that is, a pamphlet-bound book, an interlining of stiff canvas will be desirable. After the decoration of the cover—embroidery, painting or applique—is completed, make it up as follows:

Fold in the edges about one-eighth of an inch all around and blind-stitch the lining and outside together. Then fold the outer ends to the middle. With a punch stamp holes at equal distances—about an inch apart—all around the edge, and lace together all around, crossing like shoe-strings, as shown in the illustration, beginning at the top of the center and ending at the bottom on each side, which will take four lengths of ribbon or cord. Finish each end with a small silk tassel. The fold of the cover is turned in to an angle at the outside edges, to allow more space for slipping the covers of the book inside. If necessary, one lower edge can be unlaced a little way to allow the cover of the book to slide in without "breaking its back," if it is in board covers.

The smallest of the book-covers illustrated is made of two sheets of celluloid, ivorine, thin board or handcome heavy cardboard. After drawing or painting the initial, monogram or other preferred ornament on one sheet, cut four slits in the corresponding four corners of each sheet, and slip two ribbons through, as shown in the illustration. These covers can be cut in any size, to fit any bound book, and are more strictly speaking for ornament than the others.—Farm and Home.

Nature of Rheumatic Gout.

Rheumatic gout is an incurable disease. It is a disease in which a sort of ulceration of the cartilages of the joints takes place. The change being organic, nothing can be done for it. But when this disease is due to lowered nerve tone—and I think it is chiefly a nervous disease—and the nerve-tone can be improved and the system raised from its low state of vitality by proper nutrition, the disease can be arrested so that it shall make no further progress. This class of patients are often rushed off to taking hot baths at various springs. This is a mistake, for they are never improved by reducing treatment. —Dr. J. H. Kellogg.

A Simple Moth Remedy.

It is reported that the nuns in one of the European hospital convents, where large quantities of clothing are stored, were greatly annoyed by the depredations of moths in a room full of feathers, which were intended for pillow-making, but which the little pests were ruining. They were finally advised to try salt, which they sprinkled liberally around, and in a short time found that the moths had disappeared. It is also recommended for use in sweeping carpets, especially in rooms that are little used.

ANOTHER OUTBREAK

The Situation Is Critical in the Coke Region.

ARMED HUNGARIANS MOVING.

They Are Gathering Recruits and May Attack the Works at Morewood.

The Labor Leaders Determine to Carry on the Strike—The Operators Are Apprehensive and Fear Bloodshed—A Striker Shot Through the Heart by a Man He Had Assaulted.

PITTSBURG, April 2.—The situation in the coke region continues grave. No lawlessness has occurred for forty-eight hours, but the operators are still apprehensive and look for an outbreak at any time. It is asserted that the word has been passed around for a general movement to-morrow morning.

The strike leaders say it is not true that the time for the inauguration of the eight-hour movement has been changed from May 1.

The situation is desperate in the coke regions, and the leaders, recognizing this, have determined to put their money in the coke strike and make the eight-hour movement elsewhere an after consideration. No general strike of miners, they say, will be ordered until after the interstate conference of mine owners and workers in this city next Tuesday.

THE HUNS ARE MOVING.

Shouting and Firing Pistol Shots in the Direction of Morewood.

PITTSBURG, April 2.—The following has been received from Mount Pleasant, Pa.:

"One hundred and fifty Hungarians, many of whom were drunk, have just gone to the Standard works. The situation here is critical indeed. Shouting, intermingled with pistol shots, can be plainly heard in the direction of Morewood. The Huns are gathering recruits, and it is thought they will soon return to Morewood.

"If the strikers make a second raid on Morewood, bloodshed will undoubtedly follow, as the company seems determined to repel any raid of strikers."

A STRIKER KILLED.

He Was Shot Through the Heart by a Man He Assaulted.

CHESTER, Pa., April 2.—William Brown, who is one of the Standard Steel Casting Company's strikers, was shot through the heart about 8 o'clock last night by one of the moulders who took the place of the strikers. Four workmen who came from Jersey City a few days ago, are locked up for the crime.

The four men were walking down Edgemont avenue and close behind them were five more. Two of the latter were somewhat in the lead of the other three. One of the two foremost men reached forward, and, laying his hand on the shoulder of one of the four men, said: "See here, pard, I want you." At the same time he struck the man he accosted.

The assaulted man fell to the pavement, but got up at once, and, turning around, he pulled out a revolver and began to fire. One bullet struck Brown. A number of shots were fired. The men who were attacked ran down the avenue and were soon out of sight.

As soon as Chief Newsome learned of the death of Brown he went to South Chester and arrested the men. They had given their names to him in a little store where they first ran for protection. They are A. and G. Gell, J. Cripps and Frank Quinn. All came here from Jersey City, and they have been employed at the works only a few days. They will have a hearing in the morning.

Kincaid Tells the Story of the Shooting.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The defendant in the Kincaid trial was put upon the stand and testified to the repeated insults heaped upon him and assaults made upon him by Taulbee, and to the threats made against his life by the deceased. The altercation which had shortly preceded the shooting was graphically described, the witness testifying that Taulbee had called him a little coward and monkey and told him to arm himself. He had fired the shot because he believed it was Taulbee's life or his.

Died Aged 106 Years.

PHILADELPHIA, April 2.—Charles Crawford died yesterday at his residence in Haddington, a suburb of this city, at the age of 106 years. He was born in Ireland and came to this country when a boy.

Brickworkers Go on Strike.

PHILADELPHIA, April 2.—Seven hundred bricklayers have refused to go to work at a schedule lowering their wages 10 per cent. The strike involves 3,000 men.

RHODE ISLAND'S ELECTION.

There Has Been no Election of State Officers by the People.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 2.—The absence of telegraph and telephone facilities in many towns in the State renders a complete statement of the result of the election impossible before this evening, even were the count finished; but the Australian system of voting causes so much delay in the counting of the ballots that at noon the figures are incomplete.

Nevertheless it is apparent that there has been no election of the State ticket by the people, unless very great and unexpected changes are shown in the returns yet to be received.

It is equally apparent that unless the figures yet to come are greatly changed the Republicans have carried the Assembly by a safe working majority in each House, thus insuring the ultimate election of the Republican ticket.

BURNED TO DEATH.

A Woman Falls on a Red Hot Stove and Was Literally Roasted.

ORANGE, N. J., April 2.—The Coroner is investigating the terrible death of Mrs. Edward McGinley, of No. 65 Glenwood avenue, East Orange.

Mrs. McGinley was ironing clothes in her kitchen, and in some manner unknown she fell upon the stove, which was nearly red hot, and was unable to save herself.

Her husband, who was in another part of the house, came into the kitchen and found her dead upon the stove, with her body terribly burned. Her flesh was literally roasting, and large pieces fell from her bones when he lifted her up.

At the same time her garments had caught on fire and ignited the woodwork around the stove, and Mr. McGinley was badly burned.

CHICAGO'S DEATH ROLL.

The Mortality List Is Still Double the Normal Figures.

CHICAGO, April 2.—At noon 116 deaths had been reported, of which fully seventy were the direct result of pneumonia and other pulmonary complaints, complicated with the grip.

Dr. Tomlinson, register of statistics at the Health Department, said that Chicago would have as big a total of deaths this week as last, which was nearly 1,000, more than double the normal figures.

The Situation in Connecticut.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 2.—The resolution to adjourn the House until the second Wednesday in November prevailed. The Democrats, with the exception of Representative Walker, left the House in a body when the yeas and nays were called. Walker refused to vote, but the House refused to excuse him. Two more than a quorum was shown by the final vote.

The Keystone Bank Will Reopen.

PHILADELPHIA, April 2.—At an informal meeting of the stockholders of the Keystone National Bank it was decided to resume business, and the bank will be reopened in a few days under the new management. Bank Examiner Drew was present at the meeting and was perfectly satisfied at the arrangements made, and the result was communicated to Comptroller of the Currency Lacey.

An Ancient Building Burned.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., April 2.—An ancient building in Kingston was burned shortly after noon. It was built over two hundred years ago, and a tradition says it was used as a garrison house in the time of King Phillip's war. It was occupied by H. H. Heinhardt, who loses his household goods. The loss is small.

Vanderbilts After the Reading Road.

NEW YORK, April 5.—Rumors are in circulation that the Vanverbilts held an option on the control of the Reading Road, and it was stated that H. McK. Twombly, who bought W. W. Gibbs' share in the syndicate, has bought up all Wanamaker's interest in the syndicate for Cornelius Vanderbilt.

President Clark Furnished Bail.

NEW YORK, April 2.—President Charles P. Clark, of the New Haven & Hartford Railway, was the fifth one of the twelve indicted directors who furnished bail at the District Attorney's office.

The Dygert Jury Disagreed.

GENESEO, N. Y., April 2.—The jury in the Dygert manslaughter case disagreed, after remaining out twenty-four hours. The vote stood seven for conviction and five for acquittal.

Granite Workers Quit.

MILFORD, Mass., April 2.—All the Milford granite cutters have quit work because they were refused an increase in pay.

ITALY'S HASTY MOVE

Secretary Blaine States His Position Plainly.

NO ALARM FELT AT WASHINGTON

The United States Does Not Propose to be Bullied.

Italy's Minister Tells Minister Porter What He Thinks of the American Constitution—Londoners See War Ahead, but the "Thunderer" Says the Trouble is Not Serious—New Orleans Excited.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Secretary Blaine makes public a long letter to the Italian government in reference to the New Orleans affair and the action of Italy in recalling Baron Fava.

In very diplomatic language, of course, he tells the Italian government that it has made a fool of itself.

He recognizes that Baron Fava is no longer Minister to this country from Italy by addressing his communication to the Marquis Imperiali, who has been left in charge of the legation here.

He states that two demands have been made by the Italian government—the first that the lynchers shall be punished, and the second that a monetary reparation be made for the loss of the lives of the citizens of Italy killed in New Orleans.

The first he disposes of by saying that the Constitutions of the United States and Louisiana guarantee that no man can be punished except after a fair trial by jury. They will be tried when indicted, but it is impossible for the United States to guarantee their conviction.

As for the monetary part of the proposition, Mr. Blaine says that the President about decided to accede to this, but that he didn't propose to be hurried.

This is the substance of Secretary Blaine's ultimatum, stripped of diplomatic verbiage.

It does not, however, unravel the tangle at all, and the situation is as complicated as before.

It, however, has the effect of turning the tables on on the Italians and holding them up to ridicule.

If Italy, however, will take nothing but what she has demanded it is very evident from Mr. Blaine's letter that the United States don't care a continental.

This will hardly serve to mollify the Italians, however, and Washington is waiting to see whether or not Blaine's sarcasm will cause the hot-headed Italians to take some action in the matter.

HOW THE PRESIDENT FEELS.

He Will Take No Unusual Pains to Appease the Wrath of the Italians.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The President and Secretary Blaine attach no particular importance to the fact that the Italian government is now unrepresented in Washington by a full-fledged Minister.

They, of course, take it for granted that in recalling Baron Fava the Italian government intended to at once put an end to the amicable diplomatic relations existing between the two countries, but having left the legation in charge of the first secretary, with orders to transact "current business," they evidently intended to preserve at least a show of respect toward this government.

The President and Secretary of State, it is learned, do not care whether this is the case or not, and after a consultation they decided that, as there was no cause for the recall of Baron Fava, the United States government having done all that it could do when Mr. Blaine wrote to Governor Nicholls, nothing remains now but to allow the Italian government to send war ships up the mouth of the Mississippi River or take whatever other steps they may deem necessary to emphasize their ill-feeling against the United States government.

To a friend who called upon him the President intimated that, as far as he was concerned, no unusual pains will be taken to appease the wrath of the Italians. To show the President's indifference to the subject, regarding which there is absolutely nothing more to be done, it is asserted that the plans for the President's departure from the city are now being made, and, whether Baron Fava leaves Washington to-day or next week or does not go at all, President Harrison will start on his tour of observation about the 15th of April.

WHAT ITALY WANTS.

Punishment of the Lynchers as Well as Compensation.

ROME, April 2.—The tenor of Baron Fava's note to Mr. Blaine is that what Italy asked and still asks is, the Federal government's guarantee that regular legal proceedings will be taken against the culprits in the New Orleans lynching, and that the Federal government will admit in principle its obligations to pay an indemnity to the families of the victims.

The note adds that Italy cannot; and is not, called upon to discuss American institutions, but must urge upon the Federal government the observation of the principles of international law. Italy hopes that the Federal government will appreciate the obligation incumbent upon it as a government of a civilized country to accede to Italy's just demands.

If this should not be the case, the King's Minister must, by order of his government, declare that he quits a post where his legitimate action as the King's representative has proved inefficacious.

Trying to Save Stephani.

NEW YORK, April 2.—In the trial of Alphonse S. Stephani for the murder of Lawyer Reynolds. Dr. Field said that the prisoner was suffering from dementia which arises from indiscretions, and usually appears in the period between youth and early manhood.

THE DISCUSSION IN ROME.

Minister Porter's Interview With Signor D'Arco of the Foreign Office.

ROME, April 2.—In the discussion between Signor D'Arco of the Foreign Office and American Minister Porter, D'Arco said: "Suppose a dozen Americans should be killed in an Italian city, and we pleaded impotence to punish the act on the ground that the city was autonomous, what opinion would you Americans and the civilized world have of such a plan?"

Mr. Porter, in reply, explained the provisions of the American Constitution, reserving the sovereignity of States in all matters, not granted to the Federal government.

D'Arco retorted warmly: "We have nothing to do with your constitution. We know no constitution; our dealings are with you as a nation. No constitution is worthy of a free and civilized country that does not insure the punishment of crime and the protection of the weak. If your constitution is wanting in that it is your business to mend it."

The court of King Humbert is exposed to the criticism of the malevolent, owing to the known partiality of the sovereign for America and Americans. Several of Queen Marguerite's favorite ladies are of American birth. The wife of Count Gianotti, Prefect of the palace, was, before marriage, Constance Keaney, of New York. The Princess Biancaccio, lady in waiting, was Miss Field, of New York. The wife of Cavalier Peruzzi, one of the Queen's personal equerries, was Miss Story, of Boston, and the Princess Cerici Bolighetti was Miss Spencer, of New York.

TEMPEST IN A TEAPOT.

This Morning's London Times Says the Italian Affair is Not Serious.

LONDON, April 2.—The Times this morning devotes its leading article to the diplomatic difficulty between America and Italy, saying among other things:

"The deadlock, it must be owned, is pretty complete. If Italy chooses to ignore the peculiar Constitution of the United States, her action in recalling her Minister logically follows. On the other hand, no one who understands American law can be surprised at the attitude of Mr. Blaine or the Attorney-General of Louisiana. The latter declares that the inquiries which are being made by the grand jury are all that can be asked for. There is a recognized procedure, and that procedure is being followed.

"The New Orleans lynching came almost at the moment of the accession to power of the new Italian Cabinet. It is not a homogeneous Cabinet; quite the contrary. It commands an extremely uncertain majority in the Chamber and comprises men who on the slightest provocation would fly at one another as readily as Crispi's old colleagues flew at him in the debate which overthrew him. In such circumttances a little foreign complication is sensational, but not serious. It is a godsend, and insures the new Premier's reputation for patriotism that is everything in a new country like Italy. That anything more serious is intended we do not believe.

LONDON TALKS WAR.

Discussing the Probable Outcome of a Struggle with Italy.

LONDON, April 2.—There is a profound feeling in the clubs and among the well informed generally that war may ensue, and the probable outcome of such a struggle is discussed.

It is admitted that Italy, second class on land, is a first class naval power, and that she is secure against any attack by any power not commanding the Mediterranean. On the other hand it is believed that Italy could not do much damage to the leading seaports of the United States, owing to the devices with which harbors may be protected even without a fleet, and the war would resolve itself into a mutual devastation of commerce outside the Mediterranean.

It seems surprising to hear the almost universal hope expressed by business men, and public men, too, that there will be no serious result from the affair between the two nations.

A Rush for Second Papers.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The Naturalization Bureau is rushed with business. Hundred of Italians want their second papers. They appear to be afraid they will be drafted into the service of the Italian Government and are sure a war is imminent.

Cut Her Throat With a Razor.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., April 2.—Miss Anna Torrey, a daughter of William Torrey, a retired granite quarryman, living at Rockport, committed suicide at 10 a. m. by cutting her throat with a razor. She had been suffering from fits of temporary insanity. Her age was 33 years.

Sweeping Reduction in Coal Prices.

KINGSTON, N. Y., April 2.—A cut-rate war in coal prices has been inaugurated here between the Delaware & Hudson and Pennsylvania coal companies. A sweeping reduction of from 60 to 75 cents per ton was made and the prospects are good for it going still lower.

Blew Out the Gas—Found Dead.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 2.—David Harp, of New Paltz, was found dead in his room at the Zimmer House in this city early in the morning. The gas was found to be turned on full head, and it is inferred that he blew it out before retiring.

A Voter Arrested.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., April 2.—John Davison was arrested in Johnstown, charged with swearing that he could not read or write. It is alleged he took a Republican supervisor into the booth with him only for the purpose of showing how he voted, so as to receive money for his vote.

The Delaware & Hudson Canal Open.

ROSENDUT, N. Y., April 2.—The Delaware & Hudson Canal has opened for the season. The first boat locked through at the tidewater terminus at Eddyville was bound for Honesdale. The schedule rates are the same as last year.

SLIGO'S FIGHT TO-DAY

Public Opinion Indicates that Parnell Will be Beaten.

HIS FRIENDS WORKING HARD.

The Counting of the Vote Will Not Begin Until To-morrow Morning.

Balmaceda Wins in the Elections in Chili. The Rebels Closely Pressed—Bismarck's Birthday Joyously Celebrated—Russia May be Called Down for the Assassination at Sofia—Kaiser William's Travels.

SLIGO, April 2.—The contest here to-day is a sharp one on both sides. Both factions are working hard for votes and express perfect confidence in their respective success.

Public sentiment indicates that Parnell will be beaten. It is pretty generally conceded, however, that if he is not beaten he will regain all the ground which he seems recently to have lost.

It is thought that while Parnell has made an effective fight, the odds against him are too heavy, and the influence of the priests too strong for him to overcome.

A large military force is on the ground and several fights were quickly stopped.

The counting of the votes will begin to-morrow morning and the result will not be known before to-morrow evening.

BALMACEDA WINS.

He Carries the Elections and is Crowding the Revolutionists.

SANTIAGO DE CHILI, April 2.—The Liberals have been completely successful in the recent elections.

The condition of the revolutionists at Iquique is represented to be desperate. Famine prices prevail and the coal supply is exhausted, while on the coast the revolutionary fleet is keeping a sharp lookout for such colliers as may appear.

A government squadron made up of an armed cruiser, two gunboats and three torpedo boats, is about ready to offer battle to the ships of the revolutionists. A conclusive naval engagement is expected to follow the meeting of the fleets.

Germany's Part in the World's Fair.

BERLIN, April 2.—To-day a meeting of German manufacturers and merchants and members of the Reichstag will convene in this city. Afraid of Popular Feeling.

PARIS, April 2.—It is believed in diplomatic circles that the action of the Italian Government in so unexpectedly recalling its Minister to the United States, Baron Fava, is owing to the fears of the Ministry that, unless some decided course was at once adopted in the premises a Cabinet crisis or the commission of some overt act must inevitably grow out of the present excited condition of popular feeling in Italy.

AN UNUSUAL TRAGEDY.

A Revelation Drives a Married Couple to Suicide.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 2.—From the little town of Newport, on the Avon River, near Windsor, comes the story of an unusual tragedy.

Three days ago the dead body of Mrs. Madeline Duval, the pretty young wife of Lucian Duval, was found drowned in the river. The remains were taken home and a search instituted for her husband, who was found wandering aimlessly in the woods about a mile from his home, evidently half-demented.

It was immediately suspected that he was responsible for his wife's death, and a watch was placed upon him. During the funeral obsequies he eluded his keepers and fled. The same evening his body was found hanging in the barn, dead.

A letter was found in his pocket stating that ever since his marriage he had been endeavoring to ascertain who his wife's parents were, she being an adopted child, and about a week before had made the awful discovery that his wife was no less a person than his own sister. It appeared that his father and mother had separated. The latter went to Prince Edward Island, taking the son with him. After the separation a daughter, Madeline, was born. The mother, too proud to ask help of the father, never told him of the birth. The girl was adopted and brought to Newport, where Duval married her.

Being religious, they were overcome with horror at the discovery. Mrs. Duval evidently became insane and committed suicide, and remorse drove Duval to the same end. They were buried together.

SMALL RIOT IN OMAHA.

The Color Line Precipitates a Fight in a Restaurant.

OMAHA, Neb., April 2.—Jesse Newman, a colored police, with two negro waiters, went into the Keystone chop house at noon and ordered dinner. The proprietor refused to serve them, and Newman attempted to arrest him. The waiters came to the rescue and a riot ensued.

Newman was hit on the forehead with a heavy bottle. He pulled a revolver and fired two shots, one of which hit Jimmy O'Neill, the prize fighter, in the right arm. George Matthews, a cook, struck Officer Rowser on the head with a meat cleaver, probably fatally injuring him. Newman is not dangerously hurt. All are under arrest.

Sumner Denies the Charge.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Perrin H. Sumner, the universal identifier, insurance broker and a prominent figure in the Yonkers, Astor House and Wright and Ruttinger mysteries, and who was arrested charged with attempting to bribe Cuthbert R. Suffrey to testify falsely in the case of the Astor House suicide, was arraigned in court during the morning. Sumner made a general denial of the charge, and characterized the whole affair as a newspaper story to create a sensation. His counsel was not prepared to go on with the case and an adjournment was granted.

READ WHAT THREE MAYORS SAY.

The Executives of Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Plainfield Indorse the Trolley Railway.

The following expressions of personal opinion from three such unbiased, level-headed men as Mayor Gardner of Cleveland, Mayor Gourley of Pittsburgh and Mayor Gilbert of Plainfield, must at once set at rest all doubt as to the desirability and incalculable benefit of a trolley street railway for Plainfield.

The misrepresentations of other papers are shown beyond question to be falsehoods. It has been published that the service in Cleveland is thoroughly unsatisfactory, the injury to property very great, and fatalities numerous. But read Mayor Gardner's testimony. As to Pittsburgh, it has horse cars, cable cars and trolley cars, and Mayor Gourley was asked "which a city like Plainfield had best adopt?" His letter below, in answer to that question, decides in favor of the identical system that is offered this city. Mayor Gilbert's opinion is copied from the Central Times of March 25.

THE MAYOR OF CLEVELAND SAYS.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 27, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—In reply to yours of 25th, will say:

First—Our citizens find the electric service a vast improvement over the "back number" horse service. Second—When thoroughly established, and with careful conductors and motor men, I believe there is relatively no more danger than with the horse car lines. Third—Citizens generally prefer the new system. Fourth—Don't know of a death as a direct cause from the current. Fifth—The travel has largely increased. Sixth—The service is on some of our best residential streets, and the tendency has been to build up and improve as well in values. Seventh—We have the "Sprague" (Edison) and "Thomson-Houston". Eighth—Was considerable complaint at first to the overhead system, and one injunction suit. Ninth—Generally the people encourage extensions.

Your friend,
GEORGE H. GARDNER,
Mayor.

THE MAYOR OF PITTSBURGH SAYS.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, PITTSBURGH, PA.,
PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 31, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—In reply to your letter of the 25th inst., permit me to say the following:

We have in successful operation the Sprague (Edison) system on several of our electric street railways. It has increased the value of property along the line of the road. I would advise your people to adopt the electric railway as it is the cheapest and best, and I am satisfied it will improve your city. Horse car travel is too slow and cable roads are too expensive. Every electric railway in this city has increased its business at least 50 per cent., simply because they go fast and take the people to their destination quickly.

In a few years from now the horse cars will be a thing of the past in this city.

Yours respectfully,
H. I. GOURLEY,
Mayor.

MAYOR GILBERT SAYS.

I have tried to keep neutral ground in this matter. I have no policy of my own. What the people want I want, and I pledge myself to that end. But candor compels me to say something in favor of this road. I felt it was something the people did not want in Plainfield, so I visited Newark, where a similar road is in operation. Candor compels me to say I was agreeably disappointed. It was not hideous, not unsightly, not noisy, not objectionable. The cars were nice, the tracks well laid. In choosing between horse cars and electric cars I most assuredly would select the latter. There are objections to every street car system. I do not think the people of Plainfield would deem the poles of this system objectionable when they get used to them.

To Know Him Was to Love Him.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Kindly permit me through the columns of your valuable paper to express my profound thanks to those good people of Plainfield for their interest in my uncle, the late Captain Henry G. Wood, and for their kindness to my dear mother in her hour of bereavement. Until her arrival at Plainfield she did not know the cause of her brother's death, and the shocking information was the most severe blow of her life. Words are inadequate to express her heartfelt appreciation of the loving kindness shown her brother after his most unfortunate and untimely death. Dear and lonely have been the last years of my uncle's life, filled with bitter trials that have at last in an irresponsible moment borne him to his end, and no one to cheer him in his declining spirits, only a sister that loved him as dearly as life itself, but who knew not where to find him in his wanderings and mourned him as lost but not dead. To know him was to love him—so gentle and kind in all things was this truly good man; and so exemplary his character that in his demise humanity loses a friend. Once more thanking you, one and all, for such devoted friendship, believe me,

Sincerely yours,
GEORGE A. WITHERS,
Philadelphia, Pa.

The Street Railway Company That Obstructionists Are Trying to Keep Out of Plainfield, Gave Its Easter Fares to Newark's Hospital, Sunday.

The Rapid Transit Electric Railroad Company of Newark—which is the same company that the Central Times, the Broadway residents, Councilmen Ginas, See and Johnston, and other obstructionists, are trying to keep out of Plainfield—gave all of its Easter Sunday receipts to the three Newark hospitals which are sustained by charity—St. Michael's, St. Barnabas, and the German. The traffic was unusually heavy, and many passengers refused change for bills and looked on with satisfaction as the conductors pulled the fare registers twenty or forty times. Before the cars started from the shed in the morning the indicators were set at zero, and when the first car was ready to go President Elias Ward stepped aboard and rang up $90 worth of fares, representing a brewer's contribution of $50 and a lot of $5 notes sent to the company.

It was calculated beforehand that the company would give at least $700 to the hospitals, but when everything was counted the treasurer had to draw a check for $902.44.

The games in the second of the series of whist contests for the Central railroad championship, were played last evening, At Westfield the N. J. A. C. players, of Bergen Point, defeated the Westfield Athletic Club players by a total of 268 to 237.

The other Crescent players, Emerson & Allis and Graham & Green, each lost two out of the three sets, but Kleb & Bates's totals pulled the Crescents out 28 points ahead. The score was:

A Lesson from His Death.

The Weekly Spy, of Oneonta, N. Y., republishes from THE PRESS the particulars of the suicide of the late Captain H. G. Wood at the Muhlenberg Hospital, this city, and comments as follows:

Capt. Wood was a veteran of the late war, and at Lee's surrender was a first lieutenant in a New York cavalry regiment. While a resident of Oneonta he made many friends, and served the town as supervisor. He also organized the Third Separate Company and was its first captain. That so brave a man, with the best of business faculties, should give up to business reverses in these stirring times is only accounted for by the recital above—he drank. That explains it, and gives the cause of most of his troubles. The loss of his wife's affection, the loss of money, the loss of appetite, insomnia, delirium, and the fatal knife thrust. It is the old story, told a thousand times of high and low, of rich and poor.

The Present Mayor Forecloses on an Ex-Mayor's Property.

Charles F. Stillman's interest in the old homestead on Sherman avenue and the property in front of Music Hall—being part of the real estate left by his father, ex-Mayor Stillman—is advertised for sale by Sheriff Hicks, at the Court House, Elizabeth, May 6, under foreclosure by the Market and Fulton National Bank, of which Alexander Gilbert, Plainfield's present Mayor, is cashier.

Dr. Dean's Dyspepsia Pills are unquestionably good They are, in my opinion, all they claim to be. I have tried them and found in them what I needed. I believe they will cure Dyspepsia, and that is saying much for any medicine. I am glad, therefore, to give my testimony.

Pink Envelopes that Tell Tales.

Harry C. Runyon, the collection agent, has a system of collecting bad debts which has proved very effective in this locality. He uses large bright pink envelopes with his name printed in large bold type in the corner. It is said that when the carrier leaves one of these letters at the door, every one on the block knows that Mrs. So-and-so is being dunned. The money is soon forthcoming.

—Adam Neuman having just purchased the interest of Messrs. Estelle and Taylor, has formed a partnership with his brother, Peter Neuman, of the firm of Estelle, Taylor & Neuman, and together they will continue the grocery business at the corner of Broadway and Fifth street under the name of Neuman Bros.

PERTINENT PARAGRAPHS.

NUGGETS OF LOCAL NEWS, WITH GRAINS OF FREE-LANCE COMMENT.

A curious thing that the Paragrapher has noticed, in his observations about town, is that the people who were so ready to scoff at the innovation of the excellent fire-alarm telegraph service now in operation in the city are very eager to have a key for the signal boxes handy to their homes. Indeed, one of the obstructionists who fought against the introduction of the service and declared all along, with much pompous bluster, that it was a first-class failure, is now greatly incensed because he is not going to be granted the especial favor of having a key to carry around in his pocket all the time. Like several others who decry and oppose all new things that are really for the public benefit, but whose coming portends to their misguided eyes nothing but disaster and ruin, he passed judgment before he knew. He was narrow-minded, and prejudiced, and ignorant, and rash in jumping at conclusions. When he was able to see with his own organs of vision—pig-eyes though they were—how prompt, effective and satisfactory the telegraph fire-alarm system really was, when he recognized that it was an invaluable assistant in saving property and human life from destruction, and that it might yet have a chance to effect the salvation of his own home from the fire-fiend, he could n't rest for the anxiety he felt over the distribution of keys. He has n't been able to get a key all for himself; there had to be a limit somewhere to the number at the city's disposal; but he has educated his entire family on the subject so that in case of fire its several members will scatter in various directions to see who can get a key and send in an alarm first.

A surprising number of people, the Paragrapher finds, are still ignorant of the workings of the signal boxes. Either the public has n't read the printed information on the subject that has been so promiscuously circulated, or else it forgets easily. The locations and numbers of the different boxes have not yet been faithfully learned, in spite of repeated publications of them; and the public mind seems very sluggish even in grasping the import of the brief, concise announcement that has been reiterated time and again, and that stares one in the face the moment he opens a box to send an alarm.

"Pull down the hook once,"—is the legend—"and let go."

That, with the hook thrusting itself forward under one's very nose, seems very simple, but when an excitable individual comes to make use of a box he is apt to get flustered and to do some contrary things that the mechanism of the signal system will not sanction.

***

For instance, yesterday afternoon a zealous young man named Dreier saw some smoke issuing from a building on West Front street, shouted "Fire!", grabbed a convenient key to a signal box, and rushed up to box 12. The door of the box open, he yanked hold of the hook, and bore down on it with all the strength he possessed. It seemed to him that the result must be a tremendous toot of the big triple chime gong, but he was considerably surprised, and, indeed, somewhat dazed, to hear not the faintest murmur. Instead of relaxing his hold, he tugged the harder, and danced excitedly up and down till the top of the telegraph pole on which the box was fastened trembled convulsively. Finally he gave up in disgust, and his aching arm fell limply to his side. Of course then the gong tooted instantly, and brought out a big crowd of people.

The alarm was, however, only an April Fool joke on the city. Some good colored brothren who hold religious services in Cutler's Hall had been building a fire in a stove, preparatory to the evening meeting. The stove was obstinate, and would not "draw". The result was that dense volumes of smoke filled the hall, nearly suffocated the fire-builders, and poured from the windows to the alarm of Mr. Dreier. The fire department learned the facts promptly, and kept their services in reserve for more urgent future occasions. A fatherly old gentleman who has great faith in a patent fire-extinguisher which he sells seized the opportunity to secure an excellent advertisement and sallied forth with one of his nickle-plated hand machines to the scene of the conflagration. When he got there he found nothing to extinguish but the fire in the pipe of a colored man who sat in a window-sill of the hall, placidly smoking. But he exhibited his flame-annihilator, and expatiated on its merits before the admiring crowd, just the same.

The completeness of the city's new fire-alarm system is really extraordinary. The mechanism is marvelously perfect, and is a triumph of human handiwork. When one has sent in an alarm he cannot remove his key till a Fire Department Chief comes to his help, so that detection and punishment of a false-alarm offender is a very easy matter. The instant the hook in one box is touched every other box is thrown out of connection, so that the confusion of sounds that in old systems used to result from two boxes being pulled simultaneously is impossible. The instant a signal wire is accidentally broken or tampered with, the gong toots once, and the break can be immediately repaired. In every way the system is its own detective.

It was not the Paragrapher's intention to devote so much space to this one topic, but when one gets talking about a good thing it is an easy matter to ramble along to great length. He must close his column for the day, holding in reserve for the morrow some pertinent remarks on a variety of interesting local topics.

NATHANIEL FAIRFIELD.

$25,000 IN THE PLATE.

Remarkable Contributions of One Church for Benevolent Purposes, and the Extended Work of its Societies and Chapels.

The regular annual meeting of the Crescent Avenue church was held in the chapel last evening. After the opening services, conducted by the pastor, the minutes of the previous meeting were read by J. K. Van Arsdale, clerk of the session. The terms of office of Elders J. K. Van Arsdale and I. C. Pierson, and Deacon S. H. Whitney, having expired, they were unanimously re-elected.

The report of the Ladies' Aid Society was read by Mr. Richards. The Ladies' Home Missionary Society held meetings every Friday afternoon during the winter, with an increased attendance over last year. The ladies prepared boxes for missionaries and their families, valued at $400, and raised in money $765, including the salary of the teacher whom they support and $105 for a bicycle for a missionary who has to travel over a large field without a horse.

The Foreign Missionary Society, which includes ladies of both Presbyterian churches, met once a month, alternately, between the two churches.

The share of this church of money contributed, was $452. The Young Ladies' Mission Band, also of both churches and in the foreign work, had a very successful year. The share of the Crescent Avenue church of its money raised in various ways, was $173.

The Band of Earnest Workers, composed of boys between seven and fourteen years of age, and under the charge of ladies of the church, raised $60; and the Sunshine Mission Band, of little girls of the same ages, had also a successful year.

There was contributed to the Plainfield Relief Society by the ladies of the church, $414, and to the Children's Home $369. They also contributed largely toward the McAll Auxiliary.

A report of the Sunday-school was next read by its Superintendent, Wm. D. Murray. During the year the school lost the Superintendent, H. B. Newhall, whom it had had for many years. He voluntarily resigned, but took a class of boys, so that the school still has the benefit of his ripe experience and good judgment. The school contributed for missionary purposes during last year, $657. The number on the roll, including officers and teachers, is 454.

A report of Bethel school was next read by S. A. Ginna. The school is in good condition, holding three religious services on Sunday and a prayer meeting during the week. It sustained a great loss during the year by the death of J. Marc Martin, one of their ablest workers, who had built up and sustained one of the largest male adult classes, whose members were much attached to him. Mr. VanArsdale is now teaching the class with success. The number of members of the school is 218, and they contributed $415 during the year.

A report of Hope chapel was read by H. C. Squires. That school is in a flourishing condition, so that it has been again thought best to build additions. The chapel is open every evening in the week, and there are five religious services besides other regular meetings. The Ladies' Aid Society of the chapel has done excellent work. It paid $100 toward the building fund, $70 toward the deficit in expenses of the summer excursion, and curtained the windows of the building. There is also a society of Christian Endeavor under the direction of F. H. Andrews, and a young men's society, both of which are doing excellent work. The total membership of the chapel is 416, and they raised during the year $617. Mr. Richards then called on the Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor in charge of the chapel, who gave in an interesting manner his view of the work.

Albert Beers reported for the Young People's Association of the church. The average attendance at the Friday evening prayer meetings has been 125; the largest attendance being 175, and the smallest, on only two evenings, 60. Many have led and otherwise taken part, who have never done so before.

The deacons reported, through S. R. Struthers, the contribution of $700 toward their fund. As the work has grown so large that the three deacons can hardly attend to it properly, Mr. Struthers suggested the appointment of another deacon from the direction of Hope chapel.

Mr. VanArsdale read the report of the Session. The two largest amounts contributed during the year were for the Foreign Mission Board, $2,266, of which $1,400 was contributed Easter Sunday, and for the Home Mission Board, $3,367. The total for various boards was $8,499, which, with what was contributed by the other societies during the year, amounted to $13,647 raised for benevolent purposes. $11,852 was contributed for the expenses of the church. The total membership is 890, of which number 767 are of the Crescent avenue church, 40 from Bethel chapel and 83 from Hope chapel.

SPOON COLLECTIONS

The Latest Society Fad and How to Execute Its Details.

It is a recent fad of the day to collect spoons — teaspoons, ice-cream spoons, tablespoons, or any kind of spoons, without having any two alike, from as many different cities or countries as good fortune has enabled you to visit. If any quaint or curious pattern, characteristic of the place in which it is bought, can be found, so much the better; for instance, in the Pennsylvania oil regions teaspoons may be found with an oil derrick for their decoration. In the city of Washington spoons may be found with the cut of the capitol in the bowl or on the handle. Single spoons also make a very pretty Christmas, birthday or Easter present, if sent to a friend residing in another city from which you live. The prettiest way for marking is to have the name of the city engraved diagonally in the bowl of the spoon, so when taken in the right hand the name is distinctly seen; this often furnishes a topic for a languishing conversation, and prevents dullness. The year should be marked on the handle of the spoon—perhaps on the under side. This custom of collecting spoons is making inroads upon another fashionable fad, the collecting of friendship rings or bracelets, for this later one is really so very serviceable a reminder of travels and places of interest, and one can have spoons and spoons and still find use for more spoons. Spoon collections, though quite a new idea, already contain some note-worthy curiosities. At a tea given in New York this winter, the Russian tea tumbler, with silver frames, were supplied with Russian teaspoons from Moscow, and St. Petersburg, and from far Siberian cities, both modern and barbaric in design, and yet harmonious in their splendor. No two were of the same pattern, or of quite the same period, and many had a wealth of curious detail work in their designs.

An excellent case for keeping odd spoons is made of a piece of chamois skin, three inches wider than the length of the spoon, on each side of the spoon. Tack a strap of the chamois about an inch deep down through the center at intervals of an inch; under this strip slip the handle of the spoon, turn over the flap at each side and then roll up and tie with a narrow ribbon. It looks very neat to label with ink or gild with the brush, the name of the city to correspond with the spoon that lies under the strap. This is just as serviceable made out of Canton flannel, answering all purposes just as well, but most housekeepers' fingers linger lovingly over a piece of chamois when thinking of their silver. A case for knives made in the following manner, either of chamois or Canton flannel, affords a careful, tidy way of caring for them: For a dozen knives one will need a strip twenty inches in length and two inches wider than the knives are long. Take a similar strip one inch less in width; sew the ends of the strip together, and then stitch at intervals along to form pockets of the proper size to hold the knife. A similar one may be made for forks and spoons, taking care to allow a little more room in the pockets for the difference in the shape of the article.—Annie Wade Westbrook, in Good Housekeeping.

SCOTCH SANDWICHES.

A Delicious Relish for Luncheon and Informal Parties.

These are a delicious little relish and can be made from the veriest trifle of cold fowl. Cut small two parts of cold chicken and one of tongue or ham. To a quarter of a pound of this mixture add three tablespoonfuls of some good meat gravy and a little curry paste or powder. If the sauce was not thickened add a teaspoonful of flour wet with cold water or stock to give it consistency. Simmer for a few minutes and stand back while you cut slices of stale bread about a quarter of an inch thick, stamping them with a round cutter the size of a silver dollar. Fry them by immersion in boiling fat, lift out with a colander dipper and drain quickly on paper. Spread each of these with the meat mixture rather thickly, piling one on top of the other. Allow three or four for each person. They make a nice separate course or a side dish. Sometimes these circles of bread are cut slightly larger and two are placed together, with the meat between, and on top a ball of mixed butter and grated cheese about the size of a hickory nut. They are then set in the oven for five minutes to allow the butter and cheese to melt through.

A Simple Mouse Trap.

The need of a convenient mouse trap is at times apparent, when it is not easy to obtain the article. A young housekeeper in one of our cities, however, has accidentally discovered a substitute of which she is fond of telling the story. It is nothing else than the ordinary sticky fly paper, which she places convenient to their haunt, and has not only made several captures, but has evidently frightened away the survivors, who do not seem to understand that sort of device at all.

NEW ORLEANS EXCITED.

A Pronounced War Spirit Manifesting Itself in the Crescent City.

NEW ORLEANS, April 2.—The city is very much excited over the reports received here from Washington concerning the resignation of Baron Fava, and a very pronounced war spirit is manifesting itself.

The opinion is generally expressed that the Italian government has acted with extreme haste and before the machinery of justice has been put into operation.

The grand jury is still in session and is not likely to report for several days yet. It has not yet completed its investigation into the charges of bribery and has only casually investigated the prison occurrence.

Wall Street Not Disturbed.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The recall of the Italian Minister is regarded as of little consequence on Wall street. There was an attempt made by the bears to make a little capital out of the affair, but the quick absorption of their offerings soon caused a cessation of their desire to sell.

No Mafia Society There.

HAZELTON, Pa., April 2.—J. Girimondi, pastor of the Italians in this section, has issued a card, in which he denies that a Mafia Society was recently organized here. He affirms that in the whole of this coal district there are only three Italians members of secret organizations, and they belong to the Odd Fellows.

Warning to American Tourists.

LONDON, April 2.—In a published card a prominent Italian gentleman warns Americans against touring in Italy during the present year on account of the feeling of bitter hostility toward the United States entertained by his countrymen because of the New Orleans massacre.

Keyport Oystermen Armed.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 2.—Keyport oystermen have armed themselves with rifles to resist arrest by Staten Island officers employed by oystermen of that place. The Staten Island oystermen claim that the Jerseymen dredge for oysters in their waters contrary to the laws of New York State. The Keyport men claim that their sloops simply drift over the established line between Jersey and New York. They intend to allow their boats to sail over the line hereafter and await the result. They are acting under legal advice.

Committed Suicide by Hanging.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Mrs. Emma O'Field, 50 years old, committed suicide by hanging herself at her residence in 100th street. Her husband, Arthur O'Field was arrested about a week ago charged with a heinous assault on his 9-year-old grand niece, and he was to have had an examination in court to-day. During the morning he was found unconscious in his cell, having cut both of his wrists with the jagged edge of a spoon. He will probably recover.

Not Seriously Damaged.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., April 2.—The tug Nina arrived here in tow of one of the wrecking tugs during the morning. The wreckers succeeded in floating her off Gay Head during the night. She is not very seriously damaged.

Mysterious Disappearance of a Woman.

BOSTON, April 2.—Mrs. Charlotte Brush, aged 50, the widow of the late Dr. Brush, mysteriously disappeared from South Boston on January 15. She left her home on that day, saying that she was going to visit a sister in Fitchburg. It has just transpired that she never reached there.

Frick, the Anarchist, Dead.

PITTSBURG, April 2.—Herr Frick, the notorious Anarchist, died last night at the Allegheny Hospital, aged 74 years. His body will be cremated here Sunday. Herr Most will be present.

Prof. Koch is Depressed.

BERLIN, April 2.—Dr. Koch has returned to this city from Egypt. He enjoys excellent health, but is depressed over the non-success of his lymph.

Not Sufficiently Aggressive.

PITTSBURG, April 2.—Dr. Nardiz, president of the Pittsburg branch of the Societe Italia, says Baron Fava was recalled because he was not aggressive enough in following instructions demanding the punishment of the New Orleans mob leaders, and that his place will be filled by a more radical representative. Nardis laughs at the talk of war.

THE CHILDREN'S health must not be neglected. Cold in the head causes catarrh. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into the nostrils. The worst cases yielding to it. Price 50c.

ONE of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

QUITE A ROMANCE.

What the Pigs-in-the-Clover Episode Accomplished.

FARMER TALBUT sat toasting his shins before a glowing wood fire in his cozy little sitting-room, with a smile of satisfaction on his round, ruddy face. The flames leaped and roared up the wide-mouthed chimney, sending back a cheering warmth which, although the spring was well advanced, gave an air of comfort to the otherwise chilly apartment. He was just beginning to realize what real comfort was like and now that he had found it was enjoying it to his heart's content.

The fact of the matter was that all his life, or at least as much of it as he could remember, had been tortured with housekeepers; and not until meek and modest Amanda Brown had become an inmate of his home had he known a resting place for the sole of his foot.

One had been independent and high-strung and would not allow him the slightest authority in his own establishment.

Another had been caught carrying away sundry packages of tea, coffee and sugar to her friends, to say nothing of the homespun table linen and other articles of domestic value which she had boldly pilfered before making her exit.

And still another whose habits were so untidy that the whole house looked like a curiosity shop before she had been one week under its roof; and the meals which she set upon the table were nauseating in the extreme and as indigestible as a rubber shoe.

But now there was a most decided change. From garret to cellar the old farmhouse had been thoroughly cleaned and renovated, and, as Farmer Talbut said: "It shone like a new pin."

The house had not been torn up and its contents tossed about for days, after the usual style of housekeeping, but in a quiet, undemonstrative way things had been straightened, cleaned and put to rights until the old place looked as it had never looked before, and a sense of ease and comfort pervaded the whole atmosphere.

And for once in his life Farmer Talbut was happy; his slippers were in place beside the hearth, his meals were ready the moment he reached the house, and so deliciously cooked that he had gained a number of pounds in weight since the advent of his new housekeeper.

Amanda Brown was a plump, rosy-cheeked maiden of forty summers, modest and quiet in her way, neat and tidy and a most delightful cook, and she soon contentedly realized that no one could do better justice to her splendid dinners than Farmer Talbut. He well knew that he had secured a prize in the way of a housekeeper and he intended to keep her, if kind treatment made her willing to remain.

Many a man's heart has been reached through his stomach, and Farmer Talbut's heart was in warm sympathy with his organs of digestion. He was a bachelor, and it was his intention to remain so to the end of the chapter. His experience in the housekeeping line had convinced him what life would be if he were tied down to a woman forever; and he had made up his mind, long ere this, that nothing in petticoats could ever domineer over him so long as he was in his right mind.

He was about fifty years of age, and possessed enough of this world's goods to keep him comfortable for life.

But it should here be mentioned that, aside from his aversion to the fair sex,

FARMER TALBUT WAS HAPPY.

he was a kind-hearted and pleasantly-disposed man.

However, after Miss Amanda Brown appeared upon the scene, his feeling soon underwent a decided change.

Perhaps, after all, he thought, women were not all alike; at least Amanda was widely different from most of the women of his experience; and somehow she had a knack of making everybody around her so comfortable.

One afternoon Farmer Talbut came rushing to the door, and in an excited voice, called to his housekeeper:

"Mandy! Mandy! The pigs are in the clover; and there isn't a man within a mile of here! Do come and help me."

Throwing her apron over her head, Amanda hurried off to the clover field, where two half-grown pigs were making sad havoc by trampling down the lovely patch of which the farmer had all the spring been justly proud.

To encourage the intruders to make their way out with as little trouble as possible, he let the bars down, and then tried to drive them to the opening; but there is nothing so obstinate and exasperating as a couple of young pigs, and they rushed squealing by the opening without as much as a glance.

Round and round went the pigs, squealing and grunting at every step; and round and round ran Farmer Talbut, puffing and wheezing in hot pursuit, with Amanda close at his heels.

At last, stopping short in the center of the field and mopping the sweat from his flushed face, he exclaimed, in a despairing voice:

"It's no use, Mandy; the pesky little devils won't go out till they get ready, so we might as well go back to the house."

"I wouldn't use swear words," said Amanda, severely. "Let us try once more; you go this way, and I'll go that, and we'll head off the critters."

So saying, they started in opposite directions, with the pigs squealing just ahead.

It was a laughable sight to see the pigs and their pursuers as they all rushed excitedly toward the open bars. As the animals drew near the opening, the foremost one turned as though to rush back into the field. As he did so Amanda sprang forward. If she could only seize the foremost pig and push him through the opening, she knew the other one would soon follow.

With a wild spring she swooped down upon the offender, who with a prolonged squeal slipped cunningly from beneath her grasp, and Amanda, losing her balance, fell headlong into the arms of Farmer Talbut, her nose striking against his ample shirt-front with such force that the blood rushed from it like claret from a broken bottle.

"Oh! oh! oh!" cried Amanda. "I reckon my nose is broken!"

"Don't faint, Mandy — oh, please don't! I'm very sorry it hurt you so," said the sympathetic farmer, still holding her in his arms and carefully wiping the blood from her upturned face.

"I am not a-going to faint," said Amanda, with a little spirit; "but oh, it did hurt so!" and the tears came to Amanda's eyes at the thought of the injury to her poor nose.

All Farmer Talbut's sympathies were aroused, and for a few moments he failed to realize that he was a bachelor, and that this was a real woman he was holding in his arms; besides, Amanda's soft, warm cheek was very close to his own, and he so far forgot himself that he bent forward and actually planted a lingering kiss on that same warm cheek!

"John Talbut, I should think you were old enough to behave yourself," cried Amanda, in an injured voice, as she, after a slight struggle, freed herself from his grasp and walked indignantly back to the house.

Two days passed, and Farmer Talbut sauntered into the little sitting-room, where Amanda sat quietly sewing.

As he looked down into her face, he perceived that her nose and eyes were very red, and marks of tears were still fresh on her plump cheek.

"Why, Mandy," he cried, "what on earth is the matter?"

"Matter enough," answered Amanda. "I'm going to leave."

"Going to leave? Amanda, you must be mad. Don't I pay you wages enough?"

"Yes," said Amanda, "it isn't for that I am going. The fact of the matter is, I am getting to be the town talk, and I am not going to stand it; and the sooner I leave this place the better it will be for me."

Overcome with surprise, Farmer Talbut sank helplessly in a chair beside his housekeeper.

"Town talk, Mandy!" he said. "I wish you would explain, for I swear I don't understand you."

"Well," said Amanda, "it's just this. You remember the day we tried to drive the pigs out of the clover-field?"

"Remember it? He guessed he did. Why, it had not been out of his head five minutes for the whole two days," and a smile passed over his lips as he nodded to Amanda, who, with her eyes bent on her work, and cheeks as red as a peony, continued:

"Well, that gossiping old creature, Sophie Wilkins, who lives down in Burnham's Meadow, was passing just the other side of the stone wall when I fell, and she saw—saw—"

Here Amanda stopped short, overcome with maiden modesty.

"Saw me kiss you," continued the farmer, "and went and cackled it all over the neighborhood. Is that it, Mandy?"

"Yes," answered Amanda, "that is just it; and she said I had been setting my cap for you ever since I came here."

"It's just like the meddlesome old rat. But I say, Mandy, let's give her a little surprise."

Amanda looked inquiringly into his face.

"You see, Mandy," he continued, "for some weeks I have known that I can't get along without you, no way; and if you will marry me I'll ask the parson up to our Sunday dinner, and we'll have the splicing done right up at the same time. What do you say, Mandy, are you agreeable?"

Amanda was agreeable, and the farmer sealed the agreement with a kiss which could be heard almost at Burnham's Meadow.—Josephine Lovelace, in N. Y. Weekly.

High Praise.

Mabel—What a perfectly exquisite new bonnet, dearest!

Ethel—Oh, I 'm so glad you like it. I was so afraid you wouldn't. Are you sure you like it?

Mabel—Sure? Oh, perfectly. I always did adore that shape. Why, I had three just like it—when it was in fashion.—Jury.

SACHET FOR GLOVES

A Pretty Trifle with Which Girls Can Surprise Their Mothers.

It will be a good plan for the girl who means to learn to embroider to make a sachet for mamma's gloves. The one which will be described is so simple and so easy to make that any little woman can succeed who will do just as she is told.

First, purchase three-quarters of a yard of pale blue ribbon four inches wide, and fringe each end to the depth of one inch. Above the fringe draw the outline of a bunch of daisies like the one in the illustration below. If any ambitious girl cannot draw, she must get a piece of tracing paper, and transfer the design, or she can take the ribbon to some shop where embroidery materials are kept, and have it stamped.

The stems must be worked in dark green filo-floss, with the stitch shown in the first illustration. The first row of stitches must run up the stem along the line which marks the right edge; then another row of stitches must be worked so close to the first that they touch; then row after row until the line on the left of the stem is reached.

Then the leaf must be done with some of the same green silk. It will be best to use two strands at a time for both stem and leaf. First make a row of stem stitches along the line that marks the central vein; then begin at the base and work one side of the leaf with stitches which run from the base of the petal to the point. The stitches must be close together, so that the silk cannot be seen between them; and you must be very careful to keep to the outline, so that all the little points of the leaf will be perfect. When the first side of the leaf is complete, work the second, beginning at the base of the vein, as you did with the first side. To embroider the daisies, first work the petals, one at a time, as the illustration of the single petal shows. Use cream-white filo-floss, with a few stitches of gray at the base of each petal to shade them. The lines in the design show where the shading is to be put.

DAISIES.

The calyx of the daisy, that hangs over on its stem, is to be worked in green like the stem, and the stitches are to run in the direction indicated by the lines in the design.

For the center of the full daisy yellow embroidery silk must be used. The stitch best suited to represent the pollen is the French knot stitch.

To make the knot, thread your needle with one strand of embroidery silk, knot the end, and pass the needle through from the under side at the center of the circle. Hold the thread in the left hand about three inches from the ribbon, then wind it twice around the needle, and hold the thread lightly with the left hand. Slip the needle down the silk until you can pass the point through the ribbon close to where the strand of silk is fastened. Let go the silk with the left hand, and pull the needle and silk through as far and as tight as you can. A tiny knot will be formed in the center of the daisy. Continue to make these knots until all the circle is filled, and the effect will be quite like that of the real pollen.

It will require some practice to make perfect knots, but if you will carefully follow the direction you will surely succeed in the end.

When the daisies on both ends of the ribbon are worked, they must be gently pressed with a warm iron, and then begins the making of the sachet itself. To do this you must tie the ribbon in as handsome a bow-knot as you know how, for the loops of the bow are to hold the sweet-scented cotton. Fill each loop with layers of white wadding well sprinkled with violet powder, and overhand the edges together in the neatest possible manner. When all the work is done you will have made a really artistic piece of embroidery, and a sachet as pretty as the one in the illustration above.—Harper's Young People.

WALL DECORATION.

A "Catch-All" Made of Japanese Fans and Bamboo Sticks.

A clever invention for a bedroom wall decoration is a "catch all," made of Japanese fans and bamboo sticks. For the front piece the sticks of the fan are disconnected and inserted in the piece of split bamboo. The intervals between the sticks are filled with a broad ribbon, woven in and out of the sticks. A flat piece of covered pasteboard forms the back, at the top of which two fans, half opened, make the half circle. The side pieces are also of fans nearly shut. —N. Y. Tribune.

A New Disease.

Mrs. Mose Schaumberg is a very candid woman. There were several lady friends at the house a few days ago. Mose was not present, being down at the store.

"How is your husband's pishness coming on?" asked one of the visitors.

"Not so good as I vants. Every once in a vile he gets one of his honest spells, and then we hardly make expenses. You don't know how bad I feels ven Mose gets one of dose honest spells."—Texas Siftings.

Not So Slow After All.

Mr. Murrie-Hille—You say you don't dance, and that you have scruples against theater going. What shall we do to amuse you? What do you do at home? I am ready for anything you like.

Pretty Country Cousin—Oh, at home we have church sociables.

Mr. Murrie-Hille—And what do you do there?

Pretty Country Cousin (demurely)—We generally play kissing games.—Life.

Must Change the Place.

Miss Twilling—I suppose you remember, Mr. Calloway, that last night, in spite of my fruitless struggles, you had the effrontery, sir, to actually kiss me.

Calloway (meekly)—Yes, I remember the circumstance.

Miss Twilling—Well, if you think you are going to repeat that operation in the hall to-night, you are much mistaken. I don't propose to leave this room all the evening.—West Shore.

A Youthful Cynic.

The following conversation occurred between two boys who reside in the most fashionable part of the city:

Tommy (seven years old)—Fanny has turned out to be faithless.

Johnny (eight years old)—When you get to be of my age you will find out that's the way all women are. The man who relies on them is going to get left. —Texas Siftings.

He Saved His Life.

A wealthy banker meets a tramp in an isolated place.

Tramp—Help a poor man, with a dollar—you will save a human life.

Banker (haughtily)—Your life is not worth a dollar.

Tramp (swinging a club)—But yours is.

Tramp gets his dollar.—Texas Siftings.

NOT AN EXTRAORDINARY QUESTION,

Young Alligator (inspecting a pineapple)—Well, I wonder if that is an alligator's egg?—Harper's Young People.

Bound to Get It.

Chesaly—Boggs makes me real tired sometimes.

Gage—What has he done now?

Chesaly—He wanted to borrow a dollar from me, but I didn't have it, so he borrowed my umbrella.

Gage—Well?

Chesaly—And now I find he has pawned the umbrella.—Boston Herald.

From Frying-Pan to Fire.

Miss Haydon—Miss Palmer, I must ask you to explain yourself. I understand that you told Mrs. Palmer that my brother George was the black sheep of the family.

Miss Palmer—My dear Miss Haydon, it was merely a slip of the tongue, I assure you. I meant to say white sheep. —Judge.

She Was Taking Lessons.

Roadside Bill (handing back the pie)—Madam, will you kindly change this for a piece of soap?

Mrs. Newhouse—Certainly; but you can have the pie, too.

Roadside Bill—Don't need it. I wanted the soap to get the taste of that one mouthful out.—Judge.

Practical.

Newly-Made Widow—He is a fashionable undertaker, but even his charges are far below what I can afford, and I want to give my husband the most expensive funeral I can, you know.

The Friend—Why don't you get a plumber to bury him, then?—Life.

Out of His Reach.

Mrs. Gopher Lyons—Babette! Why are you putting the candelabra on the mantel instead of on the dining table?

Babette—Mr. Lyons just told me to take them off. He said the Rooshian count, what's comin' to dine, moight forget himself.—Puck.

A Bad Character.

McFingle—Scadsby's talking about me, is he? Well, anything he can say won't hurt my character.

McFangle—No; that's what he says. But he remarked to me that it might possibly improve it, as it is too bad to hurt any.—Light.

A Ray of Sunlight.

Poor Little Boy (shivering)—I'm c-c-c-old.

Benevolent Looking Individual—Well, my dear little fellow, be so while you may. Remember there is a hereafter.—West Shore.

A Sad Case.

"Poor Cholly's is a very sad case. His father brought him up in wealth and comfort, and last week—"

"Well?"

"His father married again."—Life.

Fashions of '91.

De Dude—Aw, mah good man, do you make trousers wide or narrow now?

Fashionable Cutter—All depends h'on on th' legs, sir; the less leg th' more trousers, sir.—N. Y. Weekly.

"You don't dare put your arm around Miss Passee's waist."

"I'm not afraid of her—but I'm no lemon squeezer."—Jury.

STATESMEN CONFER

Great Britain's Representatives Call on Mr. Blaine.

QUICK AND SECRET BUSINESS.

Those Who Took Part in the Conference Decline to Give Any Information.

Outline of the President's Trip to the Pacific Slope and Back—Supervising Architect Windrim to Go to Philadelphia—Treasury Officials Pleased With the New Immigration Law—Kincaid's Trial.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—There was a significant conference at the State Department between Secretary Blaine, Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British Minister, and Sir Charles Tupper, who was associated with Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Sackville in negotiating the North Atlantic fisheries treaty which was concluded some three years ago but which was rejected by the United States Senate. Sir Charles is now the Canadian High Commissioner in London, England.

What the result of the conference was cannot be ascertained. All those who took part in it decline to give any information about it at present.

It may have been in relation to the Behring Sea seal fisheries question, but that is not probable, because at the present stage of the negotiations, when Blaine and Salisbury have met about have way on the question of impartial arbitration, it would hardly be timely for an assistant of Sir Julian to appear on the scene.

It cannot have been in relation to the Sayward case in the Supreme Court, because nothing could be done in that matter in the absence of Mr. Choate and Mr. Calderon Carlisle, the counsel in the case.

It may have been about the North Atlantic fisheries, but the purpose of the conference is more likely to have been to make preliminary arrangements for the negotiation of a commercial reciprocity treaty with Canada.

One thing is certain—the conference was conclusive as far as it went, for Sir Charles Tupper has left the city for Canada. It was quick business. His movements in Canada will be watched with interest.

THE CALIFORNIA TRIP.

Cities Where the President Will Stop on His Visit to the Coast.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The itinerary of the President's trip to California, as announced at the Executive mansion, is as follows:

He will leave Washington on Tuesday morning, April 14, and will travel Southward. The following cities will be briefly visited: Roanoke, Va.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Atlanta, Ga.; Birmingham, Ala.; Memphis, Tenn.; Little Rock, Ark.; Dallas, Texas, reaching Galveston, Texas, on Saturday night. They will leave Galveston on Monday morning and go to El Paso, Texas; Yuma and Los Angeles, Cal.

California will be entered about Tuesday or Wednesday of the second week. California will take about a week's time, short tours being made through the State. From San Francisco the party will go to Portland, Ore., Olympia and Puget Sound, and at the latter place a turn homeward will be made, taking in Boise City, Ogden, Salt Lake, Pueblo, Denver, Hastings, Omaha, Moberly, Springfield and Indianapolis, spending the last Sunday, May 10, there. From Indianapolis the next move will be made to Washington, which will be reached in about a month from the start.

Secretary Tracy will accompany him, also Private Secretary Halford or Marshal Ransdell. The other members of the party are not yet selected. Mr. George W. Boyd, general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad system, will have charge of the party and will accompany it throughout.

Death of Gen. Albert Pike.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Gen. Albert Pike, prominent as a Mason and poet, died at his home here at 8 o'clock last evening. Gen. Pike was 81 years old last December. He was a man of remarkable vitality and splendid physique, being 6 feet 4 inches in height, and until last fall, when he was prostrated, was never known to have been sick in bed for even a day.

Architect Windrim Resigns.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Supervising Architect James H. Windrim has indicated to Secretary of the Treasury Foster that he will tender his resignation as Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department when it may be the pleasure of Secretary Foster to accept it. Mr. Windrim has been tendered the appointment of Director of Public Works of Philadelphia, and has decided to accept it.

New Presidential Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The President has appointed the following postmasters: Pennsylvania, Geo. C. Olmstead and James T. Dunfee. New Hampshire, Charles H. Martin. New York, Wm. Spraker and W. Taggart.

MORRIS AGAINST BULKELEY.

Connecticut's Political Trouble to be Taken to the Courts.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., April 3.—The case of Morris against Bulkeley will be pressed immediately on quo warranto proceedings. Judge Morris has always favored such a course, and it was with that idea he took the oath of office.

The quo warranto proceedings will first be brought before a Superior Court judge, who will probably, in view of the importance of the case, refer it to the Supreme Court for advice.

The Democratic contention will probably be that the court has nothing to do with the legality or illegality of the "for" votes and other ballots discarded or counted by the town moderators, but must pass on the question whether the failure of the House to do its constitutional duty can impair Morris' title and defeat the will of the people.

MAY PROVE A MURDER.

Suspicious Circumstances Connected With Fred Titcomb's Death.

RAYMOND, N. H., April 3.—Owing to suspicious circumstances connected with the death of Fred. W. Titcomb the police have arrested Wayland Smart, whom Titcomb accused of being too intimate with his wife.

Last evening a pistol shot was heard in the room occupied by the Titcombs and soon after Mrs. Titcomb came down stairs with her little daughter and told the other occupants of the house that her husband had shot himself. Smart and Mrs. Titcomb then drove to Hampstead, where they left the child.

As soon as the child, who is supposed to have witnessed the shooting, can be brought back a hearing will be had by the coroner's jury.

Mrs. Titcomb, who is 23 years old, has been separated from two husbands and gained considerable notoriety by her actions.

Indictments for Bribery.

NEW ORLEANS, April 3.—The grand jury has found three indictments in blank, two against Seligman and Borsen for bribery, and three against O'Malley for conspiring to bribe. Seligman is in Cincinnati, Borsen is here and O'Malley's whereabouts is a mystery, though it is understood he is in Christina Lake Shore, within 100 miles of New Orleans, surrounded by a heavy guard, which he has had since the killing of the Italian prisoners.

Bryan McSwyny Arrested.

NEW YORK, April 3.—Bryan McSwyny, the well known shoemaker, and Bella Malone, his alleged mistress, have been arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. McSwyny charging them with conspiracy. It is charged by Mrs. McSwyny that her husband had induced her to sign several blank deeds, which he used, with the assistance of Bella Malone, in disposing of real estate valued at $5,000. In default of bail the prisoners were locked up.

Anti-Parnellites Elected in Cork.

DUBLIN, April 3.—It is claimed that the poor law elections at Northeast Cork show majorities of two to one in favor of candidates not friendly to Parnell, and as Northwest Cork has been considered a Parnellite stronghold, it is said to be probable that Parnell will now decide not to risk his seat. The Parnellites, on the other hand, claim that the question of Parnell's ascendency had nothing whatever to do with the election.

Oil Refinery Burned.

PITTSBURG, April 3.—The Waverly oil refinery, corner of 32d and Butler streets, was totally destroyed by fire last night. Loss, about $115,000. The refinery was owned by S. M. Willock, of Allegheny. Six cars of crude oil, three of benzine and 415 barrels of oil were destroyed. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The 15 employes had narrow escapes.

England's War Preparations.

ITALY BACKS DOWN

The Marquis di Rudini Sends Another Message.

HE STATES HIS CASE CLEARLY.

The Italians Ask for Nothing but Prompt Regular Proceedings.

Secretary Blaine Will Send to Italy the Report of the New Orleans Grand Jury. Baron Fava Ready to Start for Home. The Italian Papers More Moderate in Their Tone—Volunteers Are Plentiful.

ROME, April 3.—The Marquis di Rudini, the Italian Premier, sent another cablegram to the United States on the subject of the New Orleans trouble.

This message is addressed to the Marquis Imperiali di Francivill, the Secretary of the Italian Legation at Washington, into whose hands the current business of the Italian Legation was placed when Baron Fava presented his letters of recall. Marquis di Rudini instructs the Marquis Imperiali to hand the message referred to to Mr. Blaine.

The message is in reply to Mr. Blaine's last note, and in it the Marquis di Rudini says that Italy has asked for nothing but the regular prompt institution of proceedings against the parties at New Orleans. He adds that it would have been absurd to claim punishment for the offenders without the guarantee afforded by a regular trial. The diplomatic incident, the Marquis di Rudini says, can only be considered when the Federal government has declared in precise terms when the prosecutions will be commenced.

BLAINE WILL INFORM ITALY.

He Will Send the Result of the New Orleans Grand Jury's Investigation.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Notwithstanding the withdrawal of Baron Fava and the severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Italy, Secretary Blaine will not allow his interest in the New Orleans affair to rest, and he will inform the Italian government of the result of the grand jury's investigation of the killing of the Italians.

Mr. Blaine's answer will be necessarily delayed by the operation of departmental routine and it will probably be some time before it is sent to Italy. When the report of the grand jury is made it will be placed by the district attorney at New Orleans in proper form for transmission to Attorney-General Miller, who will send it through the usual red tape channels to Secretary Blaine.

THE ITALIAN PRESS.

Rome's Newspapers Treat the Recall of Fava With Great Moderation.

ROME, April 3.—The papers to-day give more importance to the recall of Fava, but, on the whole, treat the subject with the greatest moderation, commending the action of the government, as do the Italian public, on the ground that Blaine's course was directed toward the avoidance of dangerous complications in the Federal administration, and that the withdrawal was inevitable.

Don Chisciotte advocates that Fava's post be suppressed, on the ground that it is useless to continue relations with a State only capable of insuring immunity to assassins.

FAVA'S DEPARTURE.

He Will Leave Washington To-day for New York on His Way Home.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Baron Fava has completed his packing up. He will leave Washington to-day for New York, whence he will sail on Saturday for Europe.

The attaches of the Legation who remain behind have arranged to present him with a valuable token of their affection before he goes.

Only a Flash in the Pan.

LONDON, April 3.—Signor Bonacina, president of the Italian Chamber of Commerce in this city, said that he considered the action taken by Baron Fava as "somewhat precipitate, and it was a mere flash in the pan which would end in nothing." Continuing, he said: "There is not much sympathy among Italians in London with the men who were lynched. Still we think that if the lynchers go unpunished, respectable Italians in the United States are not safe."

Dodge City Citizens Aroused.

DODGE CITY, Kan., April 3.—The following message was sent to New Orleans:

To the Mayor and Citizens of New Orleans:

The people of Dodge City, Kansas, in mass convention assembled, resolved, that this meeting expresses the sentiment of this city and county, and say to the people of the Crescent City that one thousand able-bodied men spoken for by this resolution are ready to go to Louisiana and shoot, as they will shoot if called upon by our government and Italy's hostile attitude demands it. (Signed) R. W. EVANS, Mayor.

A CHILD TRIES SUICIDE.

Only Six Years Old and He Tried to Hang Himself.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 3.—Master Mason Woodard, aged 6, son of Asa Woodard, of Central Square, near here, tried to commit suicide. He used a piece of clothesline about eight feet long.

He took the rope and made a slipping noose and put it around his neck. He then climbed up into an apple tree and tied the other rolled end to one of the limbs, but when the rope tightened around his neck he yelled the best he could.

His father heard him, went out and was horrified to find his little one hanging from the limb, with his feet about three feet from the ground. He at once cut him down. The child will recover.

He has not been in good health, and he says he did not commit the act in play or by accident.

PARNELL BEATEN.

Davitt Says the McCarthyites Have a Majority in Sligo.

LONDON, April 3.—Michael Davitt telegraphs that the Parnellites admit defeat, and that the Nationalists expect a majority of about 1,000 in Sligo.

Davitt, whose despatch shows much bitterness against Parnell, asserts that the local Orange lodge supported the Parnellite candidate.

Davitt also asserts that the McCarthyites did not employ any priest as a personation agent, in order not to give ground for the charge of clerical influence.

Davitt is said to be boiling over with rage since his encounter with the Parnellites at Easkey.

Feeling Against Loar.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Pa., April 3.—The feeling was so ugly against Captain Loar in Mount Pleasant, his home, that he left town at the written request of the citizens. His whereabouts are unknown. He was the official who was burned in effigy in Mount Pleasant by the strikers the other night, and it has been frequently said that he was anxious to get revenge. Gangs of strikers searched his residence and stood in front of his office. There is no doubt that if he should return to Mount Pleasant before the excitement blows over they would kill him.

NEW YORK, April 3.—The single-tax men are denouncing Gov. Hill to-day for the letter he sent to their meeting last night. TEN RIOTERS SLAIN

Excitement Over the Deadly Affray in the Coke Region.

THE MILITIA NOW ON THE SCENE

Deputy Sheriffs Arrested for Murder and Promptly Released on Bail.

Conflicting Stories of the Deadly Encounter Told—Great Crowds Going to Mt. Pleasant on Every Train—The Strikers Declare They Will Have Revenge—The Coroner Begins an Investigation.

PITTSBURG, April 3.—Ten strikers were killed and 50 wounded in the attack upon the Standard Works, near Morewood.

The works were defended by a corps of special deputy sheriffs, who were armed with Winchester repeating rifles.

All of the killed and wounded were either Poles, Slavs or Italians.

Thus far the following names among the killed have been ascertained:

The Killed.

Paul Dohannis, Slav, of Standard, single, shot in the head.

Valentine Zeidel, Slav, of Donnelly, single, shot through the neck.

James Brochik, Polish, of Tarrs, single, shot through the right breast.

Jacob Slincaska, Polish, of Tarrs, married, shot through the head.

John Fudora, Polish, of Standard, single, shot through the head.

Antonio Rist, Polish, of Standard, single, shot through the head.

Cresezo Binera, Italian, of Tarrs, shot through the breast.

The latest reports place the number of persons wounded in the riot at 50, three of whom, names unknown, have since died, making a total of 10 deaths.

Conflicting Stories.

Conflicting stories of the encounter are told. The strikers say that it was a cold-blooded massacre; that they were returning from a mass meeting, offered no violence and contemplated none. They were marching along a country road. On the other hand, it is asserted that previous to their arrived at Morewood the same crowd of strikers battered in the telephone office at the Standard plant, cut the telephone wires, and that upon their arrival at Morewood they threw stones through the windows of the company's stores, tried to batter down the gate leading to the stable to which they evidently intended to apply the torch, were twice commanded to halt, each time answering with revolver shots.

THE DEADLY FUSILLADE.

The Guards Were Ordered to Shoot and Quickly Obeyed.

MOUNT PLEASANT, PA., April 3.—"Halt! Advance farther and we fire."

It was the voice of Deputy Sheriff Captain Loar. The reply was a fusilade with guns, revolvers and stones square in the faces of the posse, as the mob pushed on.

"Ready! Take aim! Fire!"

In quick succession the orders were given. The sheriff's men, armed with Winchester rifles, were thoroughly drilled. They worked like a machine. The volley was quickly followed by another.

Seven of the mob fell dead and a score of others wounded. Then the rioters broke and fled. The first blood had been shed in the coke strike. To-day it is feared it will not be the last.

The Excitement Intense.

All over the region the most intense excitement prevails. Great crowds are coming in on every train and the highways are so thickly peopled as to almost resemble a passing procession. It is openly declared by the strikers that they will have revenge for their companions.

THE CORONER TAKES HOLD.

An Investigation Now in Progress at Mt. Pleasant.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Pa., April 3.—Coroner Wakefield arrived here about noon, and after much difficulty in empanelling a jury the inquest was begun. The jury are all reputable citizens, and the impression is that the coroner made an excellent selection.

Robert Weddell said: "Captain Loar gave his command to halt, and as some men started to get on the fence some one else called 'Halt.' Then a Hun said: 'Come on.'"

"Did they go?" asked the coroner.

"They did not have time. The deputies shot. I did not hear Captain Loar give the command to fire, and I was within 10 feet of him. He shot twice. I heard that Mr. Ramsey said he would rather have the works destroyed than a loss of life." The investigation then adjourned until this evening.

THE BROTHERS HANGED.

No Trouble Over the Execution of the Nicely Boys.

SOMERSET, Pa., April 3.—Joseph and David Nicely were hanged in the jail here for the murder of Farmer Umberger.

As the sheriff was about to place the noose around Dave's neck, he asked him if he had anything to say, when the latter replied:

"Only that I hope to be saved, as I have no hard feelings against anyone."

Joe Nicely said: "All that I have to say is for you all to prepare to meet your Maker. You will have to some day or other. I want to say I have no hard feelings for anyone. Good-bye."

The sheriff placed the black caps over their heads and both the boys said, "Good-bye."

"Good-bye," answered the sheriff.

"Good-bye," again came from the brothers, and as the trap sprung the sheriff said, "Good-bye, boys."

A faint murmur came from Dave, and all was over.

The bodies were cut down in about 19 minutes after the trap was sprung, confined and taken in a spring-wagon to the home of their parents.

It has been learned that the Nicely boys were related to the James brothers, the noted Western desperadoes.

As a close student of war operations, Mr. Raili is naturally well acquainted not only with every yard of the ground on which the battle of the Alma was fought, but also with the field positions of the French allies. His special information on the subject helps to set at rest historic points that were called into dispute at the death of the Prince.

Installation of a Pastor.

The Rev. Edward Hale, of Boston, who was installed as pastor of the First Unitarian church at Orange, last evening, is a nephew of Thos. Hale, the veteran ex-editor, of East Fifth street. He was associated for several years with the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D., of Boston, and was a notable figure among the clergymen in that city of culture. He was born at Northampton, Mass., and is the son of Wm. B. Hale, who now lives in Louisa county, Virginia. His family has many distinguished members, and he promises to be one of the most leading lights in his denomination.

At the installation services a large congregation was present. Among the divines who took part were the Rev. Hobart Clark of Plainfield, the Revs. Stephen H. Camp and H. Price Collier of Brooklyn, the Rev. Dr. Francis Greenwood Peabody of Boston, the Rev. Grindall Reynolds of Cambridge, the Rev. Merle St. Croix Wright of Harlem, the Rev. Theodore C. Dr. Dean's Dyspepsia Pills are unquestionably good. They are, in my opinion, all they claim to be. I have tried them and found in them what I needed. I believe they will cure Dyspepsia, and that is saying much for any medicine. I am glad, therefore, to give my testimony.

THE REV. DANIEL F. WARREN, D.D., Rector Holy Trinity, Jersey City Heights.

JERSEY CENTRAL HAS THE MODEL.

Robert Gaston Smith Tells About Steam Transportation and Compares America's Locomotives With England's.

EVEN the rain and snow last night did not prevent the attendance of a good audience at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, to hear the popular talk on "Locomotives" by Robert Gaston Smith, M. E. The lecturer began by telling the ancient methods of transportation by land, and then showed how the expansive force of steam can be utilized. This led up to a brief history of the development of railways and locomotives, in which some interesting facts were stated. The railway had its origin in the coal regions of England, where planks of wood were laid to act as rails, upon which the wheels of the coal carts ran; these may be called the first wooden rails, and were laid in the year 1676. Wooden rails were sheathed with iron in 1738, and the first iron rails, with flanges on the cart wheels, were in 1789. This date may be taken for the first successful railway. The history of the locomotive is of somewhat later date than the railway. The first locomotives were mere models, and not until 1811 was any practical machine made for use on a railway. This locomotive for a short time hauled coal trains from the English mines, and ran with toothed driving wheels on a rack-rail. The first successful locomotive was the "Rocket", built in 1829 by George Stephenson. This is called the "parent locomotive", as it embodied the points which make locomotives a practical success to-day.

Modern American and English locomotives were then compared, and the reasons for their essential points of difference were explained. A model American express engine—such as No. 40 and similar locomotives on the Jersey Central—has four driving wheels five feet eight inches in high, and weighs 50 tons. Its English rival has a single pair of driving wheels eight feet high, and it weighs about 50 tons. A model American freight locomotive weighs 62 tons and has eight driving wheels; the English engine weighs 42 tons and has but six driving wheels. The speed of trains is higher in England than in America, owing to the perfect roadways in the former country. The fastest long distance trains in the world are the "Chicago Limited," which runs 912 miles at the rate of 36.8 miles an hour; the "Royal Blue Line," which runs the 230 miles between Washington and New York, by way of Plainfield, at the speed of 46 miles an hour; and the "Flying Scotchman" in England, from London to Endinburgh, which makes the 393 miles at the rate of 49 miles an hour.

The lecture occupied a full hour. The next popular talk at the Y. M. C. A. rooms will be given Thursday evening, April 16, by James McGee, Esq., on the subject, Business Elements Illustrated by Bible Texts".

Next Thursday evening, the 9th, there will be a reception to members, and to others who may file application before that time.

Aroused by the Smoke Just in Time.

Smouldering cigar stumps in a wooden spittoon in Samuel Snyder's grocery store at 10 West Fourth street started a lively blaze during last night, and at half-past four o'clock this morning Mr. and Mrs. Snyder and others living in the building awoke to find the place filled with suffocating smoke. The fire was extinguished with a few bucketfuls of water, but meanwhile an alarm was sent in from box 13 by night watchman Dunavan, of Boice's coal yard, at the direction of Edward Getti-, one of the occupants of the threatened building. The department turned out, but was promptly given the recall. The hook and ladder truck is undergoing repairs, and an old farm wagon was pressed into service as a ladder carrier. The new alarm was sounded at 4:40, and succeeded in awaking even those who have been scoffing against it.

The fire burned quite a hole in the floor of the store.

Shenandoah.

Bronson Howard's military comedy comes to Music Hall, next Monday evening, with the recommendation of being the only big dramatic success the past season in New York, where it ran for 300 nights. Bronson Howard, who is also the author of "The Henrietta", has in this work achieved the triumph of his career, and he is as proud of it as the public is fond of it. "Shenandoah" is a war play, but it does not burn powder, nor is there at any time the harrowing sight of blood-stained bandages and stretchers. Howard's subject dwells directly with the war, but in its action comedy prevails, the serious element partaking of the nature of that in "The Banker's Daughter" and "Young Mrs. Winthrop". It will be presented here in the same manner as it was presented in New York, where it did the largest business every known.

Torn to Pieces by a Train.

A valuable horse belonging to Geo. A. Hoffman, of Westfield, was instantly killed on the Jersey Central Railroad tracks at Netherwood Monday evening. Mr. Hoffman's colored man was driving a team from Short Hills to Westfield, and was leading, or allowing to follow behind, another horse which Mr. Hoffman had recently purchased. This horse in some way got away from the man, and, wandering off on the track near Netherwood, was struck by a passing train, and literally cut to pieces.

READ WHAT THREE MAYORS SAY.

The Executives of Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Plainfield Indorse the Trolley Railway.

The following expressions of personal opinion from three such unbiased, level-headed men as Mayor Gardner of Cleveland, Mayor Gourley of Pittsburgh and Mayor Gilbert of Plainfield, must at once set at rest all doubt as to the desirability and incalculable benefit of a trolley street railway for Plainfield.

The misrepresentations of other papers are shown beyond question to be falsehoods. It has been published that the service in Cleveland is thoroughly unsatisfactory, the injury to property very great, and fatalities numerous. But read Mayor Gardner's testimony. As to Pittsburgh, it has horse cars, cable cars and trolley cars, and Mayor Gourley was asked "which a city like Plainfield had best adopt?" His letter below, in answer to that question, decides in favor of the identical system that is offered this city. Mayor Gilbert's opinion is copied from the Central Times of March 25.

THE MAYOR OF CLEVELAND SAYS.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.
CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 27, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—In reply to yours of 25th, will say:

First—Our citizens find the electric service a vast improvement over the "back number" horse service. Second—When thoroughly established, and with careful conductors and motor men, I believe there is relatively no more danger than with the horse car lines. Third—Citizens generally prefer the new system. Fourth—Don't know of a death as a direct cause from the current. Fifth—The travel has largely increased. Sixth—The service is on some of our best residential streets, and the tendency has been to build up and improve as well in values. Seventh—We have the "Sprague" (Edison) and "Thomson-Houston". Eighth—Was considerable complaint at first to the overhead system, and one injunction suit. Ninth—Generally the people encourage extensions.

Your friend,
GEORGE H. GARDNER,
Mayor.

THE MAYOR OF PITTSBURGH SAYS.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, PITTSBURGH, H. I. GOURLEY.
PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 31, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—In reply to your letter of the 25th inst., permit me to say the following:

We have in successful operation the Sprague (Edison) system on several of our electric street railways. It has increased the value of property along the line of the road. I would advise your people to adopt the electric railway as it is the cheapest and best, and I am satisfied it will improve your city. Horse car travel is too slow and cable roads are too expensive. Every electric railway in this city has increased its business at least 50 per cent., simply because they go fast and take the people to their destination quickly.

In a few years from now the horse cars will be a thing of the past in this city.

Yours respectfully,
H. I. GOURLEY,
Mayor.

MAYOR GILBERT SAYS.

I have tried to keep neutral ground in this matter. I have no policy of my own. What the people want I want, and I pledge myself to that end. But candor compels me to say something in favor of this road. I felt it was something the people did not want in Plainfield, so I visited Newark, where a similar road is in operation. Candor compels me to say I was agreeably disappointed. It was not hideous, not unsightly, not noisy, not objectionable. The cars were nice, the tracks well laid. In choosing between horse cars and electric cars I most assuredly would select the latter. There are objections to every street car system. I do not think the people of Plainfield would deem the poles of this system objectionable when they get used to them.

Amateur Theatricals and The Captain of the Watch.

The second performance of the Pyramus and Thisbe took place in The Casino last evening. The audience has a cultured and appreciative one. The cast of characters has already been given in these columns. The costumes were by Boutes and the furniture by Packer. The music, by Miss Lavinia L. French, was enjoyable. Her selections included Rubenstein's Kamenoi Ostrow, and his Torchlight dance of the Brides of Cashmere; Gluck's gavotte arranged for Frau Clara Schumann, and Liszt's "Dreams of Love".

The programme of the plays was as follows:

FIRST PLAY.

Amateur Theatricals (in one scene).
Characters Represented.

Walter Raymond.....Mr. Deuse M. VanVliet
Sybil Raymond (his wife)...Mrs. Geo. C. Evans
Bob.....Master West

MUSICAL INTERLUDE.

SECOND PLAY.

The Captain of the Watch, by Planche.
In Two Acts.

Adolf de Courtray.....Mr. Evarts Tracy

Sergeant Lynch Stops a Brutal Fight.

Martin Geagan and Michael Cleary indulged in a free and easy drunken fight in a vacant lot near Grant avenue this noon. Policeman Patrick Lynch responded to a telephone message, and arrested the belligerents. The two men were terribly bruised and cut. They were locked up for trial.

Threw a Chair at His Wife.

Wm. Kinney was intoxicated again last night, and threw a chair at his wife, and otherwise abused her, so that she was compelled to flee to Police Sergeant Patrick Lynch for protection. This morning Judge Codington sent Kinney to jail for 60 days.

It is false! No imitation is as good as the genuine Hires' Root Beer. Some dealers recommend imitations for the larger profit they yield. What a delicious drink Hires' Root Beer. Packages make.

PERTINENT PARAGRAPHS.

NUGGETS OF LOCAL NEWS, WITH GRAINS OF FREE-LANCE COMMENT.

The masticating propensities of the festive Harlem goat have long been the subject of proverb, and from time immemorial the great American humorist has poked fun at that be-horned and be-whiskered plebian quadruped and his extraordinary liking for the gay pictures off bill boards and tomato cans. But who ever would have suspected the aristocratic Plainfield horse of developing an appetite of the same queer sort! It remained for the Paragrapher's distinguished friend, Mr. Bill Foster himself, the William Goat's own patron saint, to discover that the Crescent City possessed a creature of such abnormal taste.

Mr. Foster had for some time been annoyed by the repeated wanton destruction of the works of art which he had hung on the boards in front of the Stillman Music Hall. He attributed the tearing down of the pictured paper to the malicious prankishness of small boys. It was only yesterday that he was undeceived.

While he was pasting up lithographs of the stirring scenes from "Shenandoah", a horse whose daily employment is to haul wagon loads of furniture for Powlinson & Jones, stood near, placidly looking on. When Mr. Foster had completed his work, the horse moved to the board, deliberately ripped off the paper with his teeth, and devoured it with a relish. It was moist with paste, and highly flavored with colored inks and varnish, and it seemed a most toothsome morsel to the horse. Where so refined an animal acquired so depraved a taste Mr. Foster could not imagine, but he very humanely called the attention of the owner of the animal to its eccentric hungering, and warned him that show bills, though never so palatable, were scarcely a wholesome dish, and if persisted in might result ere long in an equine demise. So the paste and poster eating horse is to have his unnatural diet abridged.

Hitherto the Paragrapher never heard of any other animal but the goat to which lithographs were a favorite dish or which would even deign to consider them a worthy and edible morsel in time of necessity when starvation was near. And he never knew of but one goat that made the eating of posters a fine art. That rare exception was a goat of great discernment. Often has the Paragrapher seen that goat, gaunt with famine, pause in front of a rich stand of lithographs, view their printed surface with a critical eye, nod her head in approval of the artistic excellence of the work, heave a blubbering sigh of disappointment for the empty cavern within that yearned for tomato can coverings, shake her horns sorrowfully, and pass on. The noble creature would never destroy anything whose beauty appealed to the finer senses and delighted the eye and the soul. She considered physical hunger a gross and sensual thing, something to be gratified only so far as mere existence demanded; and she would not despoil a fair, sweet picture even if she knew not where else in the wide, wide world to seek a meal. She would ruthlessly consume the lurid lithographs whereon the naughty ballet was depicted; all show bills that were immodest in their subjects and their treatment she would conscientiously put out of sight. Hideous pictures also, she would devour. Nothing that was calculated to arouse base human passions, or give sensitive people a shiver or a downright fright, would she permit to go unscathed and uneaten. But high art, genuine masterpieces, she would merely caress gently with her dry and withered tongue, before beating a reverent retreat. She was a noble art critic and morality censor. Had she been less faithful to duty, and more obedient to the rapacious demands of her capacious internal mechanism, she might be alive to-day. Alas! in her case at least the old saying was true that "the good die young"!

It will be noticed that in speaking of this most worthy and excellent goat the Paragrapher has uniformly used the pronous indicative of feminine gender. It was of course impossible for a creature so virtuous, so self-denying, so philanthropic, so true, to be of any but the gentler sex. Though frail in body, she had not a mental or moral fault. Who shall say so much as that of a man?—and of what man?

***

But if the Paragrapher continue his disquisition on the personal merits of this beloved and departed goatess, he will have no space left for other important matters, and he must regretfully tear his thoughts away from her cherished memory.

While on the subject of appetites, however, it is meet to consider casually the appetite of that genial gentleman and scholarly traveler, Mr. William Grattan, one of the Paragrapher's most conspicuous Plainfield acquaintances.

Mr. Grattan's abilities as a delineator of the superb in fiction are already well known to local newspaper readers. His powers as an absorber of refreshments are not so famous.

William is an eater from Eatontown. He says it, and, in the language of his namesake, that other William, Shakespeare, "What Bill says, goes". Just now Mr. Grattan is emulative of a man in Elizabeth who claims to have disposed of forty-seven raw eggs at one sitting, and who is endeavoring to inscribe himself on the tablets of Epicurean fame as the Champion Hen-Fruit Annihilator. Mr. Grattan says "Pooh!"—he can do better than that. He is ready at any time—he says—to eat from five to ten more eggs than the Annihilator can swallow, no matter what the number be; and between eggs will masticate chopped-up hay till he has eaten a bushel of the fodder. This simple luncheon over, and the Annihilator paralyzed, he will begin—according to his present proposition—a genuine meal by getting away with seventy-two raw oysters, to be followed by roast beef and other hearty things.

Mr. Grattan says he is also great on mince pies. He is ready to open an eating contest as soon as the Annihilator desires and as soon as the Paragrapher and his friends will put up the money to back him. He does not ask any guarantee as to funeral expenses.

The Paragrapher notices that his friend the laboring man continues to be discontented with his lot. The general strike of working-men all over the city Wednesday morning was no April Fool joke. The men are determined in their demand. It is of course all right for an employe to ask for higher wages if he thinks he ought really to have an increase, but he wants to be sure he is not moving a little bit too fast. No good workman living gets paid as much as he earns—be he a wielder of the pick, the plane, the trowel, or the pen. Faithful servants are always doing more than they will ever be repaid. They work hard and zealously for the very love of being trustworthy and loyal. Mere good-will and words of encouragement, praise, and gratitude, of course do not go far towards paying for bread and butter, but the Paragrapher has found that an upright, honest, faithful toiler invariably meets with reward, and has an abundance of both good cheer and earthly necessities. Employers don't as a rule stint worthy men. So the Paragrapher is inclined to deprecate strikes of every kind. Whenever difficulties between those inseparable mighty forces, Labor and Capital, arise, among honest-minded men arbitration can be safely relied upon.

The Paragrapher has this subject very much at heart, for he is a working-man himself; his days of toil sometimes seem wofully long, and remuneration sometimes seems very scanty: but he has found that a serene mind, a clear conscience, and a belief in the honesty and fair-mindedness of his superiors, are a wondrous help in life's struggle; and he has almost invariably found, especially in favored places like Plainfield, Capital ready to help Labor whenever Labor shows himself to be truly deserving of help and ready to help Capital in his turn. Mutual interest cannot but result in mutual aid.

A word of caution to strikers, present and contemplative: Be not too impetuous with your demands; be not too constantly harassing for "more! more!" those who depend on your work for profit, and on whose profit you depend for work. It is only a few brief years ago that the laboring friends of the Paragrapher were imploring that a day's work should be cut down to nine hours; now the masters of the trades are clamoring for only eight, and threaten that in in a month they will strike for the extra hour and for no decrease in pay. Let some of the hot-headed ones enter the professions, whose followers have the white hands which the brawny fellows scoff, and the "soft-snap jobs" which they envy. With the long, aye, ceaseless hours of labor, and the vastly inadequate pay, they would never be content. In every walk in life one can find abundant dissatisfaction, if he seek for it; in every walk of life patience, perseverance and faithfulness will conquer, and secure justice and right, where haste and imprudent antagonism and braggadocio will ever fail.

One thing that Plainfield sadly needs, from the Paragrapher's point of view, is a veto power for its Mayor. As the matter now stands, the office of mayor is a mere figure-head. In other cities the mayoralty is a position of honor and power; here it is a weak and empty name. There is no danger of Plainfield's electing a mayor in whom confidence may not be fully reposed, and an office to which such good men—men of firmness and integrity of character, men of public spirit, men of nobility—are chosen, ought not to be so void of controlling influence. The municipality would be vastly safer and stronger had its mayoralty a share in its government. Plainfield's charter is greatly defective in not bestowing the powers customary in other cities on the highest local official, and if all that the Paragrapher hears is true it is greatly defective on some other points as well. Indeed, there be those who fear that in the legal fight between the city's charter and that of the Plainfield Water Supply Company the courts may tear some big and irremediable holes in the municipal parchment.

The New Jersey Legislature passed a pernicious, unrighteous, un-American law, in the opinion of the Paragrapher, when it adopted the bill providing for the establishment of county excise boards. The supreme right of the people to govern themselves is one of the great principles underlying the Constitution of the United States of America. That right extends down through the States, through the Congressional Districts, through the counties, into the cities. A city has a right to control its own license system, as applied generally to all businesses, but as applied particularly to the liquor traffic. If the people choose to have either free rum or high license in their own community, that is their lookout. Plainfield, for instance, has established for itself a liquor license fee of $700, and refuses license to certain applicants who are notorious for the character of the places they have kept before, and whom no decent people in the city wish to have licensed. Yet along comes the county excise board, exercising its own sweet will, cutting down the license fee to $250, granting licenses to parties who locally are decidedly objectionable, and revoking, for its own private reasons, licenses already granted to respectable, law-abiding dealers.

Editor McBride, of The Elizabeth Journal, has given much attention to the matter, and says that he has no doubt the Union county board will cut down fees and otherwise manipulate license matters in Plainfield, in direct opposition to the the wishes of the Plainfield citizens.

Down at Egg Harbor—he adds—an election was held last week at which the issue was high license against the minimum fee of the Werts law. Every high license man was elected by a big majority. But the county excise board can step in and put the fee exactly where the people voted it should not be. And the same thing may occur at Asbury Park. The city authorities may refuse to license at all, and the county excise commissioner may license every petitioner.

All this demonstrates just what the Paragrapher said at the outset: The bill for the establishment of county excise boards is unrighteous and pernicious, and ought to be speedily throttled by an indignant and outraged State. In the passage of that act the legislators misrepresented the people who elected them, and cast a black shadow over such really good work as they accomplished.

Upholders of the bill claim that such a law was necessary to protect the liquor dealers from the prohibitory license fee of $1,500 that certain parties had already promised should prevail in Plainfield next year. The Paragrapher has only to remark that those who threatened such a tremendeuous increase in the fee have not as yet the power to fulfill their pledge, and never will have that power unless the people desire. In these matters the people's will ought to be the law.

***

The Paragrapher is always glad to note any event of progress, and is therefore happy to record the fact that Alert Hose Company is to have a new hose wagon. The old-fashioned cart is to be put aside, and a vehicle of the improved modern pattern which the big cities have adopted is to be purchased. The company have been deliberating over the matter some time, and decided Wednesday night to make the purchase. The cost will be about $500. The wagon will be a beauty. It will be ordered immediately, and will be completed in about six weeks. The Paragrapher compliments the company on its public spirit and enterprise. Alert is a fitting name for the boys.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills, evangelist, succeeded, during his recent revival meetings in Bloomfield, in closing liquor saloons as well as manufactories and other places of business, on his "mid-week Sabbath". The only regretable incident of the great Mills revival in Plainfield, was the failure of the attempt to secure similar recognition from the saloon-keepers here.

The Paragrapher remembers with pleasure how faithfully Mrs. Taylor and the Rev. Mr. Goodrich worked, and how courteously and kindly all but one of the saloon men received the modest request of the woman and the clergyman. He recalls with pain the curt and insolent treatment accorded by that one exception. All the others were willing to close their places; that one was selfish and obstinate, and by his keeping open kept all the others open too. Such is the force of example, and such is the power of one ungenerous, mean and mercenary decision in effacing a dozen manly impulses and in destroying every vestige of the good work wrought among the selfish one's associates.

NATHANIEL FAIRFIELD.

Bosses Refuse to Yield.

No change is reported in the strike of the local masons and hod-carriers, carpenters and joiners in this city. The bosses to-day gave their reply to the demands of the men. They declined positively to consider them and said that granting such terms at this time would be ruinous.

One builder is quoted as saying that "There never was so much competition between builders in Plainfield as there is now. There is a great deal of building, but it is all owing to the close competition and consequent reductions in the bids. If we were to yield to the demands of the men it would mean ruin to several firms. Our margin is so small that this item in wages is of great importance to us."

The men, on the other hand, have made up their minds to stand firm. The stormy weather during the past winte has reduced materially the number of working days, and as a result they say they have earned much less. This seems to have as much to do with their present determination to stick fast to the strike as anything.

THE CHILDREN'S health must not be neglected. Cold in the head causes catarrh. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into the nostrils. The worst cases yielding to it. Price 50c.

ONE of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

LA GRIPPE MAY BE CONQUERED.

The Discovery of a Remedy for the Debilitation that Follows the Epidemic.

The medical and scientific authorities on both sides the Atlantic have been unavailingly searching for a remedial agent for the epidemic influenza so widely prevalent just now. It was hinted recently that Lorenz Reich's Hungarian Tokayer Ausbruch was the long-sought and desired remedy. An investigation of the report was immediately started, the results of which are reported below:

A physician of long and widely extended practice is Dr. Edward Bradley of 19 West Thirtieth street. Dr. Bradley talked freely and heartily about the Tokayer Ausbruch. "In all my experience and practice," said he, "extending over thirty-two years, I have been very careful about publicly recommending any article whatever, no matter how excellent I might think it was myself. I tell you this in order to let you know how high an opinion I have of Reich's brand of Tokay in all cases, but especially in such as you have indicated. Grip and pneumonia are always preceded by nervous debility, the system being generally run down. The trouble is that the patient never visits a physician until the last moment. If a tonic were taken at an early period, in nine cases out of ten the disease would be warded off, and there is in no tonic in the world which I would sooner recommend than Reich's Tokayer."

Dr. R. E. Marcy of 36 Fifth avenue, the late A. T. Stewart's physician, and an old-time practitioner, said he had used many brands of Tokay, but had no hesitation in saying that in all cases of debility or convalescense there was none equal to Mr. Reich's. "It is," said he, one of the best things in the world to prevent an attack of the Grip. One of its greatest recommendations in the profession is its purity and high quality. Whenever a physician prescribes it to a patient he is confident that he is prescribing an unadulterated article."

Dr. Nathan Bozeman of 9 West Thirty-first street, cordially seconded the statements of Dr. Marcy.

Dr. Alfred K. Hills of 465 Fifth avenue, the author of "The Therapeutic Use of Alcohol," said: "I have used Lorenz Reich's Tokayer for fifteen years with confidence because I have analyzed it and proved it pure, and therefore superior. The recent grip epidemic particularly took hold of persons whose systems had become debilited and, who needed just such a tonic. It certainly does promote recovery in cases of convalescence and nervous or physical prostration."

Dr. H. Marion Sims, the noted female specialist, was visited at 267 Madison avenue. This physician observed at the outset that he had used Lorenz Reich's Tokayer Ausbruch almost ever since he commenced practice, and had found it an invaluable tonic. "My patients in cases of debility and convalescence can take and assimilate it as they can do nothing else. Moreover, I know it to be pure."

Dr. Edward S. Peck, of 53, West 50th street, said: "In all the cases of grip which have come under my notice, a good tonic would have prevented and did prevent the disease in its incipient state. Members of my own family have been thus taken down, and I have let them drink Reich's Tokayer moderately, and in a week their systems had become toned to such an extent that the influenza gained no further progress. I don't regard it as a medicine, but as a tonic, and the most efficacious one I know of."

Dr. Hammond, the nerve specialist, pronounced Lorenz Reich's Tokayer Ausbruch "a wonderful tonic and an undoubted preventive of such diseases as are brought on by low physical pressure."

Equally fervent in their endorsement of this wine were Dr. George E. Belcher, 522 Madison avenue, Dr. Louis F. Bass, 56 West Thirty-ninth street, Dr. Fordyce Barker of 24 East Thirty-eighth street, Dr. Wm. Tod Helmuth of 180 West Fifty-ninth street, Dr. T. H. Burchard of 24 West Fortieth street, Dr. J. W. Wright, 52 West Nineteenth street, Dr. Alexander J. C. Skene of Brooklyn, and Professor Alfred L. Loomis.

In making further investigations it was learned incidentally that Mr. Cyrus W. Field had recently recovered by the use of this wine from severe debility brought about by the grip, and that another prompt recovery due to its use was in the case of Mrs. R. B. Cable of Chicago, wife of the well-known railroad man. Before closing the inquiries Mr. Reich was called upon at his office, the Cambridge Hotel, corner Thirty-third street and Fifth avenue, but that gentleman modestly refused to say anything except that physicians generally knew what they talked about.—New York Press.

The Fatal Toy Pistol.

Little Willer Klemps of Scotch Plains, played with a cheap pistol Wednesday night and now lies in a dangerous condition at his father's house. In company with some of his small schoolmates he went into the lot back of the schoolhouse to try the weapon. Three or four efforts were made to shoot off the pistol, and then Willie looked down the muzzle. A loud explosion followed, and the bullet tore through the lad's neck, barely missing the jugular vein. The physician says there is danger of lock-jaw.

AUNT CLARA'S DOLLY.

She Left Her as a Legacy to Her Two Orphaned Nieces.

SISTER MOLLIE and I were orphans. We lived in the town of Sheldon, in middle Tennessee. Father died in the spring of 1856; mother followed him a month later, and then Mollie and I were alone in the world. Father had been a minister and of course died poor. All of our possessions consisted of a small house and about an acre of ground in Sheldon, but the long period of ill health of our parents, together with the funeral expenses, had put a three hundred dollar mortgage on the property, so we could hardly say the roof that covered us was our own.

Mollie was but sixteen; I was four years her senior. Being well educated, I succeeded in getting the public school in our town, and though the pay was small we managed to live on it. Mollie I was determined should keep at her studies for a year or two more. Somehow we couldn't save a cent to pay on that mortgage, and it kept growing larger all the while. One day John Easton, the man who held it, came over. I had just returned from school. He said:

"Miss Anice, I thought I'd call and tell you I can't carry that mortgage any longer. I need the money. It was due last fall, but I thought I'd let it run as long as I could, but I must have the money the 1st of October or I shall have to foreclose, which I should mightily hate to do. Times have been so hard with me the last year or two that I must have it. The interest added to the mortgage will swell the amount to $420 October 1."

Now, I couldn't see for the life of me how we were ever going to pay that money. It seemed that we must lose our home, and that night I told Mollie all about it.

"Well, Anice," said she, "I'll have to quit school and go to work."

"Yes," said I, "but what work could you get by which we could save money enough to pay that mortgage by October 1? I can't see any object in your stopping your studies. We'll have to let the old home go, if go it must. Perhaps we can rent it of the party who buys it."

Of course we had a crying spell over the prospect before us. We had been born under that roof, and it seemed sad indeed to have it pass into other hands. The next evening when I came home from school I found a letter there that Mollie had brought from the office. It was from Aunt Clara in Nashville. She was the only relative we had on on earth, to my knowledge. She was my father's old maid sister, and had lived in Nashville all her life. Now she was an old, old woman. She had visited us once or twice while father was alive. The letter read:

"DEAR NIECE: I am dying. Come at once and bring Mollie. CLARA EVANS."

I managed to scrape money enough together to pay our way to Nashville. We found Aunt Clara in a humble cottage near the depot. She was evidently near death's door. Poor old soul! She had been for years an invalid, it seemed, and all the money she had laid by in her youth her later years had found use for. She lived alone in the cottage with Aunt Dolly, an old rheumatic negress whom she had bought twenty-five years before. When Aunt Clara was a younger woman Dolly had belonged to a Mrs. Bacon, with whom Aunt Clara boarded. Mrs. Bacon died suddenly and everything she had was sold at auction. Dolly had become attached to my aunt, and begged so hard that she buy her that my aunt actually paid the last dollar she had in the world for her. Then she rented the cottage, and there my aunt and Dolly had lived for twenty-five years, and grown old to gether as mistress and slave. But very little Dolly knew about slavery. I guess it would have been hard to have told which was mistress in the cottage. Aunt taught in the public schools for a number of years, and Dolly cooked, took care of the cottage and sold hot coffee, sandwiches, pies, cakes and apples at the depot. Her round, black face had been a familiar sight there for many years. My aunt's health had been such that she had ceased teaching fully ten years before and Dolly had proved the prop of her declining years. Aunt Dolly met us at the door.

AUNT DOLLY MET US AT THE DOOR.

"Bress your souls, honeys! Is you de nieces ob my ole missus? You ain' come none too soon. She mose gone to de Hebbenly sho'." Tears were rolling down Aunt Dolly's cheeks. She took us directly to Aunt Clara's bedside.

"Anice—Mollie," said my aunt, who lay propped up in bed, "I thank the Lord that He has permitted me to live to see you once more, though but to say farewell. Dolly has my will. I have left you everything I had, though, my dears, that is but little. For years I have been an invalid. There are some railroad shares which are worth nothing now, but in time they may be. The greatest treasure I leave you is my faithful Dolly. Be good to her and take care of her as she has taken care of me in my old age."

The next day Aunt Clara quietly passed away. Mollie and I had seen her but two or three times. We grieved over her death, but our grief was nothing in comparison with the grief of poor, heartbroken Aunt Dolly. I shall never forget how poor Dolly sunk on her knees at the bedside: "Mars' Jesus, is you got my missus? I know you is, for dar ain' no mo' like her. Han' you gwine tak black Dolly 'long, too? Won' she need me ober dar? Please, Jesus, take Dolly 'long?"

She was inconsolable. The second day after aunt's death we laid her at rest in the cemetery at Nashville. Her will, as she said, put us in possession of her all, which consisted of the furniture in the cottage, the worthless railroad bonds, $134 in money and poor old Aunt Dolly. Dolly didn't want to leave Nashville, but we thought it best to take her away for a time. So we persuaded her to pack what she would need in a trunk of her old mistress, and told her she could come back in the fall if she wished. So we went back to our home in Sheldon and left the cottage locked up. I resumed my school and Mollie her studies. I had taken most of the $134 aunt left to pay the funeral expenses and get us back to Sheldon. Aunt Dolly assumed care of the house and the first thing I knew she was hobbling down to the Sheldon depot two or three times a day with a huge basket of sandwiches, cake, pies and coffee. She never asked me for any money, and I thought she must make enough to buy the material, but when at the end of the month I went to the grocer and butcher to pay our bill he said: "You don't owe anything. Aunt Dolly has paid it all."

I was surprised, for we had lived better than ever before. Dolly was a splendid cook. She was always talking of old missis. I often saw her stop cooking, go to her trunk, take out a photograph of Aunt Clara, and talk to it as though Aunt Clara was there in person.

"NOW, HONEY, IT'S YOURS."

Time wore on till the 1st of October arrived. The mortgage was foreclosed, and the next day our home was to be sold at auction. That night after supper Mollie and I were sitting in the front parlor crying when Aunt Dolly came in.

"Dar now, you chillen, I knowed suthin' was de matter. What is it, honeys? Tell ole Dolly."

So I told her all about it.

"Four hundred and twenty dollars! Dat's a heap, ain't it, honey?"

"Yes, Aunt Dolly, it's a great deal when we need it and have nothing."

"Hole on a minute, honey," and she went hobbling out. Pretty soon she came back carrying a bundle in her arms. She kneeled down on the carpet and unrolled it till she came to two of her old missis' stockings, filled with something and tied at the top. She untied them and emptied on the floor to our astonished gaze a shining heap of gold and silver coin.

"'Twas all saved from sellin' dem sandwiches, an' cakes, an' pies, an' coffee, an' apples fer de pas' twenty-five years. 'Twus all fer ole missis when-ever she need it. But she neber need it now," and the tears started from dear old Dolly's eyes. "Now, honey, it's yours. Is dar enough?"

"Oh, Dolly!" we both exclaimed, "we can't take your money."

"Hush, chillen, hush. Isn' I belong to you?"

"No, no, Aunt Dolly," and we were both crying harder than before, "we belong to you." And somehow we got mixed up and our arms were around Aunt Dolly's neck.

"Well, count dem, honey, count dem." And we counted out $1,280. There were coins there that had not seen the light of day for twenty-five years. The next day we paid off the mortgage. Shortly after Dolly wished to go back and visit the cottage, and we locked our house and returned to Nashville. The Sunday after we arrived there we three visited the cemetery. Aunt Dolly sunk on her knees by the side of her old missis' grave and bowed her head on the green sod that covered it.

"Here's Dolly, ole missis; here's Dolly. Mars' Jesus, won't you take me 'long?"

We heard a few sobs, but did not disturb her till we thought it was time to go. I put my hand on her shoulder.

"Aunt Dolly, dear Aunt Dolly." She did not hear me. Jesus had taken her along, too. We laid her at rest beside her mistress. At her head is a marble slab on which is inscribed:

"Aunt Dolly.
Faithful and True."

The next year our railroad shares brought us $6,000. We often visit the grave of Aunt Clara and dear old Dolly, and it's hard to tell over which grave the tears flow most freely.—E. E. Scott, in Chicago News.

—Waiter (to Blossom, who has just wiped his knife and fork on a napkin) —"You appear to be very particular, sir." Blossom—"A person has to be particular in a restaurant." Waiter—"What shall I bring you, sir?" Blossom—"A plate of hash."—Epoch.

OLIVE OIL LAMPS

They Are Artistic and Quite a Fad Among a Certain Class.

The lamp shown in the engraving was recently purchased in the Mercato Vecchio at Florence. These lamps are used not only in Tuscany, but in many of the other provinces of Italy, and form an article of commerce not only for actual use, but, being so artistic, large numbers are sold annually to European travelers as souvenirs. They are quite inexpensive, considering the amount of material and the work upon them, the larger ones costing only $1.35 complete, while small ones may be purchased for 75 cents. They show an amount of hand work which is seldom seen in American goods of the same class. These lamps are made in several different designs and with one, two, three, or even four beaks. The lamp illustrated is 22 inches high and is made throughout of cast brass, with the exception of the extra oil carrier, which is of copper. Every lamp is provided with a pair of snuffers, an extinguisher, and an instrument for picking the wick. These three articles are suspended from the lamp with brass chains having brazed links. The lamp font is tinned on the inside to prevent corrosion, and is arranged to slide up or down the rod. The wicks, which are of wool, pass through small brass tubes inserted loosely in the beaks. The supply of oil contained in the font being limited, the small oil reservoir holding a charge of oil is suspended from the lamp. The olive oil, which is very cheap, costing only 8 to 10 soldi (8 to 10 cents) the liter, is manufactured from small olives or those unfit for eating. These lamps give a soft, pleasant light.—Scientific American.

OLIVE OIL LAMP.

GARNITURE FOR LAMPS.

To Be in the Swim It Must Be Changed at Least Once a Year.

To be distinctly fashionable you must change the garniture of your lamp at least once a year; for these pretty fluffy things follow the mode as much as milady and adopt, in a way, the fashion of the day as far as a lamp shade can. This year, for instance, the high ruches and stiff collars are also reproduced on the shades, while the plain skirts and ruched out flounces are also copied. The shirrings and fine plaitings, so much in vogue a year ago, are quite out. Here is a sketch of the last favorite, and a pretty thing it is, made out of pink silk and an abundance of soft lace about two inches in depth. The nickel plated wire frames are umbrella shaped, and a clever woman can easily learn to cover them herself. "I change my shade rather often just for the sake of variety," said the owner of a charming room, the other day, "and I always feel as if I were dressing a doll; the children call it 'Lady Betty' and I assure you it is quite a character."—N. Y. Tribune.

DAINTY TRAY CLOTH.

One Especially Designed for Use in an Invalid's Chamber.

Tray cloths are so popular and so numerous that it is not necessary to speak a good word for them or call attention to their beauty or utility. The one herewith illustrated is much like many of them—made of twilled linen, fine and soft, yet heavy enough to stay in place well, is fringed and has a cross-cornered border of drawn work. But in the upper left-hand corner the first line of:

A DAINTY TRAY CLOTH.

"Just a tiny bit,
There is no more."

is embroidered in outline stitch, and in the lower right hand corner the remainder is placed; the sketch shows how the words are arranged and ornamented by rustic branches.

This cloth was designed especially for an invalid, and was measured to fit her own tray, which was large enough to hold all required for a meal in the sick-room. Those who have "been there" can judge of her pleased surprise when she first saw the inscription—in cheerful red letters among the brown branches—peeping up at her from either side of a dainty bit of game and toast. It was not used at all times; only when failing appetite called for a bit of delicate cookery was this brought forth to add zest to the meal; therefore, it never failed to please. A spray of forget-me-nots instead of branches would be dainty and suggestive; if worked in blue, with wash stitching silk, olive would be pretty for the stems, scant foliage and letters.—American Agriculturist.

Spelling a Horse.

Buyer—Lookee here, you! You said this horse was sound and kind and free from tricks. The first day I drove him he balked a dozen times, and he's as bad to-day.

Dealer—Um—you've been wondering if I cheated you, maybe?

"Yes, I have."

"And the first time you druv the hoss you sort o' wondered if he hadn't some tricks, didn't you?"

"Of course."

"And you kept saying to yourself, 'I wonder if that there hoss will balk maybe?'"

"Probably."

"And you had your mind on it a good deal, most like?"

"That's true."

"That's wot's the matter. You've hypnotized him. See?"—N. Y. Weekly.

Just One Obstacle.

"Believe me, George dear, the fact that you are not wealthy makes no difference in my love for you," she said. "I love you for yourself alone. I would choose love in a cottage rather than a union without affection in a costly mansion."

"Darling," he said, "I am glad to hear you speak thus. There is now but one obstacle to prevent our marriage."

"And what is that?" she asked.

"I can't raise half enough money to get a cottage."—Boston Herald.

Expense No Object.

A woman who is not unknown in fashionable society, where she reigns by right of riches over a little queendom of loyal admirers and admiresses, had an affection of the throat, but was not too ill to see her physician. After making an examination he said: "Madam, I shall have to touch two or three of the affected spots with nitrate of silver."

"Oh, doctor, please don't do that," she said. "Use nitrate of gold; the expense is immaterial."—San Francisco Examiner.

What Killed Him.

A typographical error is thus accounted for by the Whiteside Herald:

Compositor—That new reporter spells "victuals" "v-i-t-a-l-s."

Foreman—Yes, he's fresh. Make it right, and put the item in here. We must get to press in just three minutes.

The item was put in place, and this is the way the public read it:

"The verdict of the coroner's jury was that the deceased came to his death from the effects of a gunshot wound in his victuals."

A Diabolical Instinction.

First Ballet Girl—You wear lots of jewelry now, Mamie.

Second Ballet Girl—All the jewelry I wear has been in my family for years. They all belong to some member of my family.

First Ballet Girl—Is that so? Then I suppose that old Wall street broker who is so attentive to you, and from whom you got that bracelet, is your son?—Texas Siftings.

Not Used in a Commercial Sense.

Daughter—George said last night that he was stuck on me.

Father (with a frown)—What did the rascal mean by that?

Daughter—That he was very fond of me.

Father (evidently relieved)—Oh, I didn't know but George was throwing out hints that he was getting sick of his bargain.—West Shore.

THE DUEL.

What He Most Needed.

Uncle Charles—And are you going to buy me something for my birthday?

Millie—Yeth, thir, I gueth tho.

"Please may I know?"

"Yeth, thir. I'm going to buy my dear Uncle Charlie a missionary."

"A missionary! I am no cannibal."

"No; but grandma thays you are a puffeck heathen."—Old Homestead.

Inappropriate.

Peddler—Madam, I have some very fine mottoes for the house.

Woman—What have you got?

Peddler—Here's a beautiful one: "If you don't see what you want, ask for it." How's that for the dining-room?

Woman—It's no good for me, young man. This is a boarding house.—Muncey's Weekly.

Cause for Its Rejection.

First Editor—Are you going to print that joke about the fellow's face being cut by the barber?

Second Editor—No.

First Editor—Why not?

Second Editor—It's a hackneyed subject.—Boston Herald.

A Good Weight Anyhow.

Mrs. Cubbage—Do you know the Mr. Hunter that Miss Cora is engaged to?

Cubbage—Yes.

Mrs. Cubbage—Is he a good man?

Cubbage—Yes, indeed. He weighs two hundred and fifty pounds.—Judge.

Wanted to Move.

Widow Case—So, straightening the state line throws my land into Virginia, does it? Well, I'm powerful glad to get out of Callina—it's a mighty unhealthy State, and a body naturally hates to live forever in the same place.—Puck.

NO LIME IN

Royal Baking Powder

The ROYAL BAKING POWDER is made from Cream of Tartar specially refined and prepared for its use by patent processes by which the Tartrate of Lime is totally eliminated.

This highly important result has been attained only with great care, labor and expense. In money alone a half a million dollars has been invested in patents, machinery and appliances by which the crude Cream of Tartar, being procured direct from the wine districts of Europe, and subjected in this country to these exclusive processes, is rendered entirely free, not only from the objectionable Tartrate of Lime, but from other foreign substances.

This adds greatly to the cost of manufacturing ROYAL BAKING POWDER; but, as all its other ingredients are selected and prepared with the same precise care, and regardless of labor or expense, an article is produced that is entirely free from any extraneous substance, and pure in all respects. The ROYAL contains no ingredients except those certified by the most eminent chemists necessary to make a pure, wholesome and perfect Baking Powder.

It costs more to manufacture the Royal Baking Powder than any other; but it is, as shown by chemical analysis, the only "absolutely pure" Baking Powder made.

HIS LIFE IN DANGER

Detective O'Malley Surrenders in New Orleans.

PROMPTLY RELEASED ON BAIL.

He Displays Great Coolness and Parades Through the City Alone.

The Vigilance Committee Hold a Meeting and Discuss the Notorious Detective's Return—Several Members Wanted to Hang Him to a Lamp Post—It Was Decided to Let the Law Take Its Course.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 4.—Dominick C. O'Malley, the notorious detective, who was charged with having attempted to pack the jury in the Hennessey case, created a sensation during the morning by surrendering himself.

He drove to to the Criminal Court with his attorney and James Barry and gave himself up to Chief Deputy Sheriff Arnoult. His bail was fixed at $3,000 and Mr. Barry signed the bond.

O'Malley looks well, though rather pale. He says he will make a public statement. He would not tell whether he left the city or not. Barry says he has been here all the time.

On leaving the court room O'Malley walked alone down Camp street, stopping here and there to chat with acquaintances, and wound up at a pool room on Gravier street, where he mingled with the crowd.

He was the observed of all, and watched the odds being placed on blackboards.

The Daily States, the editor of which is a member of the Committee of Safety, in a leading editorial, says O'Malley has surrendered to the law officers. He must be accorded a fair trial, and not a hair of his head must be touched save by the hands of the law. The righteous vengeance of the people was finished on March 14, and the State now demands for him an open trial in the courts.

His appearance alone on the streets today is thought by all to be a very plucky performance.

There are rumors that the State's utterances will not bind the committee and that O'Malley will yet be captured and hung up, as the committee gave him orders never to return to New Orleans.

If these rumors be correct, lively times may be looked for.

One thing is certain, O'Malley will not give up life without hurting somebody.

The committee of safety met during the afternoon to discuss O'Malley's return. The attendance was not as large as usual.

After considerable discussion it was resolved to delay action until after O'Malley had his trial before the court, but if the court failed to convict, then to act.

Stephani Convicted.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The jury in the case of Alphonse J. Stephani, who has been on trial for some time past for the murder of Clinton G. Reynolds, last night returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree. Sentence was deferred.

Buried Under a Snow Slide.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 4.—At St. Anthony's, N. F., yesterday an avalanche of snow swept down from a high cliff and buried under its enormous weight the residence of Levi Andrews, instantly killing Mrs. Andrews, a daughter and son.

The Trouble Over in Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 4.—There is nothing new in the clothing situation. Nearly all the factories are running with their full complement of hands. Hughes, Westbrook and Wright are still in the city.

PARNELL'S STRENGTH.

Gladstone Surprised Over the Irish Leader's Vote in Sligo.

LONDON, April 4.—The result of the election at Sligo has not been received with satisfaction by the Liberal leaders. Mr. Gladstone is said to be surprised as well as disappointed by the strength which Parnell has shown, in face of the united efforts of the English Liberal party, the Irish hierarchy and the new National Federation.

Parnell is acknowledged now to be the representative of a formidable minority, which, while not strong enough to have its own way, is too strong to be treated with anything like indifference.

A leading Liberal M. P. said that the majority was 1,000 short of being decisive. "Nothing could show," said he, "more strikingly the wonderful influence of Parnell than the fact that, almost single handed, with most of his abler lieutenants absent from the country, and with the terrible weight of the O'Shea divorce upon him, he should be able to poll such a vote against a popular resident of Sligo with a candidate almost unknown in Sligo, and against other united interests, making a combination to all appearances more powerful than any ever before arrayed in an Irish election."

The Sligo election has not tended to restore Liberal enthusiasm for home rule, and the general sentiment seems to be to make home rule a secondary issue in English Liberal politics.

Austria Will Not Make Trouble.

VIENNA, April 4.—Very little interest has been aroused here by the reported slaughter in America of a number of Huns and Galician Poles. The emigration of that kind is from the lowest dregs of the empire, and the Austrian government is the most aristocratic in Europe, even the electors being mostly of a substantial and superior class. No official utterance has been given on the subject, but it is stated on usually well-informed authority that there would not be an official inquiry into the matter.

Hearty Welcome for Ex-Gov. Waller.

LONDON, April 4.—The news that ex-Gov. Thomas Waller of Connecticut, who preceded Mr. John C. New as Consul-General here, is coming to London to open a bureau of information for the guidance of people who propose to become exhibitors at the World's Fair at Chicago, or to visit the exposition, is very gratifying to many of the old friends of Mr Waller in this city. He is sure of a hearty welcome and all the assistance possible.

A Commission for Prince Louis Bonaparte.

ROME, April 4.—Prince Louis Bonaparte, the second son of the recently deceased Prince Napoleon, has been tendered a commission in the Italian army by King Humbert, but Prince Louis has been informed of the Czar's desire that he should not resign his colonelcy commission in the Russian army. The annual allowance of Prince Victor has been doubled by the ex-Empress Eugenie, thus giving him an income of four thousand pounds.

Ten Killed in a Colliery.

LONDON, April 4.—An alarming colliery explosion occurred at Spedale, North Staffordshire, early in the morning, resulting in the killing of ten miners. The accident is attributed to the presences of fire damp which was ignited through the carelessness of some one of the miners.

Why Attorney-General Martin Resigned.

WINNIPEG, Man., April 4.—Attorney-General Martin has resigned. He gives several reasons, one being the people's ingratitude. The real reason is that it was determined three weeks ago to dispose of him. He will be succeeded by Clifford Sifton.

THE FLURRY IS OVER

All Interest Now Centres in Blaine's Reply to Rudini.

HAPPY SETTLEMENT EXPECTED

The Next Congress Will Decide About Italy's Indemnity Claim.

Attorney-General Miller Hears from New Orleans—The War Department Discovers that Indians Will Not Enlist—A French Count Coming on a Special Mission—Ezeta President for Four Years.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The communication which Premier Rudini sent to Secretary Blaine through the Marquis Imperiali, "in charge of the current business" of the Italian Legation, has brought the excitement over the recall of Baron Fava to an end, at least for the present.

Discussion of the affair has almost ceased, and will not be renewed until Secretary Blaine makes public the letter of Premier Rudini, together with his reply.

Mr. Blaine is busy preparing his answer to the Italian Premier, but feeling that there is no cause for haste he has determined not to make the documents public for the present. The Cabinet members discussed the matter for an hour, but merely in an informal manner. Mr. Blaine read to them the letter of the Italian Premier, and congratulations were offered on the prospect of a happy settlement of the controversy in a manner entirely satisfactory to the United States.

HOW IT WILL END.

The Next Congress Will Settle With the Italian Government.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The outcome of the whole Italian trouble will be that an immense amount of diplomatic correspondence will ensue, the form being as follows: The district-attorney's report will be forwarded to the Marquis Rudini, with the statement that this is all the State of Louisiana can do in the matter.

Rudini will probably deplore the failure of the prosecution to effect more than it has done, for no one believes here that the leaders will be punished, and he will add that, as it is impossible for the national government to do anything more than it has done in the matter, the Italian government must accept the results but as to the matter of indemnity, the principle of which Mr. Blaine has admitted, that is a matter which is the affair of the national government, and, therefore, he (Rudini) will be justified in demanding it in the case of the three or four killed, who, according to the investigation, were Italian citizens.

Mr. Blaine's course will then be to acknowledge the receipt of the letter and promise to lay the matter before Congress, explaining that this is the only course which he can take in the matter. Then Premier Rudini will send a Minister to this country to watch the course of events in Congress. It is not likely to be Baron Fava, and no doubt the man is already selected.

By this course the friendly and diplomatic relations between the countries will be restored.

INDIANS WILL NOT ENLIST.

The War Department Cannot Induce the Redskins to Become Soldiers.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The news received at the War Department of the result of the efforts being made by Western army officers to carry out the provisions of the Army Appropriation bill authorizing the enlistment in the regular army of 2,000 Indian recruits is very discouraging.

The officials report that the Indians will not enlist in the infantry under any circumstances, as they abhor walking. They will not enlist in the cavalry except as scouts, because they do not care to bind themselves to five years' service nor to be subject to removal to distant parts of the country. Then, too, they want their women with them, and the great majority of the bucks are unfit for military service, physically.

It is doubtful if a single Indian company can be recruited in the West.

Baron Fava's Illness.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Inquiry at Baron Fava's residence as to whether the Baron would leave for New York in order to sail for Italy to-morrow, was answered by the statement that he was ill. The servant at the door would take no cards to the Baron and could not or would not say how ill the Baron was, or answer any questions about his preparations for departure for New York. It may be stated positively, however, that he will not sail for Europe to-morrow.

Real Inquiry at New Orleans.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Attorney-General Miller has received a telegram from the United States District-Attorney at New Orleans saying that he is now engaged in the investigatigation of the recent killing of Italians in the city jail, in accordance with instructions from Washington, and will prepare and forward his report to the Attorney-General as promptly as possible.

On a Special Mission.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—At the request of the Secretary of State, the Collector of Customs at New York has been instructed to facilitate the prompt passage of the baggage and personal effects of Count Emile de Keratry of France, who is expected to arrive at New York per La Gascogne, due April 10. The Count is on a "special mission."

Ezeta President for Four Years.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The National Congress of Salvador has counted the election returns and finds that President Ezeta, who obtained control of the government by revolution, has been almost unanimously elected for the term of four years. His brother, Antonio Ezeta, was elected Vice-President.

DESTINED FOR AMERICA.

Germany Having Trouble With Filthy Emigrants Who Are Coming Here.

BERLIN, April 4.—A careful quarantine has been established on the German frontier of Posen to keep out Russian Jews afflicted with the "Russian itch" and other disorders believed to be contagious from coming into Germany.

It is stated that several cases of leprosy have been discovered among the would-be emigrants, and these were, of course, immediately turned back.

It is said that the filthy habits of many of the emigrants are a new revelation to Germans. They do not seem to know what cleanliness is, and the conditions brought to light by the investigations of the quarantine officers are especially shocking. Where emigrants are allowed to pass the frontier a thorough physical cleansing is generally insisted upon.

Most of them are said to be destined for America.

LAND LEAGUE MEETING.

The Executive Council to Take Action in Regard to Endorsing Parnell.

ST LOUIS, April 4.—Dr. Thos. O'Reilly, a member of the Executive Council of the Irish National League, has received a letter from President Fitzgerald announcing that he has called a meeting of the Executive Council to be held in Cincinnati on Monday, to discuss the question and take action in regard to endorsing Mr. Parnell.

Dr. O'Reilly says President Fitzgerald will meet with opposition in the council as most of its members are adverse to Parnell, and he advises all friends of Ireland not to contribute a dollar to the Parnellites.

THEIR MOTHER CRAZY.

Old Mrs. Nicely a Raving Maniac Since Her Sons Were Executed.

GREENSBURG, Pa. April 4.—The bodies of the Nicely brothers, who were executed at Somerset, on their arrival at Ligonier were taken from the coffins and placed in more expensive caskets, ordered by their father.

There were no persons present except their families, who showed in paroxysms of grief how keenly they felt their untimely end. Old Mrs. Nicely was completely prostrated and has been a raving maniac ever since. Dr. Beltz, the attending physician, fears she will never regain her reason.

The funeral will occur this afternoon, and will be one of the largest ever witnessed in Ligonier valley.

Steve Brodie's Tight Fix.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 4.—The predicament of Steve Brodie, the New York bridge jumper, may become more serious than was at first deemed possible. It is reported that inflammation has set in about the wound in the stomach, which Brodie inflicted upon Wallie Wilson in the fight at Mallory's saloon on Monday night. Wilson could not appear at Brodie's examination in court, and his physician is not a little alarmed over his symptoms.

The Strike Has Become General.

ROSDOUT, N. Y., April 4.—The strike of the masons and hod carriers, which began Wednesday among the men employed in erecting the New York Cigar Company's manufactory, has now become general and extends throughout the city. At a meeting of the contractors and boss masons it was decided to positively refuse to accede to the strikers' demand for a nine-hour day.

Jockey Decker's Death.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The coroner's jury which has been investigating the death of Jockey Decker, who was found dead beside the railroad track at Morris Park about two weeks ago, returned a verdict that he came to his death by jumping off a New Haven & Hartford train and fracturing his skull. Conductor Arthur is censured for negligence.

End of a Long Trial.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., April 4.—The jury in the Shepp-Cox ejectment case rendered a sealed verdict in favor of the defendant. The trial occupied over seventeen weeks. The case involved the title of a certain tract of land comprising about 198 acres situated about thirteen miles from Brandonville. The property is valued at $10,000.

Want the District-Attorney Removed.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., April 4.—Three citizens of Watertown have petitioned Gov. Hill to remove District-Attorney Peck of this county. There are several charges against him, including gambling and other bad habits. Gov. Hill has notified him to answer the charges within eight days and show cause why he should not be removed.

A Famous Yacht Builder Dead.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 4.—Captain William L. Force, the famous fast yacht builder, died at Keyport, N. J., last night, aged 68 years. Captain Force designed and built many of the fastest yachts in the country. He has also sailed boats in the international yacht races.

Deadly Electric Wires.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 4.—The electric light wires got in their work here during the morning. Two wires became crossed at Oak street and fell into the street, and two horses came in contact with them and were instantly killed. A man received a severe shock.

The Storm in New England.

BOSTON, April 4.—The storm throughout New England is very severe. A stiff northeast gale was blowing all night, with heavy rain on the coast and snow in the interior. There is 14 inches of snow throughout Western New England.

A Suspected Murderer Discharged.

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., April 4.—Matthew Staniz, a Pole, who was arrested here on the charge of having murdered a fellow countryman in Poland some time ago, has been discharged for lack of evidence to connect him with the crime.

MAY FIGHT TO-DAY

Thousands of Miners at the Coke Rioters' Funeral.

STRIKERS EAGER FOR REVENGE.

District Master Workman Wise Says There Will be Trouble.

The Military Prepared for Prompt Action—One of Gen. Wiley's Spies Reports that the Foreigners Are Well Armed and Are Ready for an Uprising—Official Orders to the Soldiers.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Pa., April 4.—The situation is critical, and at any moment hostilities may break out again. If they do the death roll of Thursday will be small compared to the number who would be killed.

Bitterness and despair are treading on the heels of death throughout the coke country to-day. The entire region is under martial law. Of the dozen plants in operation before the riots nearly all have again suspended.

This afternoon the 10 victims of the Morewood riot will be buried, and unless all signs fail there will be further trouble.

The funeral train from here to Scottdale to-day consisted of 18 cars. At Scottdale the strikers will be joined by workers from every plant in the region, making, probably, the largest body of men ever congregated in this region. At the cemetery the leaders will make orations.

"The dirge of the bands of the funeral will be the knell of more people than the martyrs," was the remark of one leader to-day.

Peter Wise, one of the strike leaders, openly avowed the probability of trouble. He says that "people must take care about that time." It is possible that another uprising has been planned.

There are 1,000 bayonets to uphold law and order. The 10th and 18th Regiments are on the ground in force. The men of the 18th have 90 rounds of ammunition each. They are camping in railroad coaches, ready to go to any part of the coke country where trouble may crop out. Small squads of the 10th Regiment are scattered about Morewood, Mt. Pleasant, Standard, Stonerville and other points. The force of deputies has been increased. The general impression is that Scottdale is menaced by the strikers and several companies are encamped in town.

IN A DANGEROUS MOOD.

Startling Information Obtained by One of General Wiley's Soldiers.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Pa., April 4.—Gen. Wiley detailed Private Kellar of the 18th Regiment, who speaks seven languages, to circulate among the Hungarian and other strikers. When Private Kellar returned to headquarters he reported to Gen. Wiley as follows:

"There is going to be trouble between this and Monday. The strikers are all indignant because the soldiers have been sent here, but they don't seem to fear them. I was in two houses where they threatened to attack me until I addressed them in their own tongue. In one house I saw five guns and a number of revolvers. In the other I saw three guns and several revolvers. Five out of every ten of these men have served in the armies of the old country, and they know what soldiers are.

"They say that the soldiers who have been brought here are simply workingmen like themselves and will not interfere with their movements. So far as I have discovered there is going to be trouble and it will come within the next two days. All of the Hungarians are in a dangerous mood over the killing of their fellow workmen at Morewood, which they claim was entirely unjustifiable."

WILL FIGHT IT OUT.

The Strike Leaders Going In for a Bitter Struggle.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Pa., April 4.—Ex-Secretary Robert Watchorn and Vice-President Penna of the United Mine Workers have returned here.

They held a conference in Pittsburg and decided to continue the strike more determinedly than ever.

"The killing of these men," said Penna, "has strengthened our position ten-fold. We are determined not to lay down. If the operators are to be armed to protect property, and under that pretense shoot down men on the highways it is time the men were armed to protect their own lives."

At a big meeting held here last evening strong resolutions were adopted denouncing the killing of the men at Morewood.

Ordered to Shoot if Necessary.

MT. PLEASANT, Pa., April 4.—In the official order issued from the Adjutant-General's Department, General Wiley is directed to see that "the troops are only moved in compact bodies and that no firing is permitted except by order of the officer in command. All other means of quieting riot and restoring order having first been exhausted, the officer commanding the troops shall notify the rioters that they will be fired upon unless they promptly disperse. Should they not disperse the order to fire shall be deliberately given. Every soldier will be expected to fire with effect, and the firing will be continued until the mob disappears."

Pittsburg Workingmen Interested.

PITTSBURG, April 4.—The labor organizations of Pittsburg may start a move to take part in the investigation of the coke riots. Secretary Dillon of the Flint Glass Workers said: "The shooting down of these men at Morewood was an outrage. Organized labor should take the matter up. The United Mine Workers form a big branch of the Federation and the chances are that we will take the matter up."

Over 100 Miners Die from the Grip.

CARSON, Nev., April 4.—The men employed in the Holmes mine at Candelaria have suffered terribly from the ravages of la grippe. Out of 600 men employed in and about the mine more than 400 have been prostrated and over 100 have died. Work in the mine had practically to be abandoned.

Death of Ex-Sheriff Peck.

PHELPS, N. Y., April 4.—Hiram Peck, ex-sheriff of Ontario County, died here last night, aged 74 years. The cause of his death was paralysis.

Bulkeley's Papers Honored.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 4.—Gov. Davis issued a warrant on requisition of Acting-Gov. Bulkeley of Connecticut for William Garnett, charged with breaking jail in Windham County Conn.

Wright's Remains Interred.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The remains of William Wright, the Astor House suicide, have been finally interred in Greenwood Cemetery by the order of his relatives in England.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Gold coin to the amount of $800,000 was taken to-day in New York for export.

The Maximum Railroad Rate bill has been vetoed by Governor Boyd of Nebraska.

The Junction House, a large hotel at Belvidere, N. J., was destroyed by fire last night. Loss, $7,000.

Bishop Ryan, who has been ill at Washington for some time, has left for his home in Buffalo, N. Y., very much improved.

Five deaths in New York city from the grip were reported by the Health Board as having occurred during the past 24 hours.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Cook, and Mr. and Mrs. George W. Rockfellow, returned last night from their trip to Florida.

Thomas Lynch, foreman of the pressroom in THE PRESS office, is brimming over with happiness, because of the arrival of a pretty and plump young daughter to make sunshine in his home on Madison avenue. Mother and child are doing well.

A telegram was received to-day by the Rev. C. B. Mitchell notifying him of the death of Josephine B., wife of George C. Martin, late of his congregation, at Kansas City. Mrs. Martin formerly lived at Central avenue and Eighth street. She had been for two years a great sufferer, but was divinely patient through it all. She was a most exemplary Christian, a fact which is a solace to her sorrowing friends.

Wm. H. Westervelt died Thursday at his home in East Orange. He was for many years well known in the foreign fruit trade in New York city. He was sixty-nine years old, and had been in the fruit-commission business since 1850, for about eighteen years of that time as the head of the firm of W. H. Westervelt & Co., No. 24 State street. He was a member of the Maritime and of the Foreign Fruit Exchanges. His wife died suddenly about eight months ago, and her death greatly affected him. He leaves one son, O. W. P. Westervelt, and a daughter, Mrs. Nicholls of Plainfield. The funeral took place this morning at the First Reformed church, East Orange.

THE WIDOW MARRIES AGAIN.

AMELIE RIVES'S "QUICK AND THE DEAD" ALMOST FULFILLED.

Remarkable Wedding of Lulu Lascell to a Man Who Looked Just Like Her Dear Departed.—Their Wedding Tour a Long Walk in the Rain.—Their Bridal Chamber a Cell in a Police Station.

John and Lulu Lascell will be remembered by many Plainfielders as two pitifully amusing characters who lived at various times on the bounty of the town. They occupied, from month to month, wretched apartments in back alleys, and finally drifted into a tenement row where paupers and semi-paupers were maintained by the municipal poor fund. The couple had children, which Lulu was in the habit of abusing publicly on the streets, so as to enlist sympathy for the brats and get them taken away from her and put in better hands where they would be no care to her.

John was at one time in comfortable circumstances, and had a good business, but became a slave to the morphine habit, and sank low in the financial and social scale.

John was known about town by the sobriquet of Romeo, and was reputed to be a Count in disguise. Lulu bore the nickname of Juliet.

About a year ago John died. He had endeared himself to his bereaved wife by caresses and kindness through five years of wedded happiness that sped quickly by. And now that he was dead, his memory was dear to the sorrowing widow.

True to his memory—she says—she refused "scores" of offers from those who sought her hand, and lived lone and widowed and kept the cows off John's grave in the lonely graveyard.

The funeral expenses of a $40 coffin, hearse and carriages took every cent that charitable friends contributed, and the lone woman felt the pinch of poverty and supported herself by taking in washing and by continuing partly a city charge. But she did not care to work, and one day she thought of her uncle in Brooklyn.

She had heard he sold gingersnaps on Bedford avenue and was in affluent circumstances, and she sought him out. Footsore, wet and weary, she hunted for her kinsman even as far as Williamsburg, but she found him not, and was about to give way to despair when, Thursday night, she saw a familiar figure seeking shelter from the drenching rain under an awning.

Like Barbara Pomfret in "The Quick and the Dead", she thought at first that it was her dead husband back on earth. But it was n't. It was John Gill, and John Gill was never dead. She accosted him regarding the gingersnap uncle. But John Gill knew him not.

Then John Gill asked her to become his wife. It was a case of love at first sight, and he looked so much like the dead husband that the Barbara Pomfret of Plainfield whispered back a loving Yes. But, unlike the Virginia widow of hysterical tendencies, she faltered not when she faced the parson, and this twain were made one by the Rev. J. J. White of the Independent church, on the street where the uncle of the bride sold snaps. The bride brought nothing but her beauty. The groom was not even that well off, but said that he'd pay for the job when he got his pay from a boiler shop where he claimed to work.

The bride coaxed the patriarchical and tender-hearted old clergyman into believing that he had married her once before, in years gone by, to her departed John, and he agreed to waive all claim on the fee for the present service.

At 10 o'clock that night Sergeant John Hamilton sat at the desk in the Clymer street police station and sheltered the friendless. John Gill and his bride came in and asked for shelter, too. It was readily granted them. But they were told that they must occupy separate apartments. The bride objected and produced her brand-new marriage certificate, whose most noticeable feature was that the age of the bride was given as twenty-five years. The certificate overcame the Sergeant's scruples, and Cell No. 9, the farthest cell on the lowest tier, was transformed into a bridal chamber as quickly as possible. The midnight squad sent in congratulations and coffee, and the janitor got four blankets for the nuptial couch. Detective Dolan gave the groom a plug of tobacco, and they sat up until a late hour discussing their future plans.

The bride and groom arose at 6:30 the next morning, and hand in hand prepared to face the world. The bride made a careful toilet before a round pocket mirror which was loaned by one of the policemen.

The groom was attired in a gray sack coat with brown overalls, deftly patched. The bride wore a faded crepe cape, a brown Jersey and a black calico overskirt. She had a slipper on one foot, and a shoe laced with a corset string on the other, which made her bridal costume all the more striking. Before they left, Sergeant Bufford, who had come on duty at 6 o'clock, asked the blushing bride what they had given the dominie.

"Not a darn cent"—she sweetly said;—"He kin wait till we make some money."

Policeman Gregory gave the groom a pair of boots that by a happy chance was just his size, and hand in hand, with perfect trust, the happy pair stepped out into the world to face its calms and storms until death shall part them. They were seen an hour later by Roundsman Kelly on Flatbush avenue. The groom had picked up a discarded beer keg from the sidewalk and had just applied the bung hole to his lips. He quaffed the loving cup while she smiled a beaming smile.

Sergeant Hamilton is of the opinion that John's boiler shop job is a myth.

"He's a tramp and she's a tramp, I guess"—remarked the Sergeant.—"He never did any work. They were perfectly sober when they came here, but you ought to have seen 'em. Tatters and rags don't describe 'em, and when they stood before the desk Thursday night a pool of water formed about the feet of each, for they were soaked through and through by the storm."

The Unitarians Have a "Barn Hunt".

A decidedly original Easter-tide entertainment was prepared for the children of the Unitarian Sunday-school and their young friends on Wednesday evening. The special interest of the occasion centered in what was called a "barn hunt."

The church parlors were prettily decorated with potted plants and the colors of the two children's societies, the Glow-worms and Unity Band. An adjoining room was fitted up as an old barn, where hidden away in the midst of straw and the usual trumpery of such places, were basket nests of candy eggs on which Easter owlets sat. The bird had even found a nesting in the pockets of the old coat and the sun-hat of the farmer. These nests were the treasures which the children were to hunt for in the dim light furnished by an old-fashioned lantern. The whole barn interior deserves a minute description, if space permitted, so ingenious were its arrangements.

Music and recitations were included in the entertainment and light refreshments were served. The festivities closed with a bit of pleasantry introduced by H. B Wells, the Superintendent, of which the originator of the entertainment, Mrs. W. J. Leonard, was the victim. The rooms grew dark, and following the doleful notes of the owl two children dressed in masks to represent that bird appeared and repeated a few original rhymes, which created much merriment among young and old.

To-Morrow is Methodist Day.

The Methodists of this city have been looking forward for some weeks to the first Sunday in April, as that is the day fixed for the dedication of their new chapel on the corner of Monroe avenue and West Fourth street. The new chapel is a marvel of neatness, beauty and convenience. It is situated in a neighborhood where large numbers may be reached and benefited. Bishop Andrews, of New York city, will preach at 10:30 a. m. A platform meeting, with several short addresses, will be held at 3 p. m. Dr. Brice will preach at 7:30 p. m., and at the close of the sermon Bishop Andrews will dedicate the chapel. To-morrow will mark a new era in the history of the Methodist Episcopal church in this city.

Getting Ready for the Big Run.

In response to a circular issued about two weeks ago by Captain F. L. C. Martin of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, and ex-Captain W. E. Fuller of the Brooklyn Bicycle Club, a meeting will be held in the Plainfield Bicycle Club-house to-night to organize a committee and lay out a route for the great 100-mile Century Run from Orange to Philadelphia. This annual run is growing very popular, and the outlook for a monster cross-country run, such as has never before been witnessed, is very good. This run was organized three years ago by Capt. L. A. Clarke of Flushing, L. I., and Captain F. L. C. Martin of Plainfield.

ANOTHER MYSTERY.

Does This Show Murder, or is it Only a Medical Student's Joke?

CHICAGO, April 4.—Employes of the Illinois Central Railroad found the body of a man stripped naked, sawed in two in the middle, with a strap around the neck, and packed in chloride of lime in a stout deal box.

The lime had so eaten into the flesh that a description of the body is impossible. The box was addressed to "W. H. Harris, Cuba City, Wis. C. O. D.

Starving With Plenty of Gold.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Kate Roach, aged 70, one of the characters of the Fourth Ward, was found in her miserable hovel during the day slowly dying of starvation. She was removed to the hospital where the doctors say she cannot recover. A search was made of her apartments, and amid the rags and squalor the officers found over $2,000 in gold and bills and bank books calling for nearly $4,000 more.

A Baby Burned to Death.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 4.—A dwelling house on Elm street occupied by Charles Maltby was destroyed by fire at an early hour. Maltby's two-year-old daughter was burned to death.

Heaviest Snow Storm of the Season.

CHESTER, Vt., April 4.—The heaviest snow storm of the season occurred in this section of the State last night. Fully 20 inches fell. Trains and stages are somewhat delayed by the storm.

Low-necked dresses are going to be very popular with the lovely young dudines, because if they should catch cold wearing them, haven't they got Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup to cure them?

How many murmur at high prices? Why Salvation Oil costs only 25 cents a bottle.

Dr. Dean's Dyspepsia Pills are unquestionably good. They are, in my opinion, all they claim to be. I have tried them and found in them what I needed. I believe they will cure Dyspepsia, and that is saying much for any medicine. I am glad, therefore, to give my testimony.

LIVELY TIMES IN THE BOROUGH

JOHN GOODWIN TELLS A COUNCILMAN HIS NAME IS DENNIS.

But Just the Same the Council Start Off a New Year by Commendable Achievements, and Do Their Duty by Greenbrook Road at Last.—Appointments by Mayor and Council.—Counselor Reed's Salary Increased.

The Borough Council of North Plainfield last night started a new year by very commendable performances, chief of which was the decision to macadamize Greenbrook road.

Councilman Hegeman introduced the resolution to begin the long-neglected work of macadamization on that thoroughfare, all the way from the Cadmus mill to Grove street, as soon as the weather would permit.

Councilman Smalley raised objections, and sought to have the matter deferred till another meeting, and Councilman Needham also wished the resolution held over till the cost could be properly estimated.

This opposition aroused Mr. Hegeman's righteous wrath.

This is not a question of expense—he said;—it is a matter of absolute necessity. It is time we at last recognized the rights of the property holders in that section. These people can't carry on their business, the way the road is now and has been so long. Mr. Scribner has to use eight horses to draw a small load of brick through the hub-deep mud. He and his neighbors are shut off from civilization six months in the year. Are we—he concluded—going to be indicted for not doing our duty, or are we to act like men and do our duty, and not quibble over a few dollars of expense?

Councilman Buckle said that even considered as a question of expense it was economy to macadamize the road. Twenty per cent. of what it would cost to make the proposed permanent improvements was being sunk in the mire year after year, in making temporary repairs.

Councilman Smalley held that the district east of Somerset street ought to receive the bulk of the road money this year, as it had been neglected heretofore.

At this Councilman Hegeman was still further aroused.

This feeling of sectionalism—he said—was very deplorable, and he protested vehemently against it. If the Council refused to macadamize Greenbrook road now it was blind to its duty. The old custom had been, it was true, that each side of the borough should be benefited alternate years, while the other side wallowed around in the mud, but Greenbrook road had been unjustly cheated out of macadamization last year, and surely ought to be given first attention now.

Mr. Smalley accused the west side of town of asking for all the money continually. Mr. Hegeman replied that Washington Park asked for nothing this year, and Greenbrook road was a thoroughfare used by people from both east and west of Somerset street. This year a special fund of $1,000 was to be spent on Somerset street, and there was $3,000 to spend elsewhere.

Mr. Smally insisted that of that $3,000 Greenbrook road would require $2,000 if macadamized, besides the $500 promised by residents along the thoroughfare, leaving only $1,000 for east-side streets.

A motion to table the resolution to macadamize was voted for by only Councilmen Smalley and Needham, and was lost. The resolution to macadamize was adopted by the following vote:

Ayes—Councilmen Buckle, Hegeman, Hummer and Sebring—4.

Noes—Councilmen Needham and Smalley—2.

Out in the lobby John Goodwin viewed the Greenbrook road proceedings through east-side eyes, and had developed quite a show of sectional feeling and temper by the time the Council adjourned.

No sooner was the session over than Mr. Goodwin charged on Councilman Hegeman.

Shaking his big head of bushy black hair violently, from side to side, and pounding the air emphatically with his fists the irate warrior shouted to the astonished Councilman:

"Your name's Dennis! Your name's Dennis! You've cooked your goose! You'll be fixed for macadamizing the mountain-side when the streets on the east side need the money so bad. You only did it 'cause you don't know nothin'. You never did know nothin', anyhow!"

"We're only putting the money where it will do the borough the most good"—responded Mr. Hegeman, placidly.

But when Mr. Goodwin went down stairs he was still shaking his head excitedly, and was muttering something about "Dennis" and "mud" and "know nothin'."

Several men in the lobby shouted sarcastic things after him. No one seemed to mind the little episode and when a man on the street wanted to know what was the row he was told that it was "only old Goodwin broke loose again".

During the evening Mayor Place appointed his standing committees for the year as follows:

Auditing and Finance—Councilmen Buckle, Sebring and Hummer.

Fire, Water and Lamps—Councilmen Sebring, Smalley and Buckle.

Laws, Ordinance and Elections—Councilmen Needham, Hummer and Smalley.

Licenses and Marshals—Councilmen Smalley, Needham and Hegeman.

Streets and Public Health—Councilmen Hegeman, Buckle and Needham.

Printing, Stationery and Supplies—Councilmen Hummer, Hegeman and Sebring.

Councilman Hegeman withdrew from the Street Committee, owing, he explained, to the pressure of personal business.

Henry H. Brokaw was unanimously reappointed Borough Clerk at a salary of $150 per year.

Justus H. Cooley was unanimously reappointed Assessor at a salary of $500.

George Conover was unanimously re-appointed Street Commissioner at a salary of $2 per day for actual service, and $50 per year bonus.

Chas. A. Reed was unanimously re-appointed Counsel to the Mayor and Borough at a salary of $250 per year. This is an increase of $100. Councilmen Hegeman and Buckle tried to make the salary $300, but the others considered this excessive, and even exorbitant.

Councilman Hegeman explained that the aid the counsel had given the borough in the past had been worth far more than he had been paid, and the coming year would demand still more work from him. For such excellent legal talent the Council must expect to pay well. Very soon street railway and water-works companies would want to invade the borough borders, and some of the difficulties that had beset Plainfield in these matters would arise. Counsel would probably save the borough much legal trouble, and even costly litigation. At any rate, his services would be such that $300 would be none too great compensation.

The $250 figure was finally chosen as a compromise.

Warren Engine Company was granted the use of the lobby of the Council Chamber when Council was not in session, and $50 was appropriated to furnish it for them. Necessary tables and chairs for the new borough lock-up were ordered.

The interior of the engine house was ordered painted. The engine wheels were ordered painted, and the tires cut. A loan of $500 for use on the streets was ordered negotiated. Complaints concerning the electric light were made. Councilman Sebring explained that an inspector made nightly rounds, and all defects were properly remedied. He added that complaints made to him or to W. R. Codington, local secretary and manager of the company, would receive prompt attention.

The Council adjourned to April 15.

FOLLOWING IN PLAINFIELD'S FOOTSTEPS.

The Borough Not Slow to See the Need of a Street Railway, Water-Works, and Other Improvements.

At last night's meeting of the Borough Council of North Plainfield the following interesting message was presented by Mayor Place, and was received and ordered filed:

To the Borough Council:

Six of the seven members of this Council, including the Mayor, served in it during the last year. We therefore have a full knowledge of the work of the last Council, and can discern in a degree the work we shall be called on to do in the coming year. With this knowledge, we enter on the duties before us, and, judging from the past, can assume with reasonable certainty that the people whom we represent will indorse all needed improvements, based on economical expenditures.

STREETS.

So far as I can learn, there seems to be general satisfaction with the macadamizing done last year by the Council, because the streets which were macadamized were those traveled most. I desire to say that my position on the question of macadamizing is the same as it was one year ago, when I assumed the office of Mayor. I believe now, as I did then, that those streets lying within the thickly settled parts of the Borough should first receive the attention of this Council; provided, however, owners of the property situated on those streets are willing to pay a reasonable amount to aid the Council in macadamizing them. This has been done by those who reside on the streets already improved. In this way the Council can do much more macadamizing, and the money voted for street purposes will go very much further. It cannot be denied that in the thickly settled parts of the Borough there are greater needs for good streets, because the people's necessities are greater.

SIDEWALKS.

Although very much improvement has been made in our sidewalks during the past year, yet many of them are kept in bad condition. In many places underlying timbers are allowed to decay, and remaining boards are put lengthwise, where they should be put crosswise, with too few timbers under them, thus causing a lurking danger, especially in the night. In some places, before nice residences, no walks have been laid. I am glad to indorse what the Street Committee said in its last annual report, "We ask the citizens to co-operate with us in our endeavor to secure good walks in the Borough, and this can be done by informing us where a sidewalk is in bad condition, and in need of repairs". It is to be hoped that our residents will render this Council all possible aid in keeping our sidewalks good, for if our citizens will do their duty in this direction there is no reason why there should exist one foot of defective walk. Muddy streets will soon be a thing of the past, and it is to be hoped defective sidewalks will also.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

The system of electric lights which was put in the Borough by the last Council seems to be very satisfactory. But little opposition exists to these lights, so far as I can learn. When the lamps become properly located in the dark places now existing, there is not much doubt that our citizens will feel that the change from the naptha lamp was a wise one. That lamp was well enough until something better came to take its place.

GROWTH.

Concerning our growth, I am glad to note that the increased assessed value of real estate within the borough of $440,307 in five years shows that people have been attracted here. Both borough government, which has given needed improvements, and our location, have conduced to accomplish this growth. Muddy streets, poor sidewalks, and unlighted streets, do not prove inviting to new comers. But we are fast overcoming these enemies of the public weal. When North Plainfield had these, she stood still, while the city of Plainfield was growing rapidly. Our population is increasing each year with that class of people who come to remain with us. Our borough now contains nearly eight hundred and fifty voters, and it will be the duty of this Council to create two election districts in it, to comply with the State law now in force.

STREET RAILWAY AND WATER-WORKS.

In the near future the Borough Council will undoubtedly be called on to take some action regarding a street railroad, and a system of water-works and sewerage. How long before that time will come, no one can tell. The city of Plainfield will in all probability take some decided action at once, and she cannot have these improvements very long before there will be a desire on the part of our residents to have them also in some form suited to our needs. But when that time does come, the sentiment of our people will dictate what kind of a street railroad, and what system of water-works, shall be put in. I am constrained to say that in my judgment neither of these needed improvements will find any advocate in this Council which will not be approved by our residents in general, whether the time for action comes this year or some other time in the near future.

A YOUNG GIRL WRONGED.

Arrest of a Clergyman's Son on a Serious Charge.

Dick Johns, a son of the Methodist minister at Bound Brook, has been arrested and put under bonds of $500 for trial, on a most serious charge preferred by pretty Jennie Davis.

The girl is only 18 years of age. She started out in the world recently to make her own living, and was learning the telegraph business at Bound Brook. Her home is in Brooklyn.

Last Sunday night, she says, she was alone in the telegraph office, and young Johns took advantage of her helpless situation and shamefully wronged her.

For several days she was so frightened at what had been done that she said nothing to anyone. Finally she told her grandfather, ex-postmaster Benjamin Little, what had happened.

The news so angered the man that he armed himself with a pistol and started out in search of the young man, threatening to shoot him on sight.

Better counsel prevailed, however, and Mr. Little was persuaded to adopt legal measures instead of personal violence. The result was the arrest.

A story was afloat in the village that young Johns and young Ed. Bartow were together implicated in the case and had enticed the girl to a lonely spot, but Jennie herself does not accuse Bartow.

The defence made by Johns is one that blackens the reputation of the girl.

HOT ELECTION CONTEST.

Figuring on the Result of the Municipal Fight in Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 4.—The municipal fight now drawing to a close has been one of give and take, with no quarter asked or expected. It was rumored to-day that Carter Harrison would withdraw, but the story had no foundation.

It is now figured that the Democratic vote next Tuesday will be not less than 73,000, of which 36,000 are given to Harrison and 37,000 to Mayor Cregier. Harrison, however, will get some Republican votes—nearly one-fourth—and as the Republican vote is estimated at 70,000 this will give Harrison about 44,000. Hempstead Washburn, the Republican candidate, is credited with 33,000 votes, which will give him a plurality of nearly 9,000 over Harrison.

Many home rule Democrats, who are mostly Irish, are disgusted with what they call the interference of Senator-Elect Palmer and the outside Democratic Congressmen, and for this reason will vote for Harrison. The vote of Morgan, the Socialist candidate, is an unknown quantity, but it is not reckoned higher than 5,000, and Elmer Washburn, the Citizens' candidate, is not expected to get more than that. A full vote is anticipated next Tuesday, provided the weather is at all favorable.

Attached for $50,000.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 4.—Burns, Silver & Co.'s works have been attached for $50,000, as a result of a suit brought by the American Loan and Trust Company of New York. This suit is the result of the financial complication of John S. Silver with the wrecked Washington National Bank.

Tell-Tale Records.

Scene—The Jones parlor; time, Sunday evening. Miss Jones discovered removing the Bible by Clarence Nudle.

Nudle—You might leave the book, dear. I should like to look at it.

Little Johnny—She will not let you. She always keeps the Bible out of the parlor when any young man calls. She doesn't want anybody to read the family record, cause dey would find out how old she is.—Boston Herald.

A Great Advantage.

Tom (a rival)—Being a clergyman, you have better opportunities than most bachelors to find out the good and bad qualities of the young ladies in your congregation.

Rev. Whitetie—How so?

Tom—You at least have a chance to discover which of the girls snore.—Life.

The Proof of It.

Meddling—That girl in the candy-store may be only a poor shop-girl, but she's a true woman!

Paxton—I'm convinced of it, me boy! Why only the other day I got her to break a dollar for me, and she handed back one dollar and seventeen cents in change.—Puck.

Pride Is Punished.

Littleton (coming out of the restaurant)—By Jove, I am glad we are rid of that waiter! His air was so lofty that I actually felt small.

Coke—Indeed. And so—

Littleton—And so I acted small. I didn't give him one cent.—Puck.

A FEW MASTER STROKES.

—Golden Days.

Matrimonial Item.

Mr. Jones—So you have been off on a bridal tour to Canada and Niagara Falls. What did you see that pleased you most while you were away, Mrs. Spoony?

Mrs. Spoony (modestly)—My husband.—Texas Siftings.

A Living Witness.

She—Why should he go around saying marriage is a failure? He never tried it.

He—Never mind, he's got good grounds for thinking so. His own existence proves it.—Jury.

A Comparison.

Jack—Your hands are awfully small, Laura.

Laura—Are they?

Jack—Yes; they're almost as small as the hands I hold at poker.—Munsey's Weekly.

Tears Flowed Like Water.

Footlytes—How did the new actress succeed? Were there any tears in the pathetic scene?

Derant—Yes—she cried because a man in the gallery hit her with a turnip.—Light.

A Close Call.

"My baby had a fearfully narrow escape yesterday."

"How so?"

"By mistake my wife left the poor little fellow alone with the nurse-girl."—Judge.

Too Costly.

Goodman—It's a shame he treated you so; but you should heap coals of fire on his head!

Furniss—With coal at the present price? Not much—I'm not so fond of revenge.—Puck.

Agreeable.

Boston Hostess—How would you enjoy spending the evening at our Burns club, Mr. Overland?

Western Guest—First-rate. I used to belong to a fire company myself.—Good News.

A Waste of Raw Material.

Othello—The death of Miss Stajelevator was very widely discussed in the newspapers.

Iago—Yes; it's a great pity she isn't alive, to profit by the advertising.—Puck.

For Reasons.

"Don't let Bronson write my obituary," said the dying man.

"Why not?" asked the editor.

"He—knows—me—too—well," gasped the other.—Munsey's Weekly.

So Did He.

She (on their wedding trip)—What is the whistle blowing for, Fred?

Fred—We are approaching either a station or a tunnel.

She—I—I hope it is a tunnel.—Life.

Mitigated Grief.

Rounds—I've seen people laugh till they cried; but I never knew of a fellow crying till he laughed.

Nephews—Guess you never lost a rich uncle.—Puck.

He Was Correct.

Burleigh—I tell you, it costs a man to dress his wife well these days.

Tubbs—Yes, dress goods are high, especially on the shoulders.—Texas Siftings.

More Money in It.

"Why is it that there is more banking business done in the north than in the south?"

"Nearer Canada."—Jury.

Not a Prince.

American Heiress—Who is that at the door?

Maid—Only a marquis, mum.—Good News.

Almost Excusable.

Bagley—Don't you think the killing of Ananias and Sapphira for lying was pretty severe?

Brace—How so?

Bagley—It was about a real-estate deal, you know.—Munsey's Weekly.

Symbolic Satellites.

She—What a fitting token of married life is the wedding ring!

He—It is. A ring has no end; and it also has no beginning. It is absolutely without variety, and is much easier put on than taken off.—Life.

After Particulars.

"I tell you, sir," he exclaimed, in a high voice, "that the country is going to the dogs."

"May I inquire, sir," asked a modest listener, "if the dogs are of any particular breed?"—Judge.

Yankee Ingenuity.

Spindle—Why do you put such horribly perfumed stuff on your hair? it's enough to knock anyone over.

Brindle—To keep from catching cold.

"Huh! What good does that stuff do?"

"It has become the style now for gentlemen to remove their hats in all sorts of draughty places when there happen to be ladies present; but when I take off mine they always beg me to put it on again so as not to take cold."

"Hum! How much is it a bottle?"—Good News.

Nowhere.

Stranger—The streets of your new town are in a horrible condition.

Real-Estate Broker—Yes, I know. You see most of the people who immigrate here are New Yorkers, and we want to make it as homelike as possible.—Judge.

Cause of Mild Envy.

Irene—You ought to be thankful you haven't a great big mouth like mine.

Laura—Your mouth is none too large, dear. I quite envy you. My mouth won't hold more than half my hairpins.—Chicago Tribune.

Proof of Authenticity.

McWatty (at the breakfast table)—Mrs. Small, this egg has a chicken in it.

Mrs. Small—Shows it's genuine. I never use artificial eggs.—West Shore.

Brutal.

Mrs. Bonfant—Mr. Guyerre paid me a charming compliment to-night. He said I didn't look a single day over twenty-five.

Mr. Bonfant—You don't. You look thousands.—Judge.

What's in a Name?

Tom—What did you say her name was?

Jack—Constance.

Tom—And yet she flitted you.—Light.

SENSIBLE SOLILOQUY.

"I can easily account for my conviction, but here is one thing I can't get over."—Judge.

The Secret of Wealth.

"The secret of wealth?" said the rich man in a stiff manner. "I cannot say I have any. Still, there are two things—"

"And they are?" eagerly interrupted the young inquirer.

"I did without ice in summer and did my own plumbing in winter."—Philadelphia Times.

A Tender-Hearted Girl.

Van Duder—Oh, Miss Madison—Amy—do not say that you will be a sister to me.

Amy—Perhaps you would like me to offer to be a nurse to you!—Munsey's Weekly.

FEARFUL EXPLOSION.

A terrific blow-up.

What was the cause?

Over-tension—too high pressure of steam.

Have you ever stopped to think that this verdict might be written as an epitaph on the tombstones of thousands upon thousands of our people?

Over-tension—too high pressure of steam!

It not only fills thousands of graves annually, but crowds the mad-houses and insane asylums to overflowing; makes our private dwellings shelter the weakened nerves, the exhausted bodies, the ruined hopes, the blasted lives of young, middle-aged and old alike; builds mammoth hospitals in which every ward teams with suffering humanity—hospitals which are monuments to the wrecks of minds and intellects, the shattered brains and nerves, the ruined constitutions of millions.

Do you have any doubt of this?

Look to your own family, to your friends, to yourself.

Remember your father who died of overwork before he reached middle-age; remember your brother who from over-taxed strength, grew weak, pale, bloodless, enervated; remember your friend who, brain-tire and nerves strained to dangerous tension, with nerveless arm attempted suicide, and later became the inmate of an insane asylum: remember yourself—your oft recurring weak feelings, your tired, trembling limbs, your dull, bad-feeling head, sleepless nights and restless, nervous days.

Recollect these things and understand that you are running under too high a pressure. It may be of business, physical overwork, pleasure or dissipation, the result will be the same—explosion of health, both nervous and physical, unless you receive help from some source, and remember that these symptoms and conditions are doubly dangerous in the Spring of the year.

To what source of help will you turn?

Naturally to that well-known remedy which you know will so surely and quickly cure nervous disorders—Dr. Greene's Nervura. It is pronounced by all to be a most wonderful nerve strengthener, a marvellous stomach remedy and the most perfect cure known for all those weakening and debilitating nervous diseases which result from mental or physical overwork, &c. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and is for sale by all druggists at $1 per bottle.

GLAD TIDINGS OF HEALTH.

I suffered much pain, could not eat or sleep well, and felt miserable. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura, and took it but a few weeks before I was completely cured. I advise all who are complaining to use Dr. Greene's Nervura.

GEORGE W. LAMB,

17 to 27 North Water St., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth St., New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

N. B. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write Dr. Greene about your case, and a carefully considered letter, fully explaining your disease and giving you a perfect understanding of all its symptoms will be returned, free of charge.

And said street railway company is hereby given full authority to construct, maintain and operate its street railway in said streets within the city of Plainfield. A detailed plan of construction shall be filed by said company with the city Clerk and be approved by said Common Council before any work is done under the permission herein granted.

Section 2. That the said company shall construct, maintain and operate a double track street railway in Front street from Grant avenue to Park avenue, and in the other streets and avenues and portions thereof above designated, the same shall consist of a single track, maintain and operate a single track street railway to be laid upon the middle line of the street (except when by ordinance the Common Council shall otherwise expressly determine) with suitable turnouts and switches; provided that no turnout shall be more than one hundred and fifty feet in length, nor within five hundred feet of any other turnout on the same street and provided also, that every turnout shall be laid equally on each side of the middle line of the street.

Section 3. Said company shall keep in repair to the satisfaction of the committee on streets, the paving or other surface material of the portion of streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, and in addition shall so keep in repair eighteen inches on each side of the portion of said streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks; or, if not so kept and maintained, the repairs thereto may be made by or under the direction of said Committee on Streets and to their satisfaction, and the expense thereof shall be paid, on demand by said company to said city; provided that the said committee on streets, or a majority of them, shall give at least ten days' notice, in writing, of their intention to make such repairs; the said notice to be served upon any officer or employe of said company who may be found at their office or depot.

Section 4. The said company and its officers, servants, agents or employes shall not, nor shall any or either of them, be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice or slush alongside the said track or tracks, in any street or streets, in such manner as to obstruct other public travel therein; but, when removing such snow, ice or slush from said track or tracks, the said company or its said officers, servants, agents or employes, shall cause the same to be immediately leveled between said track or tracks and the gutter lines on each side thereof; under a penalty of twenty dollars to be paid by said company, or by any of its said officers, servants, agents or employes so offending to said city, for each and every offense.

Section 5. The rails to be used for said railway shall be of steel, and shall be of the best and most approved quality and pattern of side bearing rails, of not less than 66 pounds to the yard, and the sleepers, ties, chairs and splices shall severally be of the best quality of their respective kinds; and both material and workmanship shall be subject to the inspection and approval of the committee on streets; and said railway shall not be operated for the transportation of passengers, or fares be collected thereon, until such approval and acceptance by said Common Council, or a majority of them.

Section 6. The company shall, in laying its tracks, switches and turn-outs, conform in all cases, to the grade lines of the streets, as now established, or as they may be hereafter changed or established by the Common Council; and said company shall in case of any such change of grade, conform thereto, and alter such tracks, switches and turn-outs at their own expense, and without unnecessary delay, and under the direction of said committee on streets; or, in case of default, the said committee on streets shall make such a change, or cause the same to be made, and the expense thereof shall be paid, on demand, by said company to said city; provided ten days' notice of the committee's intention to make such change shall be given, and served in the same manner as in case of repairs as aforesaid.

Section 7. In passing over the gutters of any cross street the bottom of such gutters is or may be below the grade line of such railroad, the rails shall be securely laid and fastened upon iron bridges of the most approved pattern; and such bridges shall be extended on each side of the track or tracks to the gutter line of the street in which said track or tracks is or are laid; the bridges and work to be subject to the inspection and approval of said Committee on Streets, in every particular.

Section 8. During the construction of said railroad, no unnecessary hindrance or obstruction to ordinary travel upon any such street or streets, shall be permitted; and if any accident or other casualty shall happen or occur, at any time, to any person or property, because or by reason of any work connected with such construction of said railroad or afterward because or by reason of any operation thereof, or through the carelessness or negligence of any of the company's officers or servants, agents or employes, the said company shall be liable therefor, and shall indemnify, and save said city harmless from all cost, loss or damage by reason thereof.

Section 9. No car belonging to said company shall be allowed to stand in or obstruct any cross street, or to stand upon any cross-walk, for any purpose or purposes whatsoever, nor to stand or remain in any one position, upon any street, for more than five minutes at one time; except when said car shall be unavoidably obstructed or detained without the fault or negligence of said company, or any of its officers, servants, agents or employes under the penalty of five dollars to be paid by said company to said city for each and every offense, and that cars stopping to take up or let off passengers at any street crossing shall in all cases do so upon the far side of such street crossing.

Section 10. The said city reserves the right to dig or excavate in or upon any such street in which said railroad shall be so constructed for the purpose of laying, examining, repairing or replacing any water or sewer pipe or other pipes or making or shutting off any connection therewith, or for the purpose of making any other public improvement, or of doing any other public work of any kind whatsoever; and the said company shall not have any recourse against said city therefor, for damages or otherwise, because of any detention or obstruction to the travel upon said railroad arising therefrom.

Section 11. If the said company shall fail to build or construct the whole of said railroad, with its said turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and to put the same in full and complete operation for the transportation of passengers, within nine months next after the passage of this ordinance, or shall afterwards fail or neglect to operate the same as aforesaid, daily and every day for the space of three months, all the rights and privileges, and every one of them, of said company, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of this ordinance, shall thereupon cease and be determined, and this ordinance shall become null and void, so far as the grant of any such right, power or privilege to said company is concerned; and in either of such cases, the Common Council expressly reserves the right to cause the said railroad, or any part or parts thereof, so constructed, to be removed from said street or streets, or any of them and to sell and dispose of the materials thereof by public auction, and, after paying all the expenses of such removal and sale and of repairing the said street or streets, and of restoring the same as nearly as possible to its or their original condition to pay the balance of the proceeds of such sale to the said company, or its successors or assigns; provided, that no notice of such sale shall be required to be given other than an advertisement, signed by the City Clerk, and published in one or more newspapers printed and published in said city.

Section 12. That the cars shall be of the pattern known as the vestibule cars, they shall be lighted by electricity and properly heated in winter, and shall be similar in construction and design to the cars of the Rapid Transit Street Railway Company of the city of Newark, N. J. The company shall use upon its cars the Climax or other noiseless gearing, and shall have proper bells or gongs, and shall be run at a speed of not more than twelve miles an hour.

Section 13. That the cars to be used on said railroad shall be propelled by electricity supplied by overhead wires; that the poles necessary for the overhead electric construction shall be of steel or iron, they shall be placed between curb lines and sidewalk, opposite each other and shall be located as nearly as may be one hundred and twenty-five feet apart. The trolley wire shall be properly guarded so as to prevent other wires coming into contact therewith. The current used by said company to propel its cars shall not exceed five hundred volts.

Section 14. That the fares charged for the transportation of passengers over the said railway within the city of Plainfield, shall be as follows: Children under seven years of age, free; children over four and under ten years of age not occupying seats required by other passengers, three cents; all others, five cents. School tickets shall be sold for three cents to all children actually attending school, and to all teachers engaged in teaching school within the city of Plainfield.

That said company shall maintain a system of transfers for a continuous ride within the city limits for a single fare on all lines now or hereafter owned or operated by said company, and also to give and receive like transfers to and from all the lines of other street railways upon any equitable basis that can be agreed upon by said companies. And in case of failure of any two of said companies to agree upon such equitable basis of transfer, the question shall be submitted to arbitrators, one to be chosen by each of the disagreeing companies, a like number by the Common Council of the city of Plainfield, and a fifth by those so chosen, the decision of a majority of such arbitrators to be final and conclusive and binding upon each of the companies.

Section 15. That no license fee shall be charged for the running of the cars of the said company for the period of five years from the date of the adoption of this ordinance; that for each and every year next following said first term of five years there shall be paid to the city a license fee of twenty dollars per annum for every car operated by said company.

Section 16. That the cars of the said company shall be run under the following minimum headway, between six A. M. and ten A. M. fifteen minutes; between ten A. M. and three P. M. thirty minutes; between three P. M. and eight P. M. fifteen minutes; between eight P. M. and midnight thirty minutes. The said headway to be reduced when the service requires. Said company shall run its cars in both directions along all portions of its route so that there shall be an equal number of trips each way daily.

Section 17. That when any improvements or other method of furnishing the power for the propulsion of cars by electricity other than that determined to be a practical success, by a commission consisting of three electrical engineers, one to be selected by the Common Council, one by the said company, and the third by the two so chosen, such company shall within six months after the passage of a resolution by the Common Council requiring the same to be done, and notice thereof given to said company adopt such improvements or take down their overhead construction, and substitute therefor such improvements or new methods of propulsion; provided such commission may be appointed at any time the Common Council may by resolution require, and the said company shall appoint its representative within thirty days after the adoption of such resolution, or forfeit the permission hereby given; and if such commission shall report in favor of the adoption of such improvements or method for propulsion of cars by electricity hereby permitted, another commission or commissions may be appointed as often as the Common Council may require in the same manner and subject to the same conditions.

Section 18. In case such substitution is made, or the said company shall forfeit the permission hereby given by refusal to appoint a member of the commission as in the last section provided for, the Common Council may order the poles and overhead construction of the said company taken down, and the said company shall within ninety days from the service of such order upon the President or agent of said company take down and remove such poles and overhead construction, and restore the pavement of the street or streets to its original condition within that time. In case the poles and overhead construction are not removed or the street restored to its original condition by any company within ninety days from the service of such order, the same shall be done by the Street Commissioner at the expense of said company, and the company shall in that case pay all expenses connected therewith on demand, and in case the city shall remove such poles and overhead construction, the same shall thereupon become and be the property of the city.

Section 19. That said company upon the final adoption of this ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges granted hereby shall as a condition precedent file with the City Clerk of the city of Plainfield a contract to be executed by said company and duly approved by the Corporation Counsel wherein said company covenant and agree with the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield to abide by and perform all the matters and things herein on the part of said company to be observed, kept and performed; that it will at any and all times hereafter fully indemnify and protect the city of Plainfield of and from any and all suits, actions and proceedings that may be brought and maintained by any person or corporation for, on account of or by reason of, the adoption or maintenance by said company, its successors or assigns of said electric system aforesaid, or the construction or maintenance of said electric system, or anything connected therewith, or any act of omission or commission by said company, its successors or assigns or any of its agents or servants, at any time or times, and shall whenever requested by said city, fully defend any and every such action, suit or proceeding.

Section 20. That said company shall also at the same time herein above specified for filing said contract file a bond to the city in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the Common Council and corporation counsel of said city, conditioned for the full and faithful keeping, observing and performance of the terms and conditions in this ordinance contained on part of said company to be kept, observed or performed. And in case the conditions or terms upon which said company is granted permission to locate its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the city reserves the right to revoke the permission herein granted, to remove the tracks of the said company and all the connections observed by the streets of the city by the said company, its successors or assigns.

PLOTTERS ARRESTED

They Were After Bachelor Robertson's Millions.

THE BOGUS WIDOW CONFESSED.

Receiving No Money from the Conspirators She Exposed the Scheme.

The Conspiracy Was Hatched at Stamford, Conn.—Lawyer Cohen Instructs the Woman How to Act Her Part—Drilled Into a Recital of the Dead Millionaire's Peculiarities—To be Arraigned To-day.

NEW YORK, April 6.—For some time Inspector Byrnes has been endeavoring to get at the bottom of a conspiracy concocted several months ago to obtain possession of the estate of the bachelor millionaire, Loring A. Robertson, who died at the Hotel St. George on October 10 last, and has just bagged five, the whole number of persons who were party to the plot.

Their names are Cassie Helen Brooks, Byron W. Cohen, a lawyer of this city; James Daskam, of Stamford, Conn.; Edward L. Studwell and Mrs. West.

The conspiracy was hatched in Stamford, in which place all of the implicated parties originally lived. The scheme originated with Daskam, who shortly after Robertson's death asked Studwell to secure a woman to impersonate Robertson's widow. Studwell procured Mrs. West and took her to Cohen's office to make the necessary affidavits. It was decided by Daskam next day, however, that Mrs. West was too old and unattractive, and Cassie Brooks, who better answered the requirements, was substituted for her. Cohen liked her appearance and instructed her in her role. She was thereafter to call herself Helen Robertson and was furnished with a photograph of Robertson and drilled into a recital of that gentleman's conspicuous peculiarities.

Cohen then took Miss Brooks before MAX MOSES, a notary, and obtained her signature to affidavits alleging that she was Robertson's widow, having lived with him as his wife at various places mentioned. Subsequently she petitioned for letters of administration on Robertson's estate, and was taken by Daskam to Philadelphia to keep her out of the way of Evarts, Choate & Beaman, counsel for Robertson's heirs.

Receiving no money from the conspirators and becoming alarmed at the increasing complications, Miss Brooks sought the advice of a friend, upon which she communicated the details of the plot to District-Attorney Nicoll, resulting in the arrest of the plotters, who will be arraigned this afternoon.

THE SLEEP-FASTING MATCH.

The Two Contestants Will Either Go Crazy or Die.

DETROIT, Mich., April 6.—No sporting event in years has attracted the attention of the sleep-fasting match during the past 24 hours. Up to 9 o'clock to-day two men, Cunningham and Townsend, had fought sleep with success for 160 hours, and 10,000 people saw them continue the fight.

Wonderland's turnstile clicked and clicked all yesterday, and the house was not big enough to hold the crowds. Old man Townsend is a wreck. He dares not sit down or stop his racing up and down the platform for a single minute for fear he will fall asleep. Cunningham is crazy and likely to drop out at any minute. He says the whole thing seems like a dream, and half the time he does not know what is going on.

Two doctors are in attendance ready to take charge of the man that fails. Doctors say that neither man is entirely sane, and that when the fast is up this afternoon they will require the closest watching. They think the men will either go crazy or die, if allowed to sleep more than 15 minutes at a time, and have prepared a place for their reception the minute the fast is over.

Paymaster McClure's Murderers.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., April 6.—A prominent Italian merchant of this city told a reporter that Bevivino, one of the murderers of Paymaster McClure, was dead. In proof of this statement he showed a letter announcing that Bevivino had died in prison while serving a 20 years' sentence. Vallila, the other murderer, is still alive and believed to be at liberty. The general belief here is that his extradition will be demanded by Secretary Blaine.

Bank President Harper Dead.

PITTSBURG, April 6.—John Harper, president of the Pittsburg Clearing House and of the Bank of Pittsburg, died at his residence in this city at an early hour, aged 80 years. At one time Mr. Harper was a member of the Ohio Senate and was for years conspicuous in the politics of the Buckeye State.

Boston Electrotypers' Strike Settled.

BOSTON, April 6.—The electrotypers' strike, which has been on since February 25, has been satisfactorily settled, and today every union electrotyper was in his old place.

FLAMES AT LOWELL.

The Edson Block Burned and the Masonic Temple Damaged.

LOWELL, Mass., April 6.—The Edson Block, owned by the Winan heirs of Baltimore, was burned last evening. C. J. Maynard & Co. lose $30,000; H. C. Church G Son, $6,000; other losses swell the aggregate to about $90,000.

The fire spread to the Masonic Temple adjoining, and this, with its contents, was badly damaged. C. A. Mitchell & Co., who were located on the first floor, lost their entire stock of shoes valued at $20,000. The Public Library, with 41,000 volumes, located on the second floor, was badly damaged. There is an insurance on the Library of $20,000.

In the Masons' quarters, fitted up at an expense of $20,000, the damage was principally by water. About 900 Knights Templars' regalias, worth about $22,000, were greatly damaged by the water and smoke. The Goodyear Rubber Company suffered a small loss by water. The building was damaged about $7,000.

THE ABDUCTED BOY HEIR.

A Belief that Harry Donovan Has Been Spirited Away to Europe.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 6.—Miss Clara Leete, the woman who abducted Harry Donovan, the 7-year-old boy, from Wooster school Friday afternoon, was arrested last evening in Fair Haven.

Miss Leete claims she did not know she was committing a criminal offense. She says Mrs. Lydia W. Rankin, of Brooklyn, the boy's grandmother, worked upon her sympathies and induced her to take the boy from the school.

It is believed that she has given valuable information to City Attorney Daily and the police think that the boy is now on his way to Europe, but others, including the father, believe he is hidden somewhere in this State.

DEPOSITORS WILL LOSE.

The Stockbridge Savings Bank Will Probably Go Into the Hands of a Receiver.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., April 6.—Bank Commissioner Chapin announced to the trustees of the Stockbridge Savings Bank that he had decided to put the bank in the hands of a receiver. They asked for a delay, and action was withheld until today.

Poor loans aggregating $44,000 and Willis' defalcation of $29,000 are what necessitated this step. Willis' bond of $25,000 will probably make good his defalcation. There is no way, however, to make good the poor loans.

The loans were really the cause of the wrecking of the bank, but Willis' embezzlement helped the disaster. The depositors will probably lose 25 per cent.

Tragedy in a Court Room.

DENVER, Col., April 6.—Thomas Hefner, who has been on trial in the Criminal Court here for the murder of Chinaman Jion Lay in this city last fall, was brought into court during the morning to hear the verdict of the jury, which had been out since Saturday evening. When the verdict "murder in the second degree" was read, Heffner was seen to raise a small vial to his mouth and swallow the contents. Physicians were called and a stomach pump was applied, which saved the life of the would-be suicide. The vial contained arsenic, and would have killed 20 men.

Great Grand Army Gathering.

DECATUR, Ill., April 6.—The town is painted red, white and blue with decorations to welcome the 4,000 delegates and the thousands of visitors to the encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which begins to-day, the silver anniversary of the order. General Veazey, Commander-in-Chief, Commander Distin, Mrs. John A. Logan, General Lew Wallace, ex-Governor Oglesby and Governor Fifer and staff will be among the notables in attendance.

He Made False Entries.

LOWELL, Mass., April 6.—It is now stated that Stephen C. Gallagher who was discharged some time ago from the position of clerk in the City Treasurer's office, is an embezzler. Immediately after his discharge Gallagher disappeared and his present whereabouts is not known. He covered up his stealings by a well planned system of false entries. The amount of his stealings is not yet known, as his thieving has been going on for three or four years.

Terrific Storm in Scotland.

LONDON, April 6.—A terrific gale is sweeping over Scotland and numerous wrecks are reported along the northern coast. At Peterhead, Aberdeen, the whole population is on the shore watching the struggles of the fishing vessels to make safely for land.

Germany Offers to Arbitrate.

BERLIN, April 6.—It is rumored here that the German government has offered to arbitrate between Italy and the United States.

Opposed to Women Delegates.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 6.—The East German Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by a vote of 41 to 1, has decided against admitting women as delegates to the General Conference.

THE STRIKERS QUIET

Work Resumed by the Frick Company at Morehead.

SOLDIERS GUARDING THE WORKS.

The Men Receive a Check for $10,000 to Carry on the Fight.

An Attack Expected from the Strikers' Wives—They Say the Troops Will Not Molest Them—Men Brought from Hamburg With Tags on Their Coats—A Slight Scare This Morning.

MT. PLEASANT, Pa., April 6.—The Frick Company resumed work at Morewood today, and the several companies of the militia are planted about the works.

Trouble is feared, if not from the men, from their wives. It is reported that the women will try their hand. They say the soldiers will treat them more leniently than they would the men.

Early this morning great excitement was created by the reports of four shots from the direction of the Morewood works. They came from the vicinity of where a corporal's guard was detailed to protect John Parfit, a labor boss, who was sheltering a dozen men who intend to go to work. Messengers started for the scene and returned to say that two drunken strikers had been firing outside the lines.

John McBride spent some time here today looking for men who had been brought into this region by the H. C. Frick Coke Company.

He said that while it was easy to find men whose fare had been paid from New York, it was more difficult to discover those who had come across the water by previous arrangement with people on the other side. "We have the written contracts," he said, "of 19 men who were brought here from Lancashire, England. In this case there is not the shadow of doubt of the importation.

"We also know of cases where men were brought here from Hamburg with tags in the lapels of their coats bearing he address of the 'H. C. Frick Coke Company.'" Mr. McBride said he could not see any reason why the militia should be kept here any longer. He expressed the opinion that there was not any fear of further disturbances arising.

The strikers will continue to visit in large bodies the works which have resumed, and will, they say, endeavor by peaceful means to persuade the men at work to join their ranks. A check for $10,000 from headquarters was received by the local officials in Scottdale and will be distributed among the men to-day.

GERMANY BOBS UP.

The Kaiser Makes an Inquiry About His Subjects in America.

BERLIN, April 6.—It is stated that the German government has sent instructions to its Minister at Washington to ascertain what, if any, guarantee of protection the American government gives to German subjects resident in the United States. The present controversy between America and Italy is viewed with no little satisfaction at Berlin, and the worst possible form is given to it by the Germans generally.

The motive is not so much unfriendliness to the United States as to put a stop to German immigration, which is already making itself severely felt in the lack of laborers for agriculture. The Conservative party and the large landholders generally are in favor of prohibiting emigration for all except the Jews, as is done in Russia. The government is not prepared to go this far, but none the less appreciate the effect of the drain upon the industries of Germany.

The impression, therefore, is sought to be created that America is a lawless country and that scenes like the New Orleans massacre are of ordinary occurrence.

DEPENDS ON THE TORIES.

Parnell Issues a Circular to His Supporters in Ireland.

DUBLIN, April 6.—Mr. Parnell has issued a circular to his supporters throughout Ireland requesting them to forward to this city the number of Parnellites, Conservatives and Gladstonians in each district, and the strength of the different parties in the various public boards.

This action of Mr. Parnell is taken as evidence of his intention to rely on the support of the Conservatives in the coming Parliamentary elections in this country.

The Rejection of Davitt.

LONDON, April 6.—The refusal of the government to accept Michael Davitt as Irish representative on the Labor Commission is generally approved by both parties in England. The London trades unionists do not conceal their satisfaction, and their leader, Tom Mann, who proposes himself to issue a labor paper, is said to be gratified at the repudiation of Davitt, whom Mann and his fellow-unionists claim to regard as a foreigner, with no right to interfere in the labor interests of Great Britain.

Socialists Tired of Police Persecution.

LONDON, April 6.—The Socialists at Dresden are determined to put a stop to the police persecution to which they have been for some time past subjected, and they have given notice that any police officer infringing upon their legal rights will be prosecuted to the extent of their ability. Money is being raised for the purpose.

The German Fleet Ordered to Chili.

BERLIN, April 6.—Germany has ordered the whole German squadron in Chinese waters to proceed to Chili. This is due to protests from Hamburg merchants to the Chancellor that German exports from Chili are ceasing, owing to the German vessels being unprotected.

KILLED BY HER HUSBAND

A Preacher and Prize Fighter Hacks His Wife to Pieces.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., April 6.—Edward W. Hallingar, colored, who, it is said, has been a preacher and a pugilist, murdered his wife in a most brutal manner yesterday. The woman had recently left him on account of cruel treatment.

Hallingar, while besotted with liquor, forced an entrance into the house where his wife was stopping, and began beating her on the head with a lather's hatchet. Again and again he sank the weapon into the woman's skull. Even after the woman was dead the infuriated brute kept striking her with the hatchet and when he finally desisted the woman's skull was crushed to a bleeding mass.

Both her arms were nearly severed from the body, these having been cut while she raised them in an endeavor to ward off the blows.

Hallingar then endeavored to kill himself. He had cut himself severely about the head when the police arrived and disarmed him.

The refusal of the woman to again live with him was the reason given by the murderer for his terrible crime.

THEY PLAYED BARBER.

Two Youngsters Cut a Child's Face in a Horrible Manner.

WASHINGTON, N. J., April 6.—Mrs. James MacNerney, of Karrsville, left her three children, aged 9, 7 and 3, at home, while she went to the store, and when she returned she found the youngest lying on the floor covered with blood, with a razor by her side. The child was very weak from the loss of blood, though not dead. Her little face was one mass of cuts, and in the neck was a huge gash that came within a very little of cutting the jugular vein.

The other children were finally discovered in a closet half asleep, their little hands covered with blood. They explained to their mother that they had been playing barber and trying to shave the baby, who would not keep still and so was cut. They became frightened at the blood and hid themselves.

The baby's wounds were dressed and she will recover, though she may have three bad scars on her face.

TERRIBLE REVENGE.

A Wronged Woman's Brother Kills Her Betrayer, Two Others and Himself.

PEMBINA, N. D., April 6.—One of the bloodiest tragedies in the history of Pembina County occurred near Bowermont yesterday at the residence of Robert Irwin, where Frederick Bartlett shot and mortally wounded Thomas McConnell and H. G. Hill, shot Irwin in the abdomen, and an hour later blew his own brains out. McConnell was shot five times and Hill twice.

It appears that Fred and Thomas Bartlett, knowing that McConnell was at Irwin's house, went there for the purpose of killing him, claiming that he misled their sister under promise of marriage, and then married another woman.

Trouble for American Fishermen.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., April 6.—The reported action of Captain Jacobs, of the fishing schooner Brunhilda, who, it is alleged, escaped giving bonds for a violation of Newfoundland's fishing laws by a breach of good faith, has caused a good deal of adverse criticism here. Captain Jacobs' action is greatly to be regretted, especially as Newfoundland has granted to American fishermen many privileges, which she has withdrawn from the Canadians and the French. These privileges may now be withdrawn, and serious trouble for the American fishermen in those waters may follow.

Most Appealed for Anarchy.

PITTSBURG, April 6.—In the undertaking rooms of H. Samson on Sixth avenue, this city, in the presence of nearly 1,000 persons, the obsequies of Anarchist Joseph Frick took place yesterday afternoon. Johann Most delivered the eulogy and took advantage of the occasion to make an appeal for anarchy. The dead man was attired in black. A blood red scarf encircled the throat and a blood red rose was pinned to the coat lapel. Around the foot of the bier floated the folds of a carmine anarchist flag.

Cattle Dying Mysteriously.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 6.—Farmers, milkmen and cattle raisers of New Haven and Fairfield counties are greatly scared on account of a strange disease that is killing cows rapidly in this region. The malady is almost always fatal; all remedies are valueless. It seems to be a sort of kidney disease and is accompanied by symptoms of other complaints. A cow lives only a short time after it has attacked her. In the Naugatuck Valley its ravages have been very great.

Mill Operatives Paid by the Hour.

FALL RIVER, Mass., April 6.—Beginning to-day certain of the help in the mills of this city will be paid by the hour instead of by the day as heretofore. The action of the mills is the result of the movement to reduce the number of working hours per week being made in the Legislature and which bids fair to be successful.

Threw Vitriol in His Face.

BALTIMORE, April 6.—Infuriated at the thought of her disgrace, Miss Lizzie Uhl met George Kaiser, whom she charges with having betrayed her, and threw the contents of a large bottle of vitriol in his face, badly burning the whole right side of his head and probably destroying the sight of his right eye.

BLAINE IS RETICENT

Not Yet Ready to Give Out His Reply to Premier Rudini.

FAVA GOING HOME ON SATURDAY

An Italian Paper Protests Against the Statements of the American Press.

Congressman Mills Said to Be Out of the Speakership Contest—Canada's Delegates Call on the Secretary of State To-day—Some Talk of Sending Minister Blair to Japan Instead of China.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Secretary Blaine is keeping secret his latest correspondence with the Marquis di Rudini, the Italian Premier, regarding the New Orleans tragedy. A State Department official said this forenoon that he thought the text of Rudini's cablegram and Blaine's reply might be given to the press to-day.

Just why Mr. Blaine withholds the correspondence is not explained, except on the ground that it is a custom of his not to make public State matters until assurances are given that those to whom letters or dispatches are addressed have received them. It is hinted that the Secretary of State may have embodied in his reply a recital of the facts regarding the murder by Italians near Wilkesbarre two years ago of Paymaster Bernard McClure and Stable Boss Hugh Flanagan.

He has received the necessary documents from District Attorney Darte, giving details of the crimes committed by "Red-Nosed Mike," Giuseppe Bevivino and Vincenzo Villali. The last two escaped to Italy, with $12,000 belonging to Contractor McFadden. It may be that Mr. Blaine has mentioned the money as an offset to the present Italian indemnity claim. A demand for the surrender of Bevivino and Villali has either been made in Mr. Blaine's latest communication to Italy's Premier, or it will be very soon after the message reaches Rome.

Baron Fava Going Home.

ROME, April 6.—Minister Fava will sail for Italy on April 11. The Opinione newspaper protests against the alarming statements of the American press as intended to excite feeling against Italy and obscure the real position, which concerns the whole world.

WILL MILLS RETIRE?

It is Said that He Will Not Enter the Contest for the Speakership.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—It is stated that Congressman Mills will not be in the race for the Speakership, and that the fact will be formally announced as soon as the opponents of Crisp feel confident that they can beat him.

The plan is for Mills to come out in an interview stating that he has come to the conclusion that the Speakership should go to a Northern man, and suggesting Judge Holman, of Indiana, as the man.

Circular from Secretary Rusk.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Secretary Rusk, in an official circular, gives notice that the regulations made last February for the transportation of cattle from the area designated by the regulations as infected with the contagious disease known as splenetic fever apply to the movement of cattle North for immediate slaughter. The transportation of cattle from this area for feeding or for any other purpose except immediate slaughter is, the Secretary says, prohibited by the act of Congress of May 29, 1884.

Cadets for the Revenue Marine Service.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The Secretary of the Treasury has decided to fill the 15 vacancies existing in the grade of third lieutenant in the revenue marine service by the appointment of graduates of the United States naval academy in excess of the number required by the naval service. This action will do away with the necessity of re-establishing the marine training school, which was formerly maintained at an annual expense of $30,000.

Will Ex-Senator Blair Go to Japan?

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Ex-Senator Henry W. Blair says he expects to sail for China within the next two weeks. There has been some talk of making him the Minister to Japan instead of to China. If Mr. Blair does not leave for the Celestial Empire pretty soon, the report may prove to have some foundation.

Canada's Delegates Will Call To-day.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Secretary Blaine will receive the Canadian delegates this afternoon and hear what they have to say on the reciprocity question. The first meeting will be informal, the desire being to ascertain whether a basis can be reached for formal treaty negotiations.

Shot by a Police Officer.

CHICAGO, April 6.—Officer Uhrig shot Edward Mahoney dead and wounded John Manahan about 2:30 a. m. The men were trying to break in the door of a saloon at 278 West Lake street, where they claimed they had been robbed, and when the policeman advised them to go home they turned on him and begun beating him unmercifully. Uhrih then drew his revolver and fired at close range with the above result.

To Serve a Writ on Bulkeley.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 6.—State Attorney Doolittle has returned from South Carolina. The Supreme Court will be in session to-morrow, and it is thought that at that time acting under instructions from Judge Morris, Mr. Doolittle will bring quo warranto proceedings before Judge Prentice. A writ will be issued, and a Hartford Sheriff will serve it on Governor Bulkeley before he starts on his European trip.

MEETING IN PHŒNIX PARK.

Parnell Addresses a Gathering Against Imprisonment for Political Offenses.

DUBLIN, April 6.—The Irish Amnesty Association held a meeting in Phœnix Park to protest against the continued imprisonment of Irish and Irish-American political prisoners. About 2,000 persons attended, and Mr. Parnell was one of the speakers.

Mr. Parnell accused the Liberals of always making political prisoners, while the Tories released them. It might occur again, he said, that John Daly and others convicted of political crimes during the tenure of the Liberals would be liberated by the Conservatives. Mr. Gladstone did not hesitate in 1886 to ascertain the opinions of dynamiters in America as to whether they would accept the Home Rule bill, and he had even received these persons at Hawarden. Why, therefore, had he not released these prisoners, who were certainly no worse than those with whom he had bargained?

A voice—"Why did you not make their release a condition of accepting the Liberal alliance?"

Some Healyites here raised a cry—"Kill him. Lynch him."

Mr. Parnell stood unmoved and replied without a quaver: "The Irish party has never made conditions, and the prisoners would rather rot than that it should."

The meeting passed resolutions calling upon Irishmen at home and abroad to work to secure the release of the prisoners, and demanded their speedy and unconditional liberation.

HIS VOTE COST $16,000,000.

An Alleged Reason Why Senator Cameron Voted Against the Elections Bill.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 6.—The Constitution prints a story by a United States Senator purporting to give the real reason why Senator Cameron, of Pennsylvania, aligned himself against the Elections bill.

"That vote cost $16,000,000," says this Senator. "Six Republicans were against the bill, but one more was needed. While the debate was going on Cameron was working for the correction of an error in the Tariff bill in the interest of the binding twine people, which, if not corrected, would have cut off sixteen millions of duty annually. It was in our power to kill either this resolution or the Elections bill. We gave Cameron the alternative, and he agreed to vote with us on the day after his re-election."

THREATENED WITH DEATH.

Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, His Mother and a Minister Warned.

SOFIA, April 6.—Prince Ferdinand and his mother, Princess Clementine, have received letters threatening them with death if they do not leave the country. M. Greascoff has also been threatened with assassination if he does not resign his position as Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Evidence has been received which indicates that these threatening missives emanated from an official who is connected with the Russian embassy in this city. Diplomatic action has been taken in the matter, pending the result of which the suspected official is being held as a prisoner at the embassy.

Want Their Postmaster Retained.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 6.—An indignation meeting, which was largely attended by Republicans from Spring Lake, Manasquan and other towns in this vicinity, was held at Manasquan for the purpose of denouncing the action of Postmaster General Wanamaker in revoking the appointment of Lincoln Nesbitt as postmaster at Spring Lake and retaining Miss Josie Yard, who was appointed by Mr. Cleveland, in the position. Strong resolutions were adopted and forwarded to Mr. Wanamaker.

AN ELECTRIC RAILROAD FAILURE.

What Happened in a City Where the Council Refused the Trolley System.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 3.—The works of the Electric Traction Manufacturing Company have been closed, and the employes, fifty in number, discharged. The electric motor cars have been taken off and laid up, and the two years' experience has ended in failure and loss.

The attempt made to utilize the motors was on the Upper Magazine and Citizens' lines, but they gave out and broke down so often as to be serious hindrance to travel. The members of the City Council were so sanguine of the success of this enterprise that they refused to grant permission to the Carrolton Road to adopt the overhead wire system.

THE CITY STILL HOLDS THE FORT.

The Water Company's Effort to Set Aside the Order of Court Obtained by the City Does Not Succeed.

Counselor Craig A. Marsh, representing the city in the water-works fight, was notified Saturday that to-day Counselor Frank Bergen, representing the Plainfield Water Supply Company, would apply for an order revoking and discharging the limitation on the effect of the writ of certiorari as a supersedeas in the above stated cause.

The argument came off this morning. The grounds of the application ware that the Water Company wanted to go on with its work of laying pipes all over the city, and that the City had not answered the Company's brief, which was handed in two weeks ago, and that the City had no right to repeal the charter of the Water Company any way.

The City replied that that the matter was too important to be rushed through in the way desired by the Water Company's counsel. The questions involved were also of great difficulty. The City claimed that the so-called Plainfield Water Supply Company, which brought this suit, was not a corporation at all; that the present Directors were not the lawful successors of the original incorporators; that the City Charter of 1872 repealed pro tanto the Water Company' Charter of 1869; that the City Government possessed inherent power to protect the public against danger to the public health as it did in the ordinance enacted. These were some of the questions in the case. $50,000 or more had in recent years been expended in improving Plainfield roads, and to permit the Water Company to go on and tear up these roads before the decision of the important questions raised by the city would be unjust. Mr. Bergen replied affirming the undoubted validity of the Company's incorporation, and insisted that the chartered rights of the Company should not be allowed to be overcome by a city ordinance.

The Court did not grant the order. The city was given two weeks longer in which to answer the brief of prosecutor, and the Company may then renew its application if the city's brief is not in. This leaves the order previously secured by the city in full force and effect. The police have instructions to arrest any one who may attempt to dig up the streets outside of the short line from the Company's pumps to Cedar brook.

The Fight Over Job Male's Wealth to Begin on June 2.

At ten o'clock in the morning of June 2 an effort will be made before the prerogative court at Trenton to have admitted to probate the alleged nuncupative will of Job Male that THE PRESS has told all about.

So far thirty-two heirs-at-law, devisees, legatees and next of kin have been discovered, and the most of them will be on hand, June 2, with lawyers to fight the proceedings.

Blackstone says a nuncupative will is "a will made by word of mouth only, and depending on oral testimony for proof, though afterward reduced to writing."

It will be remembered by those who read of the deathbed scene exclusively published in THE PRESS, that that's just the kind of a will ex-Mayor Male left. He dictated his bequests as he was dying, to Counselor March—who was present instead of Counselor E. W. Runyon, it is said, because it was suddenly necessary to get a lawyer in a hurry, and the former happened to be near at hand. There were also present at the death bed, A. C. Baldwin, Drs. T. S. Davis, G. W. Endicott and others, who heard the dying man assert that it was all his last will and testament.

The Great Century Run.

At a meeting of delegates from the various cycling clubs interested in the Great Century Run of 100 miles from Newark to Philadelphia, which was held Saturday evening at the club-house of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, it was decided to hold this popular annual event on Saturday, June 13. The run will start from Newark, at 4 a. m. On arrival here the party will be served with a luncheon at the club house, and will then assemble in a body, opposite the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, where a photograph will be taken. The wheelmen will leave here at 7 a. m. The following Committee was elected to make the necessary arrangements and take charge of the run:

Dolsen, captain Century Wheelmen; Philadelphia; L. N. Thorne, captain Atalanta Wheelmen, Newark; Waldo E. Fuller, ex-captain Brooklyn Bicycle Club, chairman.

FIRE-BUGS AGAIN.

Another Incendiary Blaze in the Heart of the City.

That fire-bugs are again at work in Plainfield there is no longer any doubt. Within two weeks three fires of mysterious but undoubted incendiary origin have occurred in the heart of the city. The first was that in which Hugo Weigman lost his life, Saturday evening, March 21. The second was that which destroyed the Woodruff barn. The third occurred last Saturday evening.

On that evening, at 8:20, Alonzo Ayres saw flames issuing from an old barn just back of the Stiles building on East Front street. He immediately procured from Shaw's pharmacy a key to box 12, from which he sent in an alarm. The department responded quickly, and a big crowd of people turned out. The firemen worked well, and though the flames, fanned by a high wind, were raging fiercely, and were threatening the Stiles, the post-office, and other important buildings, at 9:35 every spark was extinguished.

The barn in which the fire originated was entirely consumed. It was owned by a Mrs. Shepherd, and was occupied by hackman Dennis O'Brien, who lost a wagon and a stage. O'Brien's horse was saved by A. M. Griffen at the risk of his life. Fireman Auguste Saltzman had his hands badly blistered while saving portable property.

The fire communicated to a frame tenement building in the adjoinining alley, occupied by several families of colored people. Of this the roof was burned off, and the house was flooded by water, which damaged the household goods considerably. The firemen and police think they have clues which may lead to the arrest of suspected parties.

WANTS THE ROAD BY HIS PROPERTY.

Here's An Owner of 460 Feet Frontage Who is Begging for the Electric Railway to Pass Him.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—You are filling the bill as a public benefactor in advocating the electric street railroad and in advocating the trolley system which was lately inspected by our worthy Mayor and Common Council. The Broadway property owners made a mistake in remonstrating against it. I am in hopes, however, that we may get another route to Netherwood by the way of Peace street, out East Fifth street to Richmond, through Richmond to Putnam, out Putnam to Woodland, and then toward Netherwood.

I am satisfied that property owners on said line will be benefited ten per cent. the day said ordinance passes. Occupants of our dwellings are complaining because there is no non-expensive means of getting from their residence to any other portion of the city, whereas if they had the advantages of street cars they would learn more of Plainfield in one-hour's ride than they have obtained in five years' residence here. Please recommend to the property owners on the above route mentioned, the approval of said line. I will head the petition as owner of 460 feet between Broadway and Richmond street. E. C. M.

THE CRESCENT LEAGUE LEADS.

Its Whist Players Have Made the Highest Number of Points in One Game, and the Highest of All.

The whist tournament for the Central railroad championship progresses slowly. So far the Crescent League sextette of this city is ahead both on the general total and on the highest number of points made in one evening.

The highest scores of one evening have been:—Plainfield Crescent League, 299; Elizabeth Athletic Club, 285; Fanwood Club, 271; N. J. Athletic Club, Bergen Point, 268; Westfield Athletic Club, 238. The prizes are to be awarded not to the club winning the greatest number of games, but to the one making the most points. The score at present is:

	Played.	Won.
Crescent League	2	548
N. J. A. C.	2	534
Westfield A. C.	2	475
Elizabeth A. C.	1	285
Fanwood Club	1	271

The next games will be played on Wednesday evening: Crescent League vs. Westfield A. C., at Westfield, and Elizabeth vs. N. J. A. C., at Bergen Point.

Don't Miss This Play.

As first exclusively told in THE PRESS, Company C, Phil Kearny Guard, of Elizabeth, have been secured to appear in "Shenandoah" at Music Hall this evening.

"Shenandoah" is the greatest American drama ever written. This assertion does not make it so, but the testimony of the American people is strongly in support of it. Bronson Howard's play has been presented in every important city of the United States in the past year. It has played right along to crowded houses, and so pleased the public that they have paid nearly $350,000 to see it. Every night for a year "Shenandoah" has been played; not a single interruption of a performance has occurred.

Dr. Dean's Dyspepsia Pills are unquestionably good They are, in my opinion, all they claim to be. I have tried them and found in them what I needed. I believe they will cure Dyspepsia, and that is saying much for any medicine. I am glad, therefore, to give my testimony.

THE NEW CHAPEL DEDICATED.

A RED-LETTER DAY AMONG LOCAL METHODISTS.

After Years of Patient Waiting, the Evona Mission Has a Permanent Home at Last.—Interesting History of the Mission, by Mr. Haff.

The Plainfield Methodists had a veritable jubilee, Sunday, when their new chapel at Monroe avenue and Fourth street was thrown open to the public and formally dedicated.

For weeks they had been looking forward with great pleasure to this event; and when the day was over, their pastor, the Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell, said that he and his people had never had a happier time.

Those who took occasion to inspect the new chapel speedily reached the conclusion already recorded in THE PRESS, that it was a marvel of neatness, beauty and convenience.

The chapel is the outgrowth of the work of a mission that has been kept alive at Evona by a small band of earnest workers. As soon as the Plainfield Methodist Episcopal church took charge of the mission, four liberal members of the congregation promptly put their hands into their pockets and contributed the sum of $1,500 for the purchase of the building site of the new chapel. The chapel cost $6,000, and is marvelously cheap for the money. It is handsome and commodious, and a gratifying structure in every way. With all the class rooms thrown open into one large hall, there is room for a big congregation. At night, when lighted up by clusters of electric lamps, a very pretty exterior effect is obtained. The light streaming through the stained-glass windows serves as a beacon to hitherto churchless people. The chapel is situated just opposite the Irving public school. It is in a neighborhood where large numbers will be reached and benefited.

At yesterday's services, the Rev. Mr. Mitchell gave opportunity for the making of subscriptions to the building fund. The result was the raising of $1,140 in the morning, $160 in the afternoon, and nearly $250, at night, making a total of almost $1,550 for the day.

Bishop Andrews, of New York city, preached a powerful sermon to large congregations, morning and evening, and in the evening formally dedicated the building to God's purposes, after receiving it from J. W. Jackson, who represented the Board of Trustees. The other trustees who gathered in front of the pulpit during the dedicatory services were Edwin Loomis, W. R. Codington, George R. Cornell, and Garret C. Packer. In the afternoon brief platform addresses were made by James McGee, J. W. Jackson, Geo. Angleman, Walter McGee, and other laymen. Mr. Angleman was the first, and Mr. Walter McGee is the present, superintendent of the mission. F. E. Kinsman, representing the Baptist laymen, extended a greeting from the Baptist church. Mayor Place of North Plainfield gave similar good cheer from the Crescent Avenue Presbyterians. Thus the various denominations gave words of kindness and promises of brotherly support, and gave liberal contributions as well. During the afternoon Willard Haff, who has long been identified with the mission as one of its most zealous workers, read the following interesting historical sketch:

The history of the Evona Union Sunday-school from its organization in 1876 until 1885 is without official record, and the result of the efforts of your historian to ascertain dates being a collection of conjectural verities, this record is necessarily limited to periods. The absence of official record also limits the history of the school to incidents of recollection.

In the summer of 1876 the Evona community included a number of families of recent residency, who, realizing the impracticability of sending their children to Sunday-school in Plainfield or Dunellen, had planned to open a school in a barn. Just at this time, George Angleman, a member of the Dunellen Methodist church, sought the co-operation of his pastor, the Rev. Mr. Woodruff, and announced to the people a union service to be held regularly Sunday afternoons on the second floor of a building owned by him, on the corner of Front street and Clinton avenue, Evona. The date of the opening cannot be ascertained, but the meeting was attended by all denominations, and was a joyful one, the consciousness of a vanishing paganism being a real element in the occasion. Mr. Angleman announced his intention to organize a Union Sunday-school, to be held previous to the preaching service, and after two or three weeks the school was opened, with Mr. Angleman as Superintendent, and an attendance of about fifteen scholars. In those first days zealous devotion to service was the character of the school, and has continued to be, even under great discouragement.

After a few weeks, the Rev. Mr. Brown, of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, united with Mr. Woodruff, and they alternately conducted the service. Both of these men were busy pastors, having their own services in their own churches every Sunday, notwithstanding which for many months the little congregation was made to feel that they gladly gave it of their best. The space that was being occupied consisted of three poorly-connecting rooms, the minister standing in a doorway, where he could be heard but not seen by the many less fortunate. In the spring, at a considerable cost, Mr. Angleman converted the loft of the building into a large, comfortable room, and obtained from the Methodist church in Dunellen the loan of seats and a pulpit. Entertainments were given, and the proceeds procured an organ and a small library.

Near the close of the first year, Mr. Angleman resigned the superintendency. The society was then strong; the congregation filled the room to overflowing; the prayer meetings were well attended and of unusual interest; the Bible class, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Schnellendreusler, had twenty members; and there was a large infant class which was taken by its faithful teacher, Miss Winslow, across the street each Sunday to Evona station, where the exercises were held. Within a brief period of the school's existence eleven of its scholars had united with the Presbyterian church of Dunellen, some of whom are still members of the school. The record of the first period ends with the roll of faithful workers:

Mrs. James Crane,	Miss Hattie Winslow,
" Annie Winslow,	" Annie Fuller,
" R. C. Dingee,	Mr. George Angleman,
" J. W. Price,	" William Coriell,
Mrs. Platt,	" Daniel Winslow,
Rev. Mr. Schnellendreusler.

In time, the building having passed from the possession of Mr. Angleman, a liquor saloon crept into the first floor, the second floor being the dwelling place of the proprietor. At a meeting in April, 1879, it was resolved to obtain a lease of the entire building, fifteen persons subscribing one dollar a month each, for the rent. James Dederick was appointed treasurer, and assumed the work of collecting and paying the rent. This became in time an arduous task, as subscribers left the neighborhood, but for eleven years, until the time of his departure from Evona in 1890, Mr. Dederick cheerfully performed this service.

The building being obtained, congregation and school moved down to the first floor, placing a janitor on the second and the infant class on the third floor. It had become necessary to ask aid from the neighboring ministers to fill the places of Mr. Woodruff and Mr. Brown, who had removed from Dunellen, and the responsibility of securing a minister for each Sunday was assumed by a few who for years performed a duty that must be undertaken to be appreciated.

The ministers of Plainfield, New Market and Dunellen, with various laymen, gave generous help, often rendered at times when they deserved much needed rest. Belonging to no mother church, the union nestling thrust itself under any wing that would hover over it for an hour.

That the causes affecting the school may be understood, it is well first to state what remains to be told of the preaching service up to the time that it was discontinued. Between 1880 and 1885 several families removed from Evona whose loss was sorely felt. One of these was Mrs. James Crane, a corner-stone in the organization, a very pastor to the young people, who loved and honored her. Thus the attendance at the meeting began to decline, until, being composed almost exclusively of members of the school, it became an injustice to tax those who came to help us; therefore, notwithstanding the willingness of James McGee to continue the service unaided, and his regret that such conclusion had been reached, it was decided to abandon the preaching service.

To return to the school: Mr. Angleman's place was supplied for a few months by Mr. Winslow, who was succeeded by J. Wilbur Price, to whose family the school owed much of its vitality. Wm. VanArsdale was the school's third Superintendent, and with his departure the school began to weaken. This was in the fall of 1882.

Mr. VanArsdale was succeeded by Edward Crane. Mr. Crane served about two years and was succeeded by Wm. Coriell, the school's eldest and honored member. During his superintendency the officers and teachers were girls and boys who had grown up in the school; foremost among them was Harry Dorrance. To the Evona Union Sunday-school is given the privilege of testifying to the worth of their beloved companion, who has reached the home whither by his perfect example he bids them follow. The losses that had affected the preaching service were sorely felt in the school, its number steadily diminishing since 1880, and in 1885 it had but one adult. The treasury was but little more than a name, it having been a sign of better days when at a business meeting their liabilities were met and a balance of sixty cents remained in the treasury. Their needs were provided for by petitioning. The young band was often sorrowful, yet, confident of God's blessing, had determined to do as long as something remained to be done.

Late in the fall of 1885, at the close of a service conducted by James McGee, who was much endeared to the school, a little group gathered to bid him good-night. Catching the mention of their weakness he spoke: "How would you like me to come and help you?" They said to each other: "Did we hear aright?" How the feet that were wont to drag wearily homeward seemed now hardly to touch the ground, hurrying to carry the good news. Two weeks from that day, with his hand on the helm, the buffeted little vessel glided into the safe waters that have tided her to the haven of safety.

On Nov. 30, 1885, Mr. McGee was elected Superintendent, Mr. Coriell being gladly relieved of a care which impaired health had rendered onerous. The number of officers and teachers at that time was ten, and the average attendance about sixty. Slowly but steadily the school gained in numbers, and anxiety gave way to restfulness. Comforts never dreamed of appeared, for the large store windows that displayed the school in lieu of wares were curtained; The New York Times, which had faithfully advertised Le Boutillier Brothers to the school for years, no longer shaded the transom; a bare floor no longer tempted the shuffler, and the glory of early days, a huge pulpit, was replaced by a lectern; but best of all the Moody and Sankey hymns, that had ceased to kindle heart or soul to praise, were to be given to the poor, and the Epworth Hymnal came. The Winter of 1885-86 was very severe, and the country roads were typical of their worst, but they were no barriers to the members of the Evona school, knowing that their beloved superintendent awaited their coming with his message from the Master.

In the early days of the school the idea of a Union chapel was discussed, and Isaac Rushmore offered to give the ground if the people would raise two thousand dollars for a building; but the generous offer was only passively appreciated, and the opportunity was lost. Until 1886 the building occupied by the school had afforded it necessary space, although in every other respect unsuited to its need, being illy ventilated, poorly lighted, and with steep and narrow stairways, up and down which infants were carried by their teacher; now it had outgrown the space; and, the impracticability of trying to erect a chapel being admitted, it was resolved to seek adoption by some society in Plainfield. A cordial invitation was given to join them from the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Heavenly Rest at Evona, but the motion for its acceptance failed.

In October, 1887, learning that the Baptist churches were projecting a mission, the school offered itself, and received reply that the Baptists did not think it practicable to bring their work to Evona. On December 3, 1887, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Superintendent be requested to state to the M. E. church of Plainfield that if they will come to Evona and occupy the field, this school will unite with them.

The following answer was received December 12, 1887:

The M. E. church of Plainfield having received the kind invitation of the Evona Union Sunday-school to take charge of their work, therefore;

Resolved, That this Board will be responsible for $1,000 towards a property to cost not less than $3,000, and with a debt of not over $1,000, and to be deeded to the Trustees of this Church in trust for the uses of the Methodist Episcopal denomination, and on such conditions will be responsible for carrying on the work.

Upon this no action was taken by the school, it being considered impossible to raise the required amount. During his charge of the school Mr. McGee's health was impaired, and on June 14, 1888, the assistant superintendent announced to the officers and teachers that he held the announcement of the resignation of their beloved superintendent.

That letter and the letter of acceptance from the school in reply bear testimony of the character of the school in the harmony of its mutual relations. It is believed that during the sixteen years of its existence the spirit of affectionate harmony has never been violated. On June 24, 1888, Mr. McGee's resignation was accepted, and the assistant superintendent, Mr. Price, took charge of the school for several months, part of that time coming each Sunday from Newark. Mr. Price was elected Superintendent in May, but owing to his removal from Evona his resignation was accepted with much regret, July 29, 1888.

Mr. Price was succeed by Willard Haff, whose connection with the school began as a little child. During the period of his charge came the glad tidings that action had been taken by the Methodist church in Plainfield in relation to the placing of a mission near Evona. In the Summer of 1890 the erection of the chapel was begun. To-day it is finished and stands awaiting our coming. In going out of the old school home for the last time we carry with us the memory of trials and blessings, and we pray that the three-fold benediction of old may rest upon our future:

May the Lord bless and keep us;
May the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us;
May the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace!

A Plainfield Chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution, to be Formed Later.

Mrs. Charlotte Louise Lawrence of the New York Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, would be glad if her sisters of Plainfield and neighborhood who are descended from Revolutionary ancestry, whether or not they may be already prepared with a full statement of their credentials (which can be drawn up later), would meet Mrs. Flora Adams Darling, Vice President-General of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and herself, at Morristown, Wednesday, April 15, at 11 o'clock a. m., to organize a New Jersey Chapter of the D. A. R.

It was at first proposed to organize two Chapters for the State of New Jersey, to which, as a State with an extraordinary Revolutionary history, it seemed to be entitled, one of which should have headquarters at Morristown and the other at Plainfield. But Mrs. Darling is of opinion that a single strong organization, with headquarters at Morristown where the headquarters of the Sons of the American Revolution is situated, would be best at present. The organization could hold meetings at Plainfield or elsewhere, alternately with meetings at Morristown, if found desirable, and the second New Jersey Chapter could be formed later if found convenient.

NO CHARGE AGAINST JOHNS.

His Alleged Arrest a Malicious Story That Originated Among Village Gossips.

Some busybody who is as yet unknown, but who will be fitly punished as soon as his identity is established, has been indulging in some very reprehensible work at Bound Brook.

Early last week this meddlesome individual started a story that cast gross reflection on the reputations of Jennie Davies and Richard Johns, two very estimable young people in the borough. The story had not spread far before it reached the ears of Benjamin Little, Jennie's grandfather. A fellow-Mason told him, in a friendly way, that he suspected that young Johns and young Ed. Bartow had evil designs against Miss Davis. The story so angered Mr. Little that he procured a pistol and started out with the intention of doing personal violence to the young men. Meeting the Rev. Mr. Johns, father of Richard, he told him what he had heard. As the result of the conversation that there took place, Mr. Little made a careful investigation, and that night went again to Mr. Johns, said that he was satisfied there was nothing in the charges, and apologized for his having believed them a single instant.

Meanwhile, however, certain gossips were spreading a story which finally became so elaborate in detail that they even had, in their own minds, young Johns arrested and bailed for trial on a most serious charge said to have been preferred by Miss Davies.

The story of the arrest was furnished to THE PRESS for publication by a correspondent who was considered perfectly reliable and trustworthy. It appears, however, to be grossly untrue and without foundation. All the parties interested unite in an emphatic denial of every statement. No charges have been preferred, and no arrest made. Mr. Johns has never had more than a passing acquaintance with Miss Davies, and the two were never associated together in any way. A careful investigation wholly exonerates Miss Davies, Mr. Johns, and Mr. Bartow from all blame.

The story that has gained publicity seems to have been designed by some malicious person for the express purpose of blasting reputation and character, and particularly for wronging an innocent and pure young woman. The attempt will not succeed. The parties concerned stand too high in the estimation of the public to be damaged by such an attack. Their character is too spotless to be tarnished by venomous falsehoods. THE PRESS joins with the friends of the parties accused in vindication of their reputation and character, and in utter denial of the malicious libel that has been put in circulation. Legal steps to secure the punishment of the originator of the libelous fabrication will promptly be taken.

Another Privilege Accorded Y. M. C. A. Members.

Members of the Y. M. C. A., upon the payment of twenty-five cents per week from this time until June 1, will be privileged to bowl without extra charge every Tuesday evening on the Olympia Alleys, Sycamore street. It is hoped that enough members for the bowling section can be secured to give the Association the use of the alleys for at least three or four nights, as the cost per member will be no greater. Membership in the Association costs only $2 a year.

I SUFFERED from a severe cold in my head for months and could get no relief. Was advised to use Ely's Cream Balm. It has worked like magic in its cure. I am free from my cold after using the Balm one week, and I believe it is the best remedy known.—Samuel J. Harris, wholesale grocer, 119 Front street, New York.

Shipping Damaged by the Storm.

DENNISPORT, Mass., April 6.—The recent storm played havoc with the shipping in this vicinity. Seafaring men say it was the worst storm that has occurred in the past twenty years. The schooners Addie, Little Fred and Henry Monteil and a number of small craft are ashore. It is thought they will be gotten off without serious damage. The schooner Lydia, which also went ashore, will prove a total loss. Numerous dwellings were also badly damaged.

Italians Moving on Pittsburg.

CLARKSBURG DEPOT, W. Va., April 6.—Italians are returning in squads from the interior daily on their way to Pittsburg. They decline to explain why they are leaving their work unfinished, or what they expect to do at Pittsburg, but their movement is mysterious and confirms the report that Italians are congregating in that city.

The Order Had the Desired Effect.

NEW LONDON, Conn., April 6.—The recent order of Mayor Tinker to Chief of Police Haven directing that all disorderly houses be suppressed has had a salutary effect. Every place of questionable character is now closed, and nearly all the former proprietors thereof have removed to Norwich.

Here's our card.
It's an easy matter to present a card, but it isn't quite so easy to tell just what a card stands for. Shakespeare asked a very pertinent question when he said, "What's in a name?" There's a good deal in a name; your name is identified with whatever you do; if you are not straightforward and upright in action, your name suffers by it; if you are, it rises in public esteem accordingly. When we present our card we present with it a name which is really a certificate of character. We have endeavored to identify it with enterprise, reliability and fair dealing. You can trust us for telling the exact truth, whatever it may be, because we can afford to do nothing else. We can especially recommend our Spring stock of Shoes.

THE "DEATH WATCH."

A Household Pest Which Makes Uncanny Noises.

Who has not heard the "death watch?" Many a person who has happened to be awake in the stillness of the night has listened to the tick, tick, tick for half a dozen times or more in succession as regular and as natural as the ticking of a watch. Many have regarded the sound with superstitious awe and dread, because everything about it is so mysterious.

The name, death watch, is derived in this way, as a person sitting up with the sick is more apt to hear such sounds, and when they were heard at such times, it was considered an ill omen to the sick one. Some intrepid person dared to brave this messenger of death, and found, instead of the supposed spirit, a guileless, timid little insect. However, the name is still retained, and, no doubt, many still wonder what makes that peculiar sound and why it is made.

FIG. 1.

The little beetle, called anobium, one species of which is represented in Fig. 1, are our most common "death ticks." They are only about one-eighth of an inch in length as can be seen by the line at the side of the beetle. How this ticking sound is produced and what for is very interesting. I can do no better than quote one who saw the operation. He says: "This little beetle produces the loud ticking sound by raising itself upon its legs as high as it can, and then striking the head and under part of the thorax against the substance upon which it is standing, generally five or six times in rapid succession; and it always chooses a substance which produces the most sound. It is evidently a call note from one individual to another, as you very rarely hear one rap without its being immediately answered by another.

Being so small and of a wood color they are quite difficult to find; and then they are as still and sly as a mouse, if the slightest movement is made near them. They are injurious in that they bore in wood, and in this way sometimes injure furniture. They are rarely numerous enough to need attention in this respect.
